THAMES CONSERVANCY,

2-3 Norfolk Street, Strand, W.C.2.

The Conservation of the River Thames was granted to the Lord Mayor of London in 1487, and delegated to 12 Conservators in 1857, the powers being reconstituted in 1894. The Port of London Act, 1908, took over as from March 31, 1909, all rights, powers, and duties of the Conservators in respect of the river below Teddington. In 1932 the various Acts relating to the Conservators were repealed and a consolidating Act (The Thames Conservancy Act, 1932) was passed. The Conservators are also the Drainage Board of the Thames Catchment Area.

TREASURY,

Great George Street, S.W.1.

The office of Lord High Treasurer has for the past two hundred years been in commission. The Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury consist of the Prime Minister and First Lord, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and five Junior Lords. Attached to the Commissioners are a Parliamentary Secretaries, a Financial Secretary, and a Permanent Secretary and staff of officials. In the distribution of duties among the Commissioners, the Prime Minister and First Lord is mainly concerned with the political aspect of public business and the Chancellor of the Exchequer mainly with the financial, though there is no hard and fast distinction between the two aspects. The Parliamentary Secretaries and the Junior Lords perform the duties of Government Whips and the Financial Secretary assists the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his financial duties.

TRINITY HOUSE,

Tower Hill, E.C.3.

Trinity House, the first General Lighthouse and Pilotage Authority in the Kingdom, was a body of importance when Henry VIII. granted the institution its first charter in 1514, inter alia "for the relief, increase and augmentation of the Shipping of this Realm of England." Since that period the duty of erecting and maintaining lighthouses and other marks and signs of the sea has by Royal Charter and Acts of Parliament been entrusted to the Corporation of Trinity House, and until 1874 Masters of the Navy were examined by the Elder Brethren of the Corporation. In the present day, the principal duty of the Corporation of Trinity House, as a Public Department, is the administration of the Lighthouse, &c., Service of England and Wales with certain statutory jurisdiction in regard to lighthouses and other seamarks in Scotland, Ireland, the Channel Islands and Gibraltar, whilst the Corporation are also the chief Pilotage Authority in the United Kingdom, and in their capacity as a private corporation or guild they administer certain Charitable Trusts specifically dedicated to the relief of aged and distressed master mariners, their widows and spinster daughters. The Corporation controls over 60 lighthouses and 43 lightships, and maintains a fleet of 9 steam and motor vessels. The Active Elder Brethren of the Corporation also sit with the Judges of the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice to act as Nautical Assessors in Marine Causes tried in that Court. The Light-house Service of the Trinity House is maintained out of the General Lighthouse Fund, this fund being provided by means of special dues called Light Dues levied on shipping using the ports of the United Kingdom. The accounts are submitted annually to Parliament.

WAR DAMAGE COMMISSION,

Devonshire House, Piccadilly, London, W.1.

Telephone: MAYfair 8866; Telegraphic Address: "Wardacom, Piccy, London."

The War Damage Commission was appointed on March 27th, 1947, to administer Part I. of the War Damage Act, 1947, 4 & 5 Geo. 6, Ch. 12, which had received the Royal Assent on the previous day. The 1947 Act, and two subsequent amending Acts, have now been consolidated in the War Damage Act, 1943, 6 & 7 Geo. 6, Ch. 27. Its operations are related only to war damage to land and buildings, those parts of the Act which are concerned with goods and chattels being administered through the Board of Trade. In addition to the Headquarters in London the Commission has four Regional Offices in the London Civil Defence Region, one in each of the eleven remaining Civil Defence Regions, and one in Northern Ireland. These Regional Offices deal with claims arising in their respective areas.

THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE

THE Supreme Judicial Authority of the Empire is the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, before which appeals may be brought (in the form of a petition to the Crown) from Consular Courts and Courts of Vice-Admiralty, and from the Courts of India and every British Dominion. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council consists of the Lord Chancellor, Lord President, ex-Lords President, the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary (see col. 2), and such other members of the Privy Council as shall from time to time hold or have held "high Judicial Office" within the meaning of the Appellate Jurisdiction Acts, 1876 and 1887. Among the last are included Viscount Hailsham, Viscount Sankey, Viscount Maugham, Lord Atkes, Lord Roche and Lord Clauson. Sir Sydney Abrahams is a member by virtue of §1 of the Judicial Committee Act, 1833, and Sir Madhavan Nair and Sir John William Fisher Beaumont by virtue of §1 of the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1929; and the following Judges from India and the Dominions beyond the Seas (various Acts, 1833-1928):—Sir Lyman Poore Duff (Canada); Sir Isaac Alfred Isaacs (Australia); Chief Justice Sir Michael Myers (N.Z.); Chief Justice Sir John Greig Latham (Australia); Sir George Edward Rich (Australia); James Stratford (S. Africa); N. J. de Wet (S. Africa); H. V. Evatt (Australia); and Chief Justice F. E. Watermeyer (S. Africa).

THE BATTLE OF THE ATLANTIC.

The total number of Merchant Ships lost by enemy action in the Atlantic Ocean was 574, being 1 in every 131 ships that made the Atlantic passage. In the whole war 75,000 ships made the crossing, sailing in 2,200 ocean convoys, the largest of which contained 167 ships in one company. On some days there were as many as 700 ships at sea at the same time, with over 100 warships protecting them, as well as land-based aircraft of the R.A.F., which flew over 100,000,000 miles in 850,000 flying hours.

Escort ships of the Royal and Dominion Navies, with allied navies operating under British control, made some 13,200 separate voyages, each of many days' duration, in all seasons and all weathers.

The great ships of the Royal Navy's Home Fleet also took a hand, sinking the Bismarck and the Scharnhorst when they tried to attack allied shipping, and foiling several early attempts at attack by the Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, and the German big cruisers. Bomber Command aircraft laid thousands of mines in enemy waters and finally destroyed the battle-ship Thiety.

Other Convoys.

In addition to the operations in the Atlantic, 75 convoys, comprising 1,500 merchant ships, were escorted to and from North Russia by the Royal Navy's Home Fleet, which had to provide air as well as sea escort for them.

Coastal Convoys round the United Kingdom amounted to 7,700, comprising in all 173,000 merchant ships.

NAVAL SHIPBUILDING.

In the four years 1914-1918 the number of vessels added to the Royal Navy was 1,654, with a displacement of 1,595,000 tons. From September, 1939, to December 31, 1943, 4,623 naval vessels were completed, with a displacement of 1,695,000 tons. Of this total, major war vessels numbered 634; mosquito craft 1,260, and other naval vessels, including landing craft of all descriptions, trawlers, and other miscellaneous vessels 2,729.

NAVY ESTIMATES.

The net total of the Navy Estimates was £149,399,000 for the year 1939-40. The number of officers and men was 145,000 for 1939-40, and 250,000 for 1940-41. In 1943-44 it was probably 750,000.

No detailed Estimates have been published since the outbreak of War.

ARMY ESTIMATES.

The net total of the Army Estimates was £148,155,000 for the year 1939-40. The number of men on the establishment of the Army, exclusive of those serving in India, was 185,700, an increase of 15,700. Since the outbreak of War "Token" Estimates have been submitted to Parliament.

AIR ESTIMATES.

The Royal Flying Corps came into existence in 1912 with a Military Wing as a unit of the Regular Army and a Naval Wing manned by the Royal Navy. In 1918 the Air Ministry was set up, with a Secretary of State for Air and an Air Council, and the Naval and Military Wings were amalgamated into the Royal Air Force, with the Fleet Air Arm as a Naval Wing. In 1937 the control of the Fleet Air Arm was transferred to the Royal Navy.

The net total of Air Estimates was £208,561,000 for the year 1939-40. Since the outbreak of War "Token" Estimates have been submitted to Parliament.

The Church of England

THE CHURCH ASSEMBLY.

2 Great Peter St., Westminster, S.W.1.

(Hours 10 to 5.)

Sessions of the Church Assembly in 1946—(Provisional dates).—Feb. 25–March 1; June 17–21;
Nov. 11–15.

MEASURES PASSED BY THE ASSEMBLY, 1944 AND 1945.

Reorganization Areas Measure (March 21, 1944).
Emergency Legislation Measure (December 21, 1944).
Incumbents (Disability) Measure (June 15, 1945).

THE CHURCH ASSEMBLY (or "National Assembly of the Church of England") was constituted in 1920, "to deliberate on all matters concerning the Church of England and to make provision in respect thereof." The Assembly consists of three Houses, composed of Bishops, Clergy, and Laity respectively. The first two Houses consist of the Convocations of Canterbury and York, of which the respective Upper Houses form the House of Bishops, and the respective Lower Houses the House of Clergy; the House of Laity comprises representatives of the Laity of the Provinces of Canterbury and York, elected every five years by the Lay members of the Diocesan Conferences, who consist mainly of representatives elected, either directly or indirectly, by members of the Church of England on a roll prepared in each parish.

The Church Assembly is free to discuss any proposal concerning the Church of England, and to make provision in respect of such matters, but where this includes Parliamentary sanction for any alteration contemplated, this authority is to be sought in the manner prescribed by the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act, 1919, often referred to as the "Enabling Act." It is specially provided that any innovation touching doctrinal formulae, or the services or ceremonies of the Church, or the administration of the Sacraments or sacred rites thereof, must be debated and voted upon by each of the three Houses sitting separately, and must then be either accepted or rejected by the Assembly in the terms in which it is finally proposed by the House of Bishops. It is further laid down that the Assembly or any of the three Houses may debate and formulate its judgment by resolution upon any matter concerning the Church, or otherwise of religious or public interest, but the Assembly may not issue any statement purporting to define the doctrine of the Church on any question of theology. None of the powers belonging to the Convocations of Canterbury and York is to be diminished or derogated by the Assembly, which is also prohibited from exercising any power or performing any function distinctively belonging to the Bishops by right of their episcopal office.

Parochial affairs are managed by Parochial Church Meetings of parishioners who are members of the Church of England and by Church Councils elected by such meetings.

General Statistics.—The number of baptisms in 1940 was 370,975, the Easter communicants in the various English Dioceses numbered 2,134,897. The total gross income of 12,556 incumbents was £6,625,883, including £157,686 contributed as Easter offerings. The stipends of the assistant clergy were £1,048,607 (1939). The amount of voluntary parochial contributions in the 43 dioceses of England was £5,887,949 (1939).

Central Board of Finance, 2, Great Peter Street, Westminster, S.W.1.—Receipts in 1944 amounted to £139,060, of which sum Diocesan contributions amounted to £137,913. Below are the principal items of expenditure:—

THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND is Presbyterian in constitution, and is governed by Kirk Sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and the General Assembly, which consists of both clerical and lay representatives from each of the Presbyteries. It is presided over by a Moderator (chosen annually by the Assembly), to whom His Majesty the King has granted precedence in Scotland, during his term of office, next after the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain. The Sovereign is represented by a Lord High Commissioner (appointed each year by the Crown), who receives the sum of £2,000 towards his expenses. The country, for Church purposes, was, prior to the union of the Church of Scotland with the United Free Church of Scotland, which was effected at a joint meeting of the General Assemblies of both Churches on October 2, 1929, divided into 16 Synods and 66 Presbyteries, and there were about 2,800 ministers and licentiates engaged in ministerial and other work. There have since been added: (1) The Presbytery of the Synod of England and (2) The Presbyteries of (a) Northern Europe, (b) Southern Europe, (c) Spain and Portugal, (d) a number of Indian and Colonial Presbyteries, making 86 in all. The number of communicants on the roll (Dec. 31, 1928) was (prior to the union of the Churches) 759,797. The sum of £800,865 3s. 3d. was (apart from Seat Rents levied by Church Authority and amounting to £73,371 6s. 7d.), but including legacies, amounting to £45,230 6s. 9d., raised in 1928 for church and missionary purposes. Within the last 80 years considerably over 500 chapels, at a cost for stipends and supplementary endowments of over £2,450,000, have been endowed and erected into parishes quoad sacra. The parish churches numbered 1,470. There were in addition 245 chapels and mission stations, in all of which worship is regularly conducted. The figures at Dec. 31, 1943, applicable to the Church of Scotland as now re-united after 86 years of separation are:—

Congregations, 2,443; total membership, 1,264,125; Sunday Schools, 3,020, with 246,893 scholars and 31,884 teachers. In 20 Foreign Missions fields there are 385 European Mission Agents (and in addition 173 missionaries' wives, many of whom are doing mission work in the various fields) and 8,000 native agents, evangelists and teachers, including in both cases those of the Women's Foreign Mission.

Until 1560 the Church of Scotland was Roman Catholic, but in that year the Scots Parliament abolished the jurisdiction of the Pope, proscribed the Mass, and ratified a Confession of Faith drawn up by John Knox and other divines. In all essentials the articles of the ancient creeds of the Church were adhered to. Ceremonies were declared to be temporary in their nature, and should be altered when they began to foster superstition. Presbytery was settled in 1590. The restoration of the rights of the Bishops, civil and ecclesiastical was, however, sanctioned by the General Assembly of 1610, and three Scottish Bishops were in that year consecrated in London. Further innovations by King James VI. alarmed the people, and the attempt of Charles I. to impose on the Church a Book of Canons and a Liturgy was met by the National Covenant and the restoration of Presbyterian forms, which culminated in the Westminster Confession of Faith in 1646. At the Restoration the Church again became Episcopal, but in 1690 the Scottish Parliament re-established Presbyterianism. By the Treaty of Union between England and Scotland (ratified by the English Parliament 6 Anne c. 11.) the Church of Scotland was secured in its Presbyterian form of government, and the very first official act of a sovereign of the British Empire on his accession is to take an oath to maintain inviolably this settlement. In 1921 Parliament passed the Church of Scotland Act, 1921, to declare the lawfulness of certain Articles declaratory of the constitution of the Church of Scotland. These Articles were framed with a view to facilitating the union of other Churches with the Church of Scotland. A committee, appointed by the Secretary for Scotland (under the Presidency of the late Viscount Haldane), enquired into the question of endowments, following upon which the Church of Scotland (Property and Endowments Bill) was introduced and was passed into law (15 and 16 Geo. V. c. 33) in 1925. The primary purpose of this legislative measure was to transfer to and vest in the Church of Scotland General Trustees, incorporated under the Church of Scotland (General Trustees) Order Confirmation Act, 1921, the whole properties and endowments belonging to the Church as it then existed, for behoof the latter. Further legislation with reference to these was embodied in The Church of Scotland Trust Order Confirmation Act, 1932, and The Church of Scotland (Property and Endowments) Amendment Act, 1933.

LORD HIGH COMMISSIONER TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND (1945), The Most Hon. the Marquess of Linlithgow, K.G., P.C., K.T., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., O.B.E., T.D. Palace of Holyroodhouse, Edinburgh.

ST. PATRICK'S NATIONAL CATHEDRAL, DUBLIN.

Dean and Ordinary, Very Rev. David Frederick Ruddell Wilson, M.A. (1935)

GENERAL SYNOD.

Consisting of House of Bishops (14) and House of Representatives (viz., 208 clerical and 416 lay).

Honorary Secretaries, Very Rev. R. G. S. King, B.D.; Ven. E. G. Sullivan, M.A., Lt.-Col. J. P. Galbraith, O.B.E., D.L., and R. H. Ryland, B.L.Secretary to the REPRESENTATIVE CHURCH BODY (INCORPORATED 1870), George B. Butler, 52 St. Stephen's Green E., Dublin; Asst. Secretary, D. M. Hudson.
Accountant—J. G. Greene, A.C.A.

By the Act of Union, 1800, the Church of Ireland was united with the Church of England, the Sovereign, as one of its members, being supreme governor on earth. By the Act of 1869 this union was severed, and on Jan. 1, 1871, the Church of Ireland resumed her independent position. The Act of 1869 not only disestablished the Irish Church, but also took away her endowments, nothing being left but the right to the life services of the annuitant Bishops and Clergy (the annuities provided were commuted for a capital sum), the right to claim churches in use for divine service, the right to buy the See and Glebe Houses (with garden and curtilage), and £500,000 in lieu of private endowments.

The supreme governing body of the Church of Ireland is the GENERAL SYNOD, which meets annually.

Subject to the GENERAL SYNOD are 20 Diocesan Synods, which are assisted by smaller elected bodies called Diocesan Councils.

The Bishop of the Diocese is chosen by the clerical and lay members of the Diocesan Synod. The Primate is chosen by the House of Bishops from amongst their own number.

The incumbent of the Parish is appointed by a Board of Nomination, consisting of 7 persons, viz.:—The Bishop, 3 diocesan nominators (2 clerical and 1 lay) appointed by the Diocesan Synod, and 3 parochial nominators (lay) appointed by the registered vestrymen of the parish.

The financial trustees of the Church are the REPRESENTATIVE BODY, composed of the Archbishops and Bishops, 14 clergymen and 28 laymen, chosen by the Diocesan Synods, with 14 co-opted members (clerical or lay). This body holds the property of the Church, and administers its funds, subject to the General Synod.

The first property it held was the capital sum £7,581,075, representing the life annuities of the Bishops and Clergy paid over as commutation money by the Church Commissioners, and also £500,000 compensation for private endowments. The funds, however, in the custody of the Representative Body amount in all to £11,823,583, made up of Private Endowments £325,871, Parochial Sustentation £7,837,994, Episcopal Sustentation £572,087, General Synod Funds £826,367, Miscellaneous purposes £2,261,264.

Since 1869 members of the Church have paid in to the Representative Body a total sum of £13,030,509. The interest of the Diocesan and Parochial Sustentation and other Funds is approximately £387,914. The total amount of assessment for stipend paid by parishes, 1944, was £101,446, and the total amount paid for stipends under Diocesan Schemes was £336,324.

UNDER the general designation of METHODISTS are included all those religious bodies which owe their existence, directly or indirectly, to the efforts of the Revd. John Wesley (born June 17, 1703; died March 2, 1791) and his brother, Revd. Charles Wesley (born Dec. 18, 1707; died March 29, 1788).

THE METHODIST CHURCH.

On September 20, 1932, the Wesleyan Methodist Church, the Primitive Methodist Church and the United Methodist Church, were united and became "The Methodist Church."

The Methodist Church is governed primarily by the Conference, secondarily by the Synods (held in September and May), consisting of all the ministers and of selected laymen in each district, over which a chairman is appointed by the Conference; and thirdly by quarterly meetings of the ministers and lay officers of each circuit. The authority of both Synods and Quarterly Meetings is subordinate to the Conference, which has the supreme legislative and judicial power in Methodism.

President of the Conference (July, 1945-1946), Rev.

Archibald W. Harrison, M.C., B.A., B.Sc., D.D.

Vice-President of the Conference (July, 1945-1946),

Sir George Knight (Bournemouth).

Secretary of the Conference, Rev. Edwin Finch, 1

Central Buildings, Westminster, S.W.1.

President Designate (1946-1947), Rev. R. Newton

Flew, M.A., D.D.

Vice-President Designate (1946-1947), Richard J.

Soper (Barnsley).

Statistics.—In 1945 in association with the Conference in Great Britain and Ireland (at home and abroad), there were 5,551 Ministers, 43,734 Lay Preachers, 1,223,277 Members and Probationers, 20,654 Churches, 15,372 Sunday Schools, 125,826 Sunday School Officers and Teachers, and 939,534 Sunday Scholars.

The latest statistics of Methodism throughout the world (1939) are: Ministers, 54,340; local preachers, 83,263; members and probationers, 11,666,646; Sunday schools, 76,057; officers and teachers, 820,202; scholars, 7,495,834; churches and other preaching places, 94,175.

Wesleyan Methodists, the original Church founded in 1739 by the two brothers. The first Conference, consisting of six clergymen and four laymen, was held in 1744.

The Primitive Methodists sprang up in Staffordshire, in 1810, under the leadership of Hugh Bourne and William Clowes.

The United Methodist Church was formed by the Union in 1907 of three denominations of Methodists which hitherto had been separate from and independent of each other. These were—The Methodist New Connexion, which owed its origin in 1797 to the Rev. Alexander Kilham, one of the early itinerating Wesleyan preachers. The Bible Christians, founded in 1815 by Wm. O'Bryan a Wesleyan lay preacher in Cornwall. The United Methodist Free Churches, which was itself an amalgamation of three different secessions—the Protestant Methodists, formed in 1828; the Wesleyan Methodist Association, which sprang out of a controversy in 1834 concerning the need for a trained ministry; and the Wesleyan Reform Association, founded in 1849, during a great agitation.

The act of union of these three denominations into one took place in London on September 17, 1907, when the first united Conference was held.

METHODIST CHURCH IN IRELAND.

President (1945-46), Rev. Edward Whittaker, Dublin.

THE UNITED CHURCH OF CANADA.

The United Church of Canada is the result of the union (1925) of Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational Churches in Canada. Sec. of General Council, Rev. G. A. Sisco, D.D., Wesley Buildings, Toronto.

INDEPENDENT METHODISTS.

Independent Methodists.—This body is Congregational in its organisation, with an unpaid Ministry. Its first Conference was held in 1805. In 1945 there were in Great Britain 374 Ministers, 9,043 Members, 156 Chapels and 12,136 Sunday School Scholars. Secretary, W. P. Lockley, 36 Princes Road, Sale, Manchester.

WESLEYAN REFORM UNION.

This Union is Methodist in doctrine, Congregational in government, with, if any church desires it, a paid ministry. It is the remnant of the original Reformers expelled from Wesleyan Methodism in 1849. The adherents are mainly in the Midland and Northern counties. In 1945 there were in Great Britain 28 Ministers, 395 Lay Preachers, 11,732 Members, 227 Chapels and 15,984 Sunday Scholars.—President (1945-46), Alderman T. Tomlinson, B.E.M., J.P. General Secretary and Connexional Editor, Rev. W. H. Jones, Wesleyan Reform Church House, 87-89 West Bar, Sheffield 3; Hon. Sec., W. Brookes, J.P., Pittmoor, Sheffield 3.

THE CALVINISTIC METHODIST CHURCH OF WALES.

THE CALVINISTIC METHODIST OR PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF WALES is the only Church of purely Welsh origin, and embraces a very large section of the Welsh-speaking population. Its form of government being Presbyterian, it is a constituent of the Pan-Presbyterian Council or Alliance. It has foreign missions in Assam, India, and in Brittany. Churches and preaching stations in Assam, 1,567.

In 1943 the body numbered—churches, 1,477; chapels and other buildings for Sunday-school branches, 1,672; ministers and preachers, 1,068; elders, 7,172; communicants, 174,664 Sunday-school teachers and officers, 14,671; Sunday-school scholars, 88,618; adherents (including communicants), 239,940. Contributions in aid of the Ministry in 1943, £246,964. For various religious purposes (including the ministry), £497,823. Receipts from various funds, £23,081. One of the features of the Welsh churches is the Sunday-school, which is attended by adults as well as children; Welsh is the language used generally in these schools.

The English branch of the Church has 390 chapels and preaching stations, with 35,547 communicants.

On 18 July, 1933, the Calvinistic Methodist or Presbyterian Church of Wales Act, 1933, received the Royal Assent. By this measure the autonomy of the Church in matters spiritual and the establishment of a Properties Board have been secured. The Church celebrated its bicentenary in 1935.

Moderators of Synods (1945)—South Wales, Principal W. P. Jones, M.A., B.D., Trevecca College; North Wales, Rev. J. Lloyd Jones, B.A., Carnarvon. Moderator of General Assembly (1945-46), Rev. John Thickens, London.

Chief Secretary, Rev. Gwilym Williams, B.A., Glyn Menai, Bangor.

THE INDEPENDENTS AND THE BAPTISTS

The INDEPENDENTS, or CONGREGATIONALISTS, are the most ancient community of Dissenters. In 1831 the majority of their churches were formed into the Congregational Union of England and Wales, incorporated in 1902, and in 1920 nine districts were formed, each under a Moderator. There are 51 county and other Associations in the British Isles, with 4,457 churches and preaching stations; the number of ministers in the British Isles is 2,864. Chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales (1945-46), Rev. A. M. Chirgwin, M.A., D.D. Chairman Elect (1946-47), Rev. F. Chalmers Rogers, M.A. Secretary, Rev. S. M. Berry, M.A., D.D. Office and Publication Department, Memorial Hall, Farringdon St., E.C.4.

The Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion, with 38 chapels and mission stations, is governed by nine trustees with an annual conference of ministers and delegates. Most of the churches are affiliated with the Congregational Union. Secretary, B. Touch. Offices, Huntingdon Lodge, Wormley, Herts.

The BAPTISTS are similar to the Congregationalists in all respects but one—viz., the Baptism by immersion of believers only. Like the Congregationalists, they are for the most part grouped in associations of churches, and the majority of these belong to the Baptist Union, which was formed in 1813. In the British Isles there were, in 1944, 4,206 chapels and 1,928 pastors. The members numbered 368,273. Sunday-school teachers 38,554, and Sunday scholars 292,111. President of the Baptist Union, 1945-6, Rev. A. Dakin, D.T.I., B.D. Sec., Rev. M. E. Aubrey, C.H., M.A. Office, 4 Southampton Row, London, W.C.1.

The Baptist World Alliance (founded in 1905) is a Federation of National Conventions and Unions of the Baptist communion throughout the world. Communicant membership in 70 countries totals over 13,000,000. Pres., Rev. J. H. Rushbrooke, M.A., D.D., LL.D., D.C.L. General Secretary, Rev. W. O. Lewis, Ph.D. Office, 4 Southampton Row, W.C.1.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Founded by General William Booth (b. 1829, d. 1912) in July, 1865, in the East of London.

After the work had spread to many English cities under the name of the Christian Mission, it took, in 1878, its present name, and adopted a military plan of organisation, with a uniform and other distinctive features. From the early 'eighties it spread to many parts of the world, and at the death of its Founder was established in 59 countries. It is now (1943) established in 97 countries and colonies. Since 1890, following the publication of "In Darkest England and the Way Out," written by the first General, the Salvation Army has added Social Work of a varied and comprehensive character to the evangelistic work with which it began and which remains the foundation and principal feature of its activities.

During the war years, welfare work among Service men and women largely increased, and specially trained and equipped teams of Salvation Army officers are doing relief work in devastated Europe and in the Far East.

In December, 1943, the number of Officers, Cadets and Employees was 41,871. Local Officers, Bandsmen, Songsters and Corps Cadets (unpaid) 276,415, languages used 102, Corps and Outposts 17,963, Social Centres and Agencies 1,812, including 481 Shelters and Cheap Food Depots, 219 Industrial Homes, 207 Labour Bureaux, 15 ex-prisoners Homes, 339 Homes for Women and Children, 25 Farms, 174 Slum Posts, 1,046 Day and Industrial Schools. The total raised in the British Isles during "Self-Denial Week" in 1944 amounted to £250,050. Balance-sheets and statements of account relating to the General Funds or to the Social Funds can be obtained, post free, from 101, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.4.—GENERAL, George L. Carpenter, b. 1872; elected General Aug. 24, 1939; assumed Command Nov. 1, 1939.

Other Religious Denominations.

The Greeks (Exarch of Western and Central Europe, Metropolitan of Thyateira, Archbishop Germanos, 8 Dawson Pl., Bayswater, W.2.) have St. Sophia's Cathedral (Moscow Road, W.2) and churches in Manchester, Liverpool, and Cardiff. The Russian Orthodox Church (St. Philip) is at 188, Buckingham Palace Road, S.W.1, and the Serbian at 12 Lennox Gardens. The Armenians have a church in London (S. The General Assembly of Unitarian and Free Christian Churches, has about 300 ministers, 339 chapels and other places of worship in Great Britain and Ireland. Gen. Sec., Rev. Mortimer Rowe, B.A., D.D., 14 Gordon Square, W.C.1.

The Brethren number about 80,000, of whom five-eighths belong to the "Open" body. The Society of Friends (Quakers) consists of 20,472 members in Great Britain, and has 417 places of worship. The total number in the world is about 160,000 (110,000 are in U.S.A. and Canada). Central Offices (Great Britain), Friends' House, Euston Rd., N.W.1, (Ireland), 6 Eustace Street, Dublin. The Oxford Group (Dr. F. N. D. Buchman), Hdqrs., 4 Hays Mews, Berkeley Sq., W.1. The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, U.S.A. (Committee on Publication Office, Donington House, Norfolk St., Strand, W.C.2), has 323 branch churches and societies in Great Britain and Ireland. The Moravian Church (Temp. Offices, Tytherton, nr. Chippenhams, Wilt.) has in the U.K. 41 congregations and preaching stations, with 3,161 communicants. The Catholic Apostolic Church has fine Gothic building in Gordon Sq., W.C.1; the New Church (Swedenborgian), 75 societies, with about 6,700 registered members; the Latter-Day Saints (Mormons) have 82 churches. The Churches of Christ have 165 churches in Gt. Britain and Northern Ireland. The Free Church of England (otherwise called The Reformed Episcopal Church) has 50 churches in England, Gen. Sec., Rev. W. Rodgers, 5 Woburn Hill, Stoneycroft, Liverpool, 13. The Seventh Day Adventists (Hdqs., Stanborough Park, Watford, Herts) have 99 organized churches, 52 companies, and 6,342 members in the British Isles. There is a mosque for Muslims in Melrose Road, South-fields, S.W.18, with resident Imam; at Woking, Surrey, is the Shah Jehan Mosque, and at Cardiff a mosque (restored after air raid damage) each with resident Imam, a mosque is being erected in the garden of Regent's Park Lodge, Park Road, Regent's Park, on land presented to the Moslem community by the British Government.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

In England and Wales there are 4 Archiepiscopal and 14 Episcopal Sees; in Scotland 2 Archiepiscopal and 4 Episcopal Sees; in Ireland 4 Archiepiscopal and 24 Episcopal Sees. In the British Empire there are 39 Archiepiscopal and 142 Episcopal Sees, with 79 Vicariates and 28 Prefectures.

The Catholic Directory estimates the Catholic population of England and Wales (1939) at 2,406,419, Scotland (1939) 614,469, Ireland (Census figures, 1926) 3,111,952. The figures for India (1931 Census figures) are 3,959,616, Ceylon (1921) 449,311, Canada (1931) 4,285,388, Australian Commonwealth (1936) 1,259,720, New Zealand (1938) 223,802, and Union of South Africa 293,383; and the Catholic population of the world is estimated at 398,277,000.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF SOCIAL SERVICE.

Founded in 1919. Represented on the Council are principal voluntary organisations and statutory authorities. Its aims are to develop co-operation between voluntary social service agencies and between statutory and voluntary social services; to provide a clearing house of information on the social services to carry out research on problems in social work; to encourage international co-operation in social service work; to promote, and if necessary to undertake experiments in social service; to provide a headquarters for certain representative provincial organisations; to administer, and advise on the administration of, grants-in-aid from Government Departments and charitable trusts.

The Council provides the secretariat of various consultative groups: Standing Conference of Voluntary Organisations, Women's Group on Public Welfare; Churches Group; Standing Conference of National Voluntary Youth Organisations; National Old People's Welfare Committee, and the National Council for Maternity and Child Welfare.

Services undertaken by the Council include: development of social and cultural activities through local organisations, e.g. Village Halls, Community Centres; Citizens Advice Bureau; publication of Citizens' Advice Notes; provision of a library of publications on social work and other publications on local affairs.

The Council is represented by 13 senior officers stationed in the main population centres of Great Britain.

CERTIFICATES.

OF BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, OR DEATHS.

England and Wales.—Certificates of Births, Deaths, or Marriages can be obtained at the General Register Office, Somerset House, on payment of fees amounting to 3s. 7d., viz., 1s. for search, 2s. 6d. for the certificate, and 1d. for the stamp affixed thereto. (When application is made by post the charges are 5s. 1d.) They can also be obtained from the registration officer having the legal custody of the register book containing the entry of which a certificate is required. Certificates of marriages can also be obtained from the incumbent of the church in which the marriage took place; or from the Nonconformist minister where the Marriage Act, 1898, applies.

Certificates at reduced rates can be obtained for the purposes of certain Acts of Parliament: Friendly Societies Act, 1896, Birth or Death, 1s.; Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, and for purposes of Elementary Education, Birth, 6d.; Savings Banks Act, 1887, Birth, Death, or Marriage, 1s.; National Insurance Acts, 1911 and 1913, Birth, 6d., Marriage, 1s.; Industrial Assurance Companies Act, 1896, and Trade Unions Amendment Act, 1876, death of child under 10 years of age, 1s., but only from the local Registrar.

English Registers.—Birth registration exists at Somerset House from 1837. An index to earlier entries (Births and Marriages) can be consulted at the Society of Genealogists at Chaucer House, Malet Place, London, W.C.1.

Scottish Registers of Births, Marriages, and Deaths.—Parish registers were instituted for these in 1551, but until the Registration of Births, &c. (Scotland), Act, 1854, they were not properly kept in many cases. Extracts may, however, be obtained from them on payment of 2s. 1d. for each entry, but to be valid evidence it must be shown that the registers from which the entries are taken were regularly kept. Lists of the old parish registers may be consulted in the offices of the Registrar-General, H.M. General Register House, Edinburgh, or of local Registrars. These old registers are in the charge of the Registrar-General, and since 1854 local registers have been transmitted to him at stated periods. Registers up to the end of 1919 are now in his possession. There is a general index to the registers which may be searched on payment of 2s. A search of the index of a particular parish is 1s. A fee of 20s. is payable for a search of all the Scottish registers, and 1s. is payable for a search of a particular parish. An extract of an entry may be obtained on payment of 2s. 1d. Extracts of entries are issued at reduced rates for specified purposes as in England. The Registrar-General may permit searches to be made by and extracts to be given gratis to persons unable to pay the fees. The office of the Registrar-General is open on week-days between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Education

England and Wales.

The Education Bill presented to Parliament by Mr. R. A. Butler, President of the Board of Education, on December 15, 1943, and passed into law on August 3, 1944, entirely recast the system of public education in England and Wales. It substituted a Ministry of Education for the Board (which never met), empowered the Minister to raise the school-leaving age from 14 to 15 and eventually to 16, and abolished the division of the Educational system into "elementary, secondary and higher" by substituting a continuous process, local education authorities being responsible throughout. Owing to the lack of the necessary school buildings and of teachers the 15 stage has been postponed until April 1, 1947, and the 16 stage will be brought into operation as early as practicable after that date. The Minister is advised by two Councils and every child is offered the opportunity to pass through primary, secondary and further stages, the secondary stage being designed to give all children over 11 an opportunity to make the most of their natural aptitudes.

School authorities (County Councils and County Borough Councils) are required to provide nursery schools and classes for children from 2 to 5 years before the compulsory stage is reached, and smaller classes are aimed at in primary schools, with the provision of junior grammar and technical schools. Backward children receive special attention and education authorities are instructed to provide meals and milk for the children under their charge.

A special feature of the Act is the institution of continuation schools, at first named "Young People's Colleges," afterwards amended to "County Colleges," where education will be continued up to the age of 18.

Adequate facilities are conferred on Education Authorities to provide playing fields and play centres, and the barrier against married women teachers is removed.

Managers of denominational schools are given approximately the same powers to borrow money as are conferred on local education authorities.

Under the Education Act, 1944, no tuition fees will be charged from April 1, 1945, in primary or secondary schools of any type maintained by public education authorities. Fees may be charged for extra tuition, given in some secondary schools, usually outside school hours, in such subjects as the violin, piano, dancing, or elocution.

Scotland.

In October, 1944, the Secretary for Scotland introduced the Education (Scotland) Bill which will apply to Scotland (with the necessary modifications), the national policy for education provided by the Education Act for England and Wales. Certain other changes that affect Scotland only will also be made in the Bill, which will not be proceeded with until all bodies concerned have considered the proposals and have had an opportunity to make any representations they think necessary to the Secretary of State.

Cost of Education, 1945-46

State Expenditure.

The Civil Estimates for 1945-46 include the amount of £103,955,595 for Education in Great Britain (including £12,466,286 for Scotland). The actual amount for Public Education is £102,832,140, the remainder being for Museums, Art Galleries, Scientific Investigation, etc. Included in this expenditure are Grants to Local Education Authorities £75,594,000 (£58,247,000 in 1944-45), Pensions to Teachers £12,685,000 (£9,939,800 in 1944-45), Grants to Persons other than Local Education Authorities £2,569,010; Scholarships and Maintenance Allowances £1,011,800 (£138,690 in 1944-45), and Grants to Universities and Colleges £5,900,000 (£2,149,000 in 1944-45). The Universities receiving grants in 1945-46 are:—

England.

Birmingham £86,500
Bristol £65,750
Cambridge £118,500
Durham £85,850
Leeds £82,000
Liverpool £98,000
London £675,250
Manchester £93,500
Oxford £106,000
Reading £42,000
Sheffield £58,500

Wales.

Scotland.

Aberdeen £68,000
Edinburgh £117,300
Glasgow £109,700
St. Andrews £64,000

In addition to the grants to Universities, Exeter University College (£19,000), Manchester College of Technology (£15,500), Nottingham University College (£31,500), and Southampton University College (£20,000) in England; and Glasgow Royal Technical College (£17,750) in Scotland figure for Grants in Aid 1945-46. There are also Unallocated Grants:—for General Purposes £2,022,400; for Medical Education £1,000,000; for Teaching Hospitals £500,000; and for Capital Grants £250,000, a total of £3,772,400 unallocated, against £21,656 in 1944-45.

Expenditure from Rates.

In addition to the above expenditure from Taxation a total sum exceeding £116,000,000 in 1944-45 was provided by local education authorities from county and county borough rates. Of this total £99,000,000 represents expenditure in England and Wales (Elementary £75,000,000; Secondary, Technical and Higher £24,000,000); and £17,000,000 that of Scotland (on all branches).

The Burnham Scale.

The Burnham Committee, composed of representatives of Education Authorities and of Teachers, reached agreement on Nov. 8, 1944, as to salary scales for teachers in publicly maintained schools for a three year period from April 1, 1945, to March 31, 1948.

The scales have to be endorsed by the constituent associations of the Burnham Committee and approved by the Minister of Education. When approved they become mandatory on all Education Authorities in England and Wales. The estimated cost, with regard to qualified assistant teachers, including the proposed salary changes and with approximations for certain proposed additional allowances for trained and graduate assistants is £51,500,000 to £52,000,000 per annum. For head teachers, including proposed additional payments for pupils over 15, the annual amount is £16,400,000, a total (for teachers salaries) of over £68,000,000 per annum.

Qualified Assistant Teachers.

Men:—Minimum £300 per annum, rising by annual increments of £15 to £525 maximum.

Women:—Minimum £270 per annum, rising by annual increments of £12 to £420 maximum.

Head Teachers.

There are five salary scales, according to the number of pupils in the school:—

Grade I (up to 200 pupils): Men £570, Women £460; Grade II (200 to 200 pupils): Men £615, Women £500; Grade III (200 to 350 pupils): Men £660, Women £540; Grade IV (350 to 500 pupils): Men £705, Women £580; Grade V (over 500 pupils): Men £750, Women £620.

ARCHITECTS REGISTRATION COUNCIL OF THE U.K., 68 Portland Place, W.1.—Chairman, Sydney Tatchell, F.R.I.B.A.; Registrar, Pembroke Wicks, C.B.E., LL.B., Barrister-at-Law.

The Council, which is set up under the Architects (Registration) Acts, 1923-1938, consists of representatives of all architectural bodies, organisations of kindred professions and the Government departments concerned. It is an offence punishable on summary conviction by a fine not exceeding £50 for an unregistered person to carry on business under any name, style or title containing the word "Architect." To qualify for registration an applicant must have passed one of the Examinations recognised by the Council on the recommendation of the Board of Architectural Education, set up under the principal Act. One half of the annual fee of £1 paid by Registered Architects is devoted by Section 14 of the Act to the provision of scholarships for the assistance of students in architecture of insufficient means.

THE ROYAL INSTITUTE OF BRITISH ARCHITECTS, 66 Portland Place, London, W.1, grants the diplomas, F.R.I.B.A., A.R.I.B.A. and L.R.I.B.A. The R.I.B.A. Board of Architectural Education controls and guides the whole system of higher education for Architects throughout Great Britain. THE BRITISH COUNCIL.

Headquarters, 3 Hanover Street, London, W.1.

The British Council was established in November 1934, at the instance of the Foreign Office supported by a number of other Government Departments, and as the result of representations made to His Majesty's Government over a period of years by the British Diplomatic and other Missions to foreign countries. A Charter of Incorporation was granted to the Council in 1940. Under the terms of that Charter, the Council exists for the purpose of promoting a wider knowledge of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the English language abroad and of developing closer cultural relations between the United Kingdom and other countries for the purpose of benefiting the British Commonwealth of Nations. The Council discharges a wide range of functions, which, in other countries, are carried out partly by direct Government action and partly by semi-official organisations with large Government subventions. It receives a certain number of voluntary donations and subscriptions, but almost the whole of its funds are derived from a grant voted by Parliament and carried on the Foreign Office Vote.

The Powers of the Council are vested in an Executive Committee. The following members of the Government have the right each to nominate a member of the Committee:—The Lord President of the Council; The Chancellor of the Exchequer; The Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs, Dominion Affairs, the Colonies and Scotland; The President of the Board of Trade; The Minister of Education; The Secretary of the Department of Overseas Trade.

The administrative head of the Council is its Chairman, whose appointment requires approval by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

Among the methods adopted by the Council in the furtherance of its objects are the following:—

The formation of new or the encouragement of existing British cultural centres abroad, known for the most part as British Institutes; the encouragement of new or existing Anglophil Societies abroad; the encouragement and, if need be, the formation of British Schools abroad; the encouragement in foreign schools and universities of English studies and, in these institutions and elsewhere, of the English language; the introduction to this country of undergraduate or post-graduate students; and the projection amongst the widest public abroad of a knowledge of all aspects of British life and thought through the medium of a Press service, films, distribution of literature, a scientific and medical department, exhibitions, lectures, concerts and theatrical performances.

Apart from its work overseas, the Council administers in Great Britain a grant voted by Parliament towards the cultural, educational and recreational welfare of allied national and other visitors to the United Kingdom. In co-operation with the Admiralty, War Office and Air Ministry it performs a number of functions on behalf of the Allied Armed Forces in this country. Facilities are also provided for United States, Dominion, Indian and Colonial personnel.

Girls' Public Schools

Secondary Schools.

A Secondary School, as defined by the Ministry of Education (prior to the Education Act of 1944), is a school for pupils who intend to remain for at least four years, and up to at least the age of 16. It must provide a progressive course of general education of a kind and amount suited to an age-range at least from 12 to 17. The Ministry of Education issued annually a list of Secondary Schools recognized by the Ministry of Education as efficient, with the full official name of the school, the place where it is situated, the date of recognition, the fees payable and (in many cases) the examinations taken. A similar list was published for Wales and (with less detail) for Scotland. The list, in the case of England and Wales alone, occupied over 130 pages.

J. E. T. Younger, C.B.

The Red Cross and St. John War Organisation is the joint body set up at the beginning of the late war by the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John to carry out the work of both bodies in connexion with the War. The existence of the War Organisation does not in any way affect the status of either of the two bodies from which it is formed, or their powers, duties and privileges, under charter or by-laws. The objects of the War Organisation are to furnish aid to the sick and wounded to prisoners of war, and to civilians needing relief as a result of enemy action.

The Duke of Gloucester's Red Cross and St. John Appeal (Chairman, Lord Ifffe, C.B.E.), launched at the outbreak of War to provide the money that would be needed by the War Organisation, was closed on June 30, 1945, with a total of £50,000,000. The work of the War Organisation will continue, and the balances in hand are considered to be sufficient to finance its operations arising out of the War and its vast post-War commitments.

The Trades Union Congress was formed in 1868 by the voluntary association of a number of trade unions. Its original membership of less than 120,000 has grown until to-day it has a membership of over 64 million. It formulates through its governing body (the General Council), the main policies of Trade Unionism, and takes part in consultation with other leading economic and industrial bodies, and with Government departments, in topics affecting the lives of wage earners and salaried employees. With the Labour Party it maintains contact by means of the National Council of Labour, on which the General Council, the Executive of the Labour Party, the Executive of the Parliamentary Labour Party and the Co-operative Union have representation. The T.U.C. is affiliated to the World Federation of Trade Unions, and has a seat on the Governing Body of the International Labour Organisation. Its General Council is elected annually by ballot of the delegates attending Congress, exercising voting power on the basis of the membership of their unions.

ENERGY RESEARCH.

On Oct. 29, 1945, Mr. Attlee announced that the Government had decided to set up a research and experimental establishment covering all aspects of the use of atomic energy. This was in accordance with the recommendations of the Advisory Committee. Accommodation was being provided at Harwell Airfield, near Didcot, Berks. Mr. Attlee added that he was advised that the dangers to surrounding areas from the experimental station were negligible. It had been further decided that in view of the importance of this work to the Services Departments the responsibility for research which had hitherto rested with the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research should be transferred to the Ministry of Supply. The Tube Alloys Department, the name by which the technical organisation dealing with the subject had hitherto been known, would accordingly become part of the Ministry. The Department of Scientific and Industrial Research would however, be represented on the Advisory Committee and some of its technical subcommittees. The cost of the research would fall on the Government.

It was later announced that Mr. Attlee, accompanied by Sir John Anderson, in an advisory capacity, would meet President Truman and Mr. Mackenzie King, the Canadian Prime Minister, in Washington on Nov. 12, 1945, to discuss the problems to which the discovery of atomic energy has given rise.

LEPROSY.

The reports received from Medical Missions working amongst Lepers in China, India and other countries encourage hopes that this age-old and world-wide scourge may be abated in the case of children, and thereby eventually of adults, through the rescue of healthy children of leprosy parents from contagion and the special treatment now employed for patients in the less advanced stages of the disease. Besides the application by injection of chaulmoogra or hydrocarpus oil at frequent intervals, improved diet and regular bodily exercise play their part in the treatment of sufferers. One British Society controlling or aiding 77 houses receiving over 12,400 inmates has 12 per cent. of disease-arrested cases, of whom many have been discharged, and over 50 per cent. classed as improved, in addition to 9,600 out-patients, 26 per cent. of whom were claimed as improved.

Leprosy is most prevalent in Equatorial regions, but is found also in some European countries to a moderate extent. It was stated at the annual meeting of the British Empire Leprosy Relief Association (June 29, 1944) that there were 2,000,000 lepers in the British Empire. The Colonial Office sanctioned in 1945 a scheme for Nigeria to cost £50,000 a year for five years. The number affected in the whole world is thought to be about 4 to 5 millions. In some parts of Africa the number of patients is said to be as many as one in 20 of the population, and in India it is stated that there may be over 1,000,000 sufferers, although the figures revealed at the census of 1931 were under 150,000. A children's leper sanatorium in the Himalayas is contemplated.

THE BRITISH COAL MINING INDUSTRY.

The latest annual statistical digest issued by the Ministry of Fuel and Power shows the marked fall in coal production, coupled with increased costs, in recent years, as indicated below.

- (1) = Saleable Coal Produced (Million Tons).
 (2) = Average Number of Wage-Earners on Collieries' Books.
 (3) = Average Output per Wage-Earner (Tons).
 (4) = Average Production Cost Per Ton Disposable Commercially.
 (5) = Decrease (—) or Increase (+) of 1944 on 1939 figures.

Year.	(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)
1939.....	231	766,000	302	16s. 5d.
1944.....	184	710,000	259	33s. 3d.
(5).....	—20%	—7.3%	—14%	+100%

The average number of wage-earners totalling 710,000 in 1944 comprised 284,000 working at the coal face, 266,000 elsewhere below ground, and 160,000 on the surface. Of the production cost figures in column (4) wages alone accounted for 10s. 10d. (1939) and 23s. 8d. (1944).

The average weekly cash earnings of wage-earners throughout the industry rose from £2 19s. 6d. in 1939 to £5 9s. 4d. in 1944, and the average weekly earnings (including allowances in kind) in 1944 ranged from £5 1s. 9d. (Cannock Chase) to £7 8s. (Leicestershire); £5 4s. 5d. (S. Wales and Mon.) and £5 16s. 5d. (Scotland).

PUBLIC HOLIDAYS.

Bank Holidays.

BANK HOLIDAYS IN ENGLAND, WALES, NORTHERN IRELAND AND THE CHANNEL ISLANDS ARE:—Easter Monday, Whit Monday, first Monday in August and first Week-day after Christmas (Boxing Day.)

Banks are also closed on Good Friday and Christmas Day.

The Stock Exchange is closed on Bank Holidays, Good Friday, Christmas Day, and on Jan. 1; and on Saturdays throughout the year.

Custom House and Docks, as Banks: with the King's Birthday (when decreed).

Excise and Stamp Office, as Banks: with Whit Tuesday and Coronation Day, if and when decreed.

Law Offices.—Good Friday, Easter Monday and Tuesday, Whit Monday, Christmas Day, and first week-day after Christmas.

BANK HOLIDAYS IN SCOTLAND ARE:—New Year's Day, first Monday in May and first Monday in August.

Banks in Scotland are also closed on Good Friday and Christmas Day. There are also Spring and Autumn holidays in Edinburgh and Glasgow.

SCOTLAND has special Term (Quarter) Days:—Candlemas, Feb. 2; Whitsunday, May 15 (Fixed date); Lammas, Aug. 1; and Martinmas, Nov. 11; the Removal Terms are May 28 and Nov. 28.

IRE also observes June 29, to commemorate the passing of the new Constitution.

STANDARD GOLD AND SILVER.

Standard Gold contains twenty-two twenty-fourths (carats) of fine gold and two twenty-fourths of alloy; fineness 916.66 or 22 carats. According to the Coinage Act of 1870 a sovereign contains 123.27447 grains standard weight. Between Jan. 1 and Sept. 4, 1939, the market price of gold fluctuated with the dollar-sterling exchange, averaging 148/10½d. per fine ounce during this period. From Sept. 5, 1939, until June 8, 1945, the price at which the Bank of England were prepared to buy gold under the terms of the Defence (Finance) Regulations was 168/- per fine ounce. On June 9, 1945, this price was raised to 172/3d. per fine ounce in consequence of the improved war conditions leading to a decrease in costs of shipment from London to New York.

Bar Gold.—A bar which is considered to be good delivery in the London bullion market must contain approximately 400 fine ounces troy.

Standard Silver consists of thirty-seven fortieths of fine silver and three-fortieths of alloy; fineness 925. The average price of silver per standard troy ounce in the London market during the years 1937–40 was: 1937, 20.07d.; 1938, 19.53d.; 1939, 20.41d.; 1940, 22.29d. From September, 1941, to the end of December, 1944, the price of silver remained at 23½d. per ounce standard. On Jan. 2, 1945, the quotation in the London market was altered from a standard ounce basis to an ounce of 999 fineness basis, the corresponding price to 23½d. per ounce standard being 25½d. per ounce 999 fine.

The "Remedy" is the amount of variation from standard permitted in fineness and in weight of coins when first issued from the Mint.

* Issued on special occasions. † Discontinued.

† By law a shilling weighs one sixty-sixth of 12 oz. Troy; 12 oz. of pure silver would be used in coining 72 shillings of 925 fineness and 120 of 500 fineness.

Nickel Brass is an alloy of copper 79 parts, nickel 1 part and zinc 20 parts.

Bronze is an alloy of copper 95 parts, tin 4 parts, and zinc 1 part, or of copper 95½ parts, tin 3 parts and zinc 1½ parts.

NOTE.—The legal weight of a penny is one-third, of the halfpenny one-fifth, and of the farthing one-tenth of an ounce avoirdupois; the halfpenny is one inch in diameter.

Bank of England Notes are issued for sums of 10s., £1 and £5. As from April 22, 1943, the Bank of England ceased to issue bank notes of denominations of £10 and upwards, and commenced to withdraw those already issued; notes of these denominations ceased to be legal tender as from May 1, 1945.

Treasury Notes.—Under the provisions of the Currency and Bank Notes Act, 1928, Treasury Notes of the value of £1 and 10s. have been replaced by Bank of England Notes and the profits of the whole Note issue paid over by the Bank to H.M. Treasury.

Bank Post Bills were discontinued Sept. 1, 1934.

Legal Tender of Money.—Bank of England Notes of £1 and 10s. are legal tender in Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the payment of any amount; those of £5 are legal tender in England and Wales only. Change cannot be demanded except from the Bank of England. Gold (dated 1838 onwards), if of or above the least current weight, is legal tender to any amount. Silver (dated 1816 onwards), is legal tender for sums up to £2, nickel brass 3d. up to 2 shillings, and bronze (introduced 1860, to replace copper), up to 2d.

Banks and Banking.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

Incorporated in 1694 under Royal Charter, the Bank of England is the central reserve bank of the country and the Government's banker. On behalf of the Government it manages the National Debt, administers the Exchange Control regulations, and manages the Note Issue; the profits on the last named are paid to H.M. Treasury. It is also the banker of British banks and of most overseas central banks; but it no longer undertakes now commercial business. The dividend—12% per annum less income tax—has remained unchanged since 1923.

THE LONDON BANKERS' CLEARING HOUSE.

THE LONDON BANKERS' CLEARING HOUSE, in Post Office Court, Lombard Street (temporary address, during rebuilding, Stafford House, King William Street, E.C.1) is the medium through which Bankers obtain the amount of Cheques and Bills in their hands for collection from other Bankers. The total for the year 1944 was £62,644,564,000, an increase of £5,537,455,000 as compared with 1943. As a result of a war-time change in the working of the Bankers' Clearing House, the Metropolitan and Country Cheque Clearings have ceased to exist as separate Clearings and, together with a large part of the Town Clearing, now form one Single Clearing. The rest of the Town Clearing, namely, that from the Head Offices, and certain City Branches of Clearing Banks, is still carried out separately.—Chairman, Colin F. Campbell; Deputy Chairman, Edwin Fisher; Acting Secretary to the Committee, J. D. Blackburne; Acting Inspector, C. W. Sudbury; Comptroller of the Central Clearing House temporarily established in the Provinces, B. H. Bennett; Chief Inspector, R. F. Chatham.

LIFE ASSURANCE

THE list on the following two pages contains the names of all the more important British Life offices, and of Colonial companies (marked C), all of which transact business in this country.

CLASS OF BUSINESS.—The second column shows whether the company is conducted on the Mutual system whereby the whole of the divisible profit is allotted to participating policy-holders (M), or whether the company has proprietors by whom part (usually a very small proportion) of such profit is received (P). Life offices transacting other insurance business are marked (O) in this column. In such cases the Life funds are kept separately, and are not liable for the claims of other departments. The Share Capital is usually liable for the claims of all branches. Those having an Industrial branch are indicated by letter (I).

FIGURES.—These are taken from the latest annual accounts available at date of going to press, and in the majority of cases refer to annual reports for the financial year ended December 31, 1944.

LIFE FUNDS.—The amounts of these funds, though interesting, are not in themselves a sufficient indication of the financial stability of a company, which cannot be judged unless liabilities are actuarially compared with assets.

PREMIUM INCOME.—The annual premium income is in all cases stated after deduction of the amount paid to other companies for reassuring parts of the risks.

EXPENSES.—The expenses of a Life office include, in all cases where paid, commission to agents. The amount of expenses is less important in itself than in relation to premium income, consequently the percentage of the premium income absorbed in expenses is shown. The average percentage of British offices is about 25%, of which about 5% is expended on commission and 9% on other expenses. This ratio taken by itself is frequently misleading, because, if the proportion of new business is large, the percentage of the total premiums absorbed in expenses may legitimately be higher than where the new business is small. Moreover, where rates of premium are below the average any comparisons of percentage should be considered, with due regard to this feature, a gain to the policy holder through reduced premium being equivalent to an immediate cash bonus.

INTEREST.—The rate of interest earned is important for comparison with the rate assumed in valuing liabilities, since the greater the margin between these rates the greater is the surplus available from this source for bonus. The rate of interest given is before deduction of Income Tax except where marked (N)—net.

VALUATIONS.—The last columns of the table are derived from the valuation returns made by the companies to the Board of Trade. A valuation indicates liability under existing policies, after making allowance for the amounts to be paid and received. It is assumed that deaths will occur in accordance with a mortality table, and that interest will be earned at a certain rate. Various mortality tables are employed, the most used being known as the A, 1924-29, H^m, O^m, H^m(^b) and O^m(^b)—the latter exclude mortality in the first five years of assurance. If a company assumes that it will earn a high rate of interest in the future, the net liability will appear less than if it assumes a low rate, while the liability on account of mortality appears greater by some tables than by others. The position of an office is most satisfactory when a stringent basis of valuation is adopted, because the margin between the calculated and experienced liability is larger and the surplus available for bonuses is greater. The O^m and O^m(^b) tables in conjunction are more stringent than the O^m table alone, the H^m is more stringent than the American, and with every table the lower the rate of interest assumed the more stringent is the valuation. The foregoing remarks, however, do not apply in the case of an office which has adopted a Bonus Reserve Valuation.

FIRE INSURANCE RATES

MOST large fire offices belong to the tariff association, charging identical rates of premium. There are, however, a number of non-tariff offices which claim to assess individual risks independently on merits. Tariff rates of premium per £100 insured against fire for the more common classes of risk are as follows:—

Private Dwelling Houses, built of brick or stone and tiled or slated and in no hazardous proximity, zs. 6d.

Household goods therein, usually zs.

A number of companies issue "comprehensive" policies embracing in one contract all risks incidental to private houses and contents.

Shops and Warehouses, similarly built and circumstanced, in which no hazardous goods are deposited nor hazardous trades carried on, from zs.

Stock and Utensils in trade, fixtures, and household furniture in such shops and warehouses, from zs.

Most fire insurance companies transact accident and miscellaneous business, and if a strong company be selected with a reputation for liberal dealing it will probably be found to the advantage of a householder that he should effect with it all such policies as he may require, in place of dividing them amongst several companies. The "comprehensive" policies previously referred to, combine in one contract protection against damage by fire to the contents of a house, or from burglary, house-breaking, larceny, theft, etc., and insurance against domestic servants' employers' liability, damage from storm or tempest, third party risks, and other hazards. This can usually be arranged for an annual premium of ss. per £100 of the full value of the contents of the house. Fire insurance of the house itself is not included, however, in this estimate, but can be included under the same policy, if desired. The advantage of a policy of this description is that it obviates the inconvenience of payments of small amounts in insurance premiums at different dates, and that in one comprehensive form it supplies protection at a moderate cost for all a householder's ordinary insurance requirements.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR WHOLE LIFE ASSURANCE.

Life assurance may be effected either with or without participation in profits. If without participation, both sum assured and premium remain unchanged. If with participation, a higher premium is charged, and bonuses can either be payable with the sum assured, applied to reduce the premium, or surrendered for cash. A War Clause was included in Policies issued during the War, which limited the benefits in the event of death arising directly or indirectly as a result of hostilities, but most offices were prepared to suspend this Clause on payment of an extra premium. Some Offices may still continue to include such a Clause, as far as cover outside the United Kingdom is concerned, in certain cases.

The premiums shown do not include any addition required for War risk cover.

The ages applicable to the life and endowment assurance (but not the annuity) rates as hereafter given are "next birthday" unless otherwise stated.

AVERAGE ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR WHOLE LIFE ASSURANCE OF £100.

The next table shows the annual premiums payable throughout life for a policy of £100 payable at death, with and without profits. It is not sufficient to judge a life office by premium rates only. An office charging a high premium may give higher bonuses than one charging a low premium, and therefore bonus results and prospects as well as premiums have to be considered. Most offices grant interim bonuses between valuation periods, and it is important to ascertain if this is the case before an assurance is effected, and how such interim bonuses compare with valuation bonuses, especially in cases of endowment assurance. A without profit Insurance provides the maximum amount of cover at the lowest cost and if an Office, as in some cases, is prepared to allow the option of converting the Insurance at any time to "with" profits either for whole of Life or on the Endowment plan, this gives an attractive contract, particularly at the present time.

ENDOWMENT ASSURANCES.

Endowment Assurances are very popular, and are extremely attractive to persons who desire to combine a provision for their dependants, in event of premature death, with the investment of savings for the realisation of a fund for their own personal enjoyment in later life. For the investment of small annual sums there is no medium promising more satisfactory results than an Endowment assurance participating in profits in a good bonus-paying life office. The selection of such an office is all-important, as so much depends upon profit-earning capacity—see first page of Life Assurance

Under endowment assurances the sum assured is paid after a given number of years, or on the attainment of a fixed age. Should the life assured, however, die during the endowment period, the sum assured is paid at death together with any Bonuses attaching under a "with profit" Policy.

The following table shows the annual premiums for various ages at entry, charged by the offices named, to secure £100 at the end of 25, 30 and 35 years, or at death, if previous, with profits.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR ENDOWMENT ASSURANCE OF £100. WITH PROFITS.

LIFE ASSURANCE.

Great Britain and Ireland.

A calculation of the amount of Life Assurance extant on the population of the United Kingdom in the year 1937 is put at £3,465,000,000, made up as under:—

	Premium.	Amount.
6,000,000 Ordinary Life Policies with British Companies (a)	£88,000,000	£2,140,000,000
500,000 Ordinary Policies with Oversea Companies (b)	6,500,000	150,000,000
71,000,000 Industrial Policies with British Companies (a)	55,800,000	1,175,000,000
Total	£150,300,000	£3,465,000,000

This would give an average cover per head of population (47,500,000 in 1937) of £73, but dissection shows that the 71,000,000 Industrial Policies are largely taken out to cover funeral expenses only (average £18 each), while the Ordinary Policies are reckoned (with the exception of about 10 per cent. on women's lives) to be spread over the male, married and gainfully occupied heads of families between the ages of 20 and 64, of whom there were in Great Britain (at the 1931 Census) 8,500,000. These Ordinary Policies average £350 each and in spite of the uninsured represent £240 for every family in the country.

To this total must be added the comprehensive compulsory insurance under the Widows' and Orphans' Pension Acts 1925-1940, the benefits under which were estimated by the Chancellor of the Exchequer of 1924-29 at over £600 capital value per family, so that the average provision made against death is considerable, and as it is supplemented in many cases by House Purchase it compares not unfavourably even with the corresponding figure in the U.S.A., where Life Assurance is taken out in large amounts.

In the U.S.A. ($900 per head) and in most of the British Dominions, totals are far in excess of other countries, Canada having a per caput cover of $680 for every man, woman and child in the Dominion with corresponding figures of £110 in Union of South Africa, £104 in New Zealand, £78 in Australia and £18 in Germany.

ADVICE REGARDING LIFE ASSURANCE.

Apart from the immediate protection thereby given, a life or endowment assurance policy, if effected in a first-class bonus-paying company, provides exceptional opportunity for the remunerative investment of savings. Policyholders can claim relief from Income Tax in respect of life assurance premiums not exceeding in amount one-sixth of their income, where the death risk is involved.

The selection of the office best suited to requirements and likely to produce the best results should be carefully made, but the study of any tables or suggestions is not sufficient to enable persons without technical knowledge to gauge the respective merits of the various companies. There are many good offices, and in the most select class some are better adapted than others for particular purposes, and large sums may be saved or earned by intending proposers through obtaining reliable advice before a proposal is made.

Medical examination is not required by all offices, but in some cases, where this is dispensed with, policies are subject to certain restrictive conditions.

In view of the fact that life assurance premiums are governed by age, it is advisable to produce a birth certificate or other satisfactory evidence of this, when effecting a Policy. It is not always asked for then but is required by the offices before the policy monies are paid.

INQUIRIES.—On receipt of an inquiry containing particulars of requirements (accompanied by 5s.) addressed to "The Insurance Editor, 13, Bedford-square, W.C.1," advice will be given as to the system and policies best adapted to the special requirements. Inquiries should state the date of birth of the person who requires the Insurance. The following are suggested as the policies most likely to be required:—

- Whole Life—With and without profits.
- " " —With limited number of payments.
- Endowment—With and without profits.
- Children's Insurances—Educational, &c.

HOW TO ASSIGN A LIFE POLICY.

When a Policy is assigned by way of Mortgage, it is better to employ a solicitor; but when the Assignment is absolute, i.e., when a Policy is sold out and out, his services may be dispensed with, provided the Title is clear.

The Assignment may be in the following form to comply with English law, but may be subject to slight variation in other parts of the British Isles:—

I, (name)....., of (address)....., in the County of (occupation)....., in consideration of the sum of (pounds)..... paid to me by (name)....., of (address)....., in the County of (occupation)....., the receipt of which I herewith acknowledge, do hereby, as beneficial owner, assign unto the said his Executors, Administrators and Assigns, all that Policy of Assurance on my life for £..... effected with the (name of Company)..... numbered and dated and all monies assured by or to become payable thereunder. And I hereby certify that the transaction hereby effected does not form part of a larger transaction, or of a series of transactions, in respect of which the amount or value, or the aggregate amount or value, of the consideration exceeds five hundred pounds. In witness whereof I have hereto set my hand and seal this day of, 19....

Signed, sealed and delivered by the above-named, in the presence of—

Name
Address

The document must be stamped by the Inland Revenue Stamp Office.

Notice of the Assignment should be sent, in duplicate, to the Head Office of the Company immediately on execution. The Company is entitled to charge a fee of five shillings for acknowledgement, and will retain one copy and the other will be returned with acceptance of service endorsed thereon.

Friendly Societies.

Great Britain.

VOLUNTARY (i.e. Not Including State) BUSINESS.

Acts 1896-1940.

In spite of the growth of Compulsory "Health" insurance since the introduction of the State scheme in 1912, i.e., the Voluntary business of Friendly Societies registered under the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, shows a remarkable expansion, as seen by the following comparative totals—those in ordinary type relate to registered Friendly Societies proper (embracing both "Centralised" societies and "Orders with Branches"); those in italics "Collecting" societies which, although registered under the Friendly Societies Acts, are subject also to the special provisions of the Industrial Assurance Acts, since 1923:—

End of Year.	No. of Societies on Register.	Member-ship.	Assurances or Policies.	Total Funds.
			Thousands.	£000's
1938.....	19,600	149	8,491	151,613	84,837
1913.....	25,475	71	6,783	51,489	11,105

During the year 1938, Friendly societies proper paid out almost £5,400,000 in Sickness benefit and £1,600,000 in Death benefit, while payments of claims on Death by Collecting societies amounted to about £4,600,000.

The principal War legislation affecting societies and their members' rights is, in brief:—

(1) Industrial Assurance and Friendly Societies (Emergency Protection from Forfeiture) Act, which came into force on March 14, 1940, applies to any policy of assurance upon human life—where there is a separate contribution—for a sum assured not over £50 (excluding added bonuses), in force immediately before Sept. 1, 1939, subject to not less than two years' contributions having been paid. The Act prevents the lapsing of such assurances where failure to pay contributions is due to circumstances arising out of the war.

(2) Societies (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, of April 25, 1940, amongst other things, enabled the Chief Registrar—where circumstances attributable to the emergency made it expedient to do so—to give Directions to authorise the suspension of meetings, appointment of officers, and the making of rules, or amendment thereof, by the management committees of societies. The Act also empowered societies, by a simple addition to their rules, to set up a fund for the purchase, on behalf of their members (including persons becoming members for the sole purpose of contributing to the fund), of National Savings Certificates, Defence Bonds and such other securities as may be prescribed. In addition, with effect as from Sept. 1, 1939, the Act over-rides any contrary provision in societies' rules, and gives statutory protection to members serving in any of the Naval, Military or Air Forces of the Crown, whereby they shall not be deprived of their membership by reason of their discontinuance of the payment of their contributions whilst serving, and whilst in such cases benefit may be suspended until such time as the member resumes his contributions within 3 months of determination of his service or of the "period of emergency" whichever is the earlier, upon resuming contributions the member is to be placed in the same position as respects any benefits payable in the future, as he would have been had he not ceased to pay his contributions. The Act, however, did not preclude societies from granting to their serving members better terms than the minimum statutory protection, e.g. some societies are allowing such members to remain covered for death benefit despite suspension of their contributions and sickness benefit.

The latest membership and funds figures for six of the leading old established societies given below show their position as at the end of 1944, except as at the end of 1943 in the case of the two largest centenary Orders which operate through their registered districts and branches, subject to a central body. The first society enumerated below, which is operated wholly on the "Deposit" system of sickness insurance, has, despite its later establishment, far outstripped all other non-collecting societies in expansion of membership and is indicative of the trend during recent years for many entrants to prefer a cash endowment in old age, e.g. 65, instead of remaining insured for sickness benefit throughout life as was the basis of the older "Accumulating" type of society. There are, however, several systems operated on Individual Account lines (apart from the National Deposit Society's method of a uniform contribution throughout membership), one of which known as the "Holloway" is worked by a contribution increasing with each year of attained age after the member reaches age 30, up to age 65:

Building Societies.

Acts 1874-1940.

Building Societies are, with few exceptions, associations incorporated with limited liability under the Building Societies Acts. All Building Societies are required to register their rules and file their accounts with the Registrar of Friendly Societies and Building Societies.

As indicative of the part played by the Building Societies movement in assisting the vast owner-occupier housing expansion since the end of the last war, Building Societies had advanced on mortgage a total of almost £1,600 millions during the 21 years 1919-1939 and, out of a total of some 4 million houses built since 1918, private enterprise—backed substantially by Building Societies' funds—is estimated to have been responsible for close on 3 million, or almost treble the number financed by local authorities during the period.

In each of the six boom years 1933-38 mortgage advances by Building Societies exceeded £100 millions (reaching a peak figure of £140 millions in 1936) but, with the outbreak of war and consequent stoppage of house-building, advances fell to £95 million in 1939, and to only some £75 million in all for the 4 years 1940-1943, but the keen property demand, as prices rose sharply with the approaching end of the war, is reflected in the £53 million advanced in 1944 which was almost double the 1943 figure. During the 5 years 1940-44, the proportion of mortgage balances to total assets showed a reduction from over 92 to barely 71 per cent., with a corresponding increase in the ratio of investments and other assets from less than 9 to fully 29 per cent. of total assets with a marked increase in investments in government securities, while reserves and profit balances rose to over £30 million or the equivalent of 75, 10d. per £ of the total mortgage debt at the end of 1944. During 1944 societies' own investments showed a further marked rise to £199 million and their total liquid funds (including cash and bank balances) exceeded 28 per cent. of total assets at the end of 1944.

Prevailing interest rates offered by societies to investors range from 1½-2½ per cent. on shares and 1½-2 per cent. on deposits (both tax paid).

The primary aim of the Building Societies Act, 1939 (which came into operation on Nov. 1, 1939), was to regularise the practice of accepting "collateral" securities and to fix certain standards as the basis of recognised "builders' pools". The Defence (Building Societies) Regulations of July 2, 1940, empowered societies to demand 6 months' notice for repayment in respect of shares, deposits or loans (other than bank loans and certain deposits under continuing arrangements conforming to the requirements of Part II. of the Schedule to the 1939 Act) but societies have seldom had occasion to resort to this special precautionary provision during the war.

As regards relief to borrowers, those who earlier had joined H.M. Forces were specially protected against hardship by Statute, while, later, serving borrowers have had access to protection of the Courts under subsequent legislation. Moreover, in a large proportion of cases societies have arranged for modification of normal repayments and increase of the mortgage term or alternatively temporary suspension of capital repayments.

THE CENTENARIES OF 1946.

One Hundred Years Ago.

The outstanding event of 1846 was the repeal of the Corn Laws, which decided Britain's fiscal policy for a century, and split the Conservative Party in two, the recalcitrant section (led by Bentinck and Disraeli) opposing the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Peel, who was, however, supported by the Whigs.

On the night that the Corn Bill passed the Lords Peel was defeated in the Commons, and Lord John Russell formed an administration, beginning a period of Liberal ascendancy which lasted almost unbroken for nearly thirty years. An early result was the appointment of Lord Elgin as Governor-General of Canada—a move marking the beginning of responsible government.

The (second) failure of Ireland's potato crop was a disaster which not only weakened the power of Daniel O'Connell, "the Liberator", in favour of the more militant "Young Ireland" faction, but brought Ireland an agony and misery vividly illustrated by the decline in population, which, from 8,300,000, has fallen steadily to little more than half that figure.

The first Sikh War ended with the victory of Soobraon; the worst of the Kafir Wars began; the United States was at war with Mexico; Pius IX became Pope; Louis Napoleon (Napoleon III) escaped from Ham; Australia was being explored; Sir John Franklin had sailed on his last voyage; the "Oregon question" was settled with the United States; the planet Neptune was discovered; the modern sewing-machine was invented; Dickens became first editor of the Daily News; Britain was in the throes of acute railway mania; and Cracow, the last remnant of Poland, was absorbed by Austria.

In literature there were publications by Dickens, Longfellow, Lytton, Leigh Hunt, Horace Smith, Michelet, Proudhon, Freytag, George Eliot, Emerson, Carlyle, Ruskin, Dumas, James Russell Lowell, Edward Lear, George Grote, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Thackeray, and Tischendorf. Dostoevski, Turgenev, and the Brontës made their literary debut; and Elizabeth Barrett eloped with Robert Browning. Mendelssohn's Elifjah was performed for the first time; and Benjamin Franklin and Faraday were adding to scientific research.

The obituaries of 1846 included:—

- March 22. John Liston. Comedian, of whom Charles Lamb said: "There is one face of Farley, one face of Knight, one—but what a face it is!—of Liston."
- June 9. Pope Gregory XVI.
- June 22. Benjamin Robert Haydon. Historical painter of immense courage and energy. His spirit was broken when, at his last exhibition, he had 133 visitors a week whereas "Tom Thumb" (exhibited in the same building) had 22,000.
- July 25. Louis Bonaparte. Sometime King of Holland, brother of Napoleon, and father of Napoleon III.
- July 29. John Owens. Founder of the University of Manchester.
- Aug. 17. Sir Charles Wetherell. The prototype of political "reaction." The hatred he inspired caused the famous Bristol reform riots.
- Sept. 5. Charles Theophilus Metcalfe, Baron Metcalfe. Provisional Governor-General of India (where he carried out noted reforms) and Governor-General of Canada.

Sept. 26. Thomas Clarkson. If Wilberforce was the calph of the anti-slavery movement Clarkson was grand vizier. None realised more clearly the importance of taking pains. He visited six ports, boarding fifty-seven ships, in a search for one witness.

Celebrities born in 1846 included:—

Two Hundred Years Ago.

The '45 ended in the holocaust of Culloden on April 16, 1746. Flora Macdonald assisted the "Young Pretender" to escape from the country, and on August 18, Lord Balmerino ("the most natural brave old gentleman I have ever seen" said Horace Walpole) and the Earl of Kilmarnock were executed on Tower Hill.

The "Broad-Bottomed" administration under Pelham resigned in February, but no alternative government could be formed, and Pelham returned to power after two days, with his ministry strengthened by the inclusion of Pitt, who took office for the first time.

Bicentenaries include the death of:—

- July 9. Philip V. First of the Bourbons in Spain. Caused the War of the Spanish Succession.

 46. Born. Plutarch. Famous for all time as author of Plutarch's Lives.

BUCHAN'S WEATHER PERIODS.

It will be gathered from the meteorological tables published in "Whitaker" until the outbreak of War, that a mean temperature for each day of the year has been formed by taking the average of the observed temperatures on that day during 65 years. These mean temperatures follow in fairly uniform sequence, upwards or downwards, as would appear readily if the figures were used to form a graph or curve. But the uniformity is not precise; there are occasional depressions and elevations. Alexander Buchan, LL.D., who was for many years Secretary of the Meteorological Society for Scotland, formed such a curve of mean temperatures for a station in Scotland, and these periods of non-uniformity have been handed down as his weather-periods. It is to be noted that these refer to the mean of many years, and are not to be regarded as indicating the probable weather for every year. The figures giving the mean temperature at Greenwich for 1842-1905 show similar depressions and elevations which, on comparison, will be seen in some cases to agree with Buchan's periods. Buchan's Cold Periods are Feb. 7-10; April 11-14; May 9-14; June 29-July 4; Aug. 6-11 and Nov. 6-12; and Buchan's Hot Periods are July 12-15 and Aug. 12-15.

COPYRIGHT.

The Government Department dealing with questions relating to literary and artistic Copyright is the Industrial Property Department, Board of Trade, 25 Southampton Bldgs., London, W.C. 2.

The law of copyright is contained in the Copyright Act, 1911, under which copyright subsists automatically, without registration, in every original literary, dramatic, musical and artistic work. The Copyright (Rome Convention) Order, 1933, extends the Copyright Act 1911 to works by citizens of foreign countries in the Copyright Union on conditions set out in the Order.

Voluntary Registration at Stationers' Hall.—Compulsory registration at Stationers' Hall terminated on Dec. 31, 1923, but in the following year the Stationers' Company established a new Register in which Books and Fine Arts can be registered. A copy has to be filed at Stationers' Hall and certified copies of the entries are issued, the fees being 5s. for a Book, and 2s. 6d. for Fine Art; certified copies 5s. in either case. (Office open on Wednesdays only, 11 a.m. to 12 noon, and 2 to 4 p.m.) Such entries are of value in proving the existence of a work on a given date in the case of infringement.

COST OF LIVING IN U.K.

The "Cost of Living" in Great Britain is stated monthly in the Ministry of Labour Gazette and represents the average level of retail prices of certain commodities compared with the retail prices of the same commodities in July, 1914. The commodities include food, rent, clothing, fuel, light, and other miscellaneous items. The figure given by the Ministry of Labour represents the increase over the July, 1914, average.

The Cost of Living figures issued by the Ministry of Labour for the first day of each month from January, 1939, to November, 1945, are stated below:—

In South America	97,800	320,000
In Oceania	3,300,000	10,500,000
Total	14,435,060	539,870,000

GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION.—The British Empire occupies over one-quarter of the known surface of the globe, and its population exceeds one-quarter of the estimated number of the human race. The total area is distributed almost equally over the Northern and Southern Hemispheres, but more than two-thirds lie in the Eastern and less than one-third in the Western Hemisphere.

ETHNOLOGY.—The estimated white population of the Dominions in 1931 was 70,000,000, mainly British and Irish, but partly French, Dutch, and Spanish. The remaining 430,000,000 include 360,000,000 of the native races of India and Ceylon, 40,000,000 black races, 6,000,000 Arabs, 6,000,000 Malays, 1,000,000 Chinese, and 1,000,000 Polynesians, with various other elements, including 100,000 "Red Indians" in Canada.

RELIGIONS.—Of the total population over 210,000,000 are Hindus, 100,000,000 Muhammadans, 80,000,000 Christians (67,000,000 Protestants, 13,000,000 Roman Catholics), 12,000,000 Buddhists, 12,000,000 Animists, 4,000,000 Sikhs, Jains and Parsees, 750,000 Jews, and the remainder with tribal religions.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT.—There is no fundamental law upon which the Constitution of the British Empire rests, but there are three main principles underlying its administration, viz., self-government, self-support, and self-defence. The first of these principles has been applied for many years, and is fully developed in the case of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa. The second principle is equally developed, almost every unit being financially self-supporting, and few requiring aid from the central Government. The third principle is of modern growth, and may be said to be the outcome of the Imperial Conference.

THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.—The origin of the Imperial Conference may be traced to the presence in London (in 1887) of the Prime Ministers of the various Dominions, at the celebrations of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria. Similar gatherings took place in London in 1897, 1902, 1907 and 1911, and in 1907 the title of "Colonial Conference" was changed to Imperial Conference. At the earlier meetings the Colonial Secretary presided, but with the change of title additional importance was given to the assembly by the assumption of the Presidency by the Prime Minister of Great Britain. In 1917 and 1921 the Conference, which was held concurrently with the sessions of the Imperial War Cabinet, was called the Imperial War Conference, and was held under the Chairmanship of the Secretaries of State for the Colonies. In 1921, the Premiers'

Conference, under the Presidency of the Prime Minister of Great Britain, discussed all matters of general interest to the Empire as a whole. The constitution of the Conference, which again met in London in 1923, 1926 and 1930; at Ottawa (for the discussion of economic questions) in 1932; and in London in 1937, is as follows:—The Prime Ministers and other Ministers of the United Kingdom, Canada, Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa, the Secretary of State for India and Burma and other representatives of India. Representatives of Southern Rhodesia attended the Conferences of 1930, 1932 and 1937 as observers; Burma was similarly represented in 1937. The Secretariat of the Conference is provided by the Governments represented.

SELF-GOVERNMENT.

(1) Great Britain and Northern Ireland.—(See pp. 608-9 and pp. 698-700.)

(2) The Indian Empire and Burma.—India [and Burma] are governed by the King as Emperor, acting on the advice of the Secretary of State for India and Secretary of State for Burma, assisted by advisers appointed by the Secretary of State. The latter is responsible to, and represents the authority of, Parliament. Subject to the Secretary of State's direction, the supreme executive authority in India is the Governor-General and his Executive Council, with a Legislature of two houses, the Council of State of 58 members (of whom not more than 13 are government officials), and the Legislative Assembly of 141 members (20 official); and in Burma the Governor, assisted by advisers, while the country is under military administration.

(3) The Dominions, &c.—The position and mutual relation of Great Britain and the Dominions (Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa) were defined by the Imperial Conference of 1906 in the following terms:—

"They are autonomous Communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown, and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

By the passage of the Statute of Westminster 1931 provision was made for the removal of all restrictions on the legislative autonomy of the Dominions.

As regards Newfoundland, in accordance with arrangements made in 1933, to which effect was given by the Newfoundland Act 1933, the constitution of Newfoundland was temporarily suspended, and the government is carried on by a Commission of Government responsible to the Government of the United Kingdom.

Southern Rhodesia is a self-governing colony possessing responsible government, but subject to certain reservations.

(4) The Colonial Empire:

(a) Ceylon.—The Government is vested in a Governor and State Council. The Council is mainly elected.

(b) Colonies and Protectorates, in which the administration is carried on by public officers under the control of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, may be divided into the following groups:

(1) Colonies with an elected House of Assembly and a nominated Legislative Council—Bahamas, Barbados and Bermuda.

(2) Colonies with a partly-elected Legislative Council, the constitution of which does not provide for an official majority—British Guiana, British Honduras, Cyprus*, Malta, Mauritius, Dominica, Grenada, St. Lucia and St. Vincent, Trinidad.

In certain circumstances in British Honduras, Malta, Mauritius, Dominica, Grenada, St. Lucia and St. Vincent, Trinidad, the Governor has reserve powers of legislation.

(3) Colonies and Protectorates with a partly-elected Legislative Council, the constitution of which provides for, or would admit of an official majority. Fiji, Gold Coast, Jamaica, Kenya, Leeward Islands, Nigeria (Colony and Protectorate), Northern Rhodesia, Sierra Leone (Colony and Protectorate), Straits Settlements.

The Legislative Council of Kenya has power to legislate for the Kenya Protectorate.

(4) Colonies and Protectorates with a nominated Legislative Council. Falkland Islands, Gambia, Hong Kong, Nyasaland Protectorate, Seychelles, Uganda Protectorate, Zanzibar.

In all these Councils the Constitution provides for an official majority.

The Legislative Council of the Gambia has power to legislate for the Gambia Protectorate.

(5) Colonies and Protectorates without a Legislative Council. Aden, Ashanti, British Solomon Islands Protectorate, Gibraltar, Gilbert and Ellice Islands Colony, Northern Territories of the Gold Coast, St. Helena, Somaliland.

In all these Colonies and Protectorates, except Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Honduras and the Leeward Islands, the Crown has the power of legislating by Order in Council.

(6) Mandated Territory.—These are areas in which responsibility for government is vested in the Government of an established Power on the authority of a mandate from the Supreme Council of the Allies. Mandated Territories administered under the authority of the United Kingdom Government comprise: Tanganyika, the Cameroons under British Mandate, Togoland under British Mandate, Palestine and Trans-Jordan.

In Trans-Jordan an independent Government under the Amir is recognised within the framework of the Mandatory régime.

(7) Independent States, where native Governments continue under the advice of His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom—Malay States, Brunei, Sarawak and Tonga.

* The Legislative Council of Cyprus is at present in abeyance.

(8) Other Territories.—State of North Borneo, administered under the jurisdiction of the British North Borneo (Chartered) Company. New Hebrides, administered under an Anglo-French condominium.

SELF-SUPPORT.—With but few exceptions the Colonies, Protectorates and Mandated Territories are self-supporting, revenue being raised locally to meet the expenditure. Occasional grants are made by the United Kingdom Government to meet exceptional expenditure, or in aid of administration in the earlier stages of development. Certain capital expenses are also undertaken from time to time by the United Kingdom Government, e.g., the Nigerian purchase, the Uganda Railway, &c. No taxes are imposed on the residents of a Colony by the United Kingdom, as such residents are not directly represented in the United Kingdom House of Commons; this principle, "No taxation without representation," was the mainspring of the revolt in the North American Colonies at the close of the eighteenth century. Since that disastrous attempt to impose taxes without the consent of the taxpayers, the principle, which had for many years been accepted in Great Britain, has become an accepted maxim of British Overseas administration.

SELF-DEFENCE.—The Dominions, generally, provide for the defence of their immediate area, but the general strategical defence of the Empire is undertaken by the United Kingdom Government. Questions affecting general strategical defence are considered and determined by the Committee of Imperial Defence, which co-ordinates the work of the sea, land and air forces. In the Great War of 1914-1918 the Dominions provided Armies or Contingents, which fought in every area and bore a full share of the sacrifices by which victory was achieved. At the outbreak of hostilities in September 1939, every Dominion and Colony expressed its desire to contribute to the utmost to the defence of the British Empire. The land and air forces of the Dominions are maintained at the expense of the Dominions concerned. As regards Colonies and Protectorates, in certain of these, where Imperial forces are maintained, contributions towards military defence are made; in other Colonies and Protectorates not only are they providing within their means for the cost of their local defences, but they are, when possible, contributing to towards the cost of Imperial defence. By the end of 1945 the monetary aid given to the Home Government and to various organizations in Great Britain by Dominion and Colonial Governments, native rulers and various bodies and individuals in the Dominions and Colonies reached a total exceeding £350,000,000.

THE LEGISLATURE.—The Parliament of the United Kingdom is the supreme legislative authority of the Empire. This Parliament has, with the consent of the King-Emperor, delegated its legislative authority to other parliaments constituted by itself, while retaining a general supervision of Imperial affairs other than those relating to the self-governing Dominions. The Secretaries of State for Dominion Affairs and the Colonies are Cabinet Ministers, their active participation in the government of the nations of the Empire decreasing with the measure of self-government accorded to each. Parliament also exercises a control over the affairs of India [and Burma] through a Secretary of State.

THE JUDICATURE.—The Supreme Judicial Authority of the Empire is the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, before which appeals may be brought (in the form of a petition to the Crown) from Consular Courts and Courts of Vice-Admiralty, and from the Courts of India, Burma and certain British Dominions. The Committee consists of such members of the Privy Council as have held or are holding high judicial office, provision being made for the inclusion of representatives of India, Burma and the self-governing Dominions. India, [Burma], and the Dominions have each a judicial system, with judges appointed by the Crown. The Supreme Judicial Authority for St. Britain and N. Ireland is the House of Lords.

EDUCATION.—Under the will of Cecil John Rhodes, scholarships were founded at Oxford, his old University, for students from the British Dominions and Colonies, the United States of America and Germany. British Dominions & Colonies.—Rhodes Scholarships, of the annual value of £400 (tenable at any college at Oxford), are awarded in each State or Province of Canada, Australia, South Africa (where there are also scholarships for certain Schools), in New Zealand, Newfoundland, Jamaica, Bermuda, Rhodesia and Malta (changed as regards Malta from triennial to annual in 1942).

U.S.A.—4 Rhodes Scholarships are assigned annually to each of 8 regions of 6 States each, which are awarded among candidates sent from each State in the region. Since the outbreak of war elections have not been held for the Scholarships from the U.S.A.; or since 1941 from the Empire. Germany.—5 Rhodes Scholarships were awarded annually from the institution of the scholarships until 1914, and from 1929, 2 annually until the outbreak of hostilities in September, 1939. The normal number of Rhodes Scholars in residence together is 202, of whom 100 come from the British Empire, 96 from America. India.—Two Rhodes Scholarships for India were created in 1940; the first scholars are due to be elected before the end of 1945; the regulations have not yet been published. Secretary to the Rhodes Trustees, The Lord Elton, M.A., 17, Waterloo Place, London, S.W.1. Oxford Secretary, Dr. C. K. Allen, M.A., Rhodes House, Oxford.

Statistics issued by the Universities Bureau of the British Empire show that the total number of students from overseas attending Universities and Colleges in the United Kingdom at the beginning of the 1943-44 session was 2,331, of whom there were from Europe, 1,558 (Austria, 153; Belgium, 58; Czechoslovakia, 196; France, 31; Germany, 364; Hungary, 52; Netherlands, 34; Poland, 437; Roumania, 28; Russia, 17; Spain, 21); from Asia, 311; (China, 43; India, 146; Iraq, 18; Palestine, 15; Malaya, 19; Turkey, 30); from Africa, 139 (Egypt, 53; South Africa, 58; West Africa, 113); from America, 181 (Canada and Newfoundland, 34; U.S.A., 38; West Indies, 53; South America, 43; Mexico and Central America, 13; from Oceania, 42; (Australia, 29; New Zealand, 13). There were 1,100 students from abroad in the University of London, 157 at Cambridge and 130 at Oxford.

The Prince of Wales's Scholarships (founded 1932).—Two scholarships tenable for two years at Oxford University by selected students of the University of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Under The Commonwealth Fund (35 Portman Square, London, W.1), established in 1928 by Mrs. Stephen V. Harkness, there are available (in normal times) for candidates of British descent a varying number of Fellowships, of an annual value of approximately $3,000 each, tenable for two years at certain American Universities. For 1939 there were available 34 Scholarships, 24 to graduates domiciled in Great Britain and Northern Ireland; 10 to others of British descent.

FINANCE.—Complete financial autonomy is enjoyed, in fact, by all British Dominions. Customs tariffs are generally lower for merchandise of British origin than for importations from foreign countries. There is no Imperial Debt, but certain obligations of Crown Colonies and Protectorates are met in the early stages of their development by the Central Government, and occasional grants in aid of revenue are also made at need.

OPENINGS FOR BRITISH TRADE.—British firms desirous of offering goods of British origin or manufacture may obtain names and addresses of persons or firms in the British Dominions, Colonies and Protectorates, and also copies of Reports quoted in The Board of Trade Journal, by applying to The Department of Overseas Trade, New Public Offices, Great George Street, London, S.W.1. Exporters who wish to obtain a Government guarantee giving protection against the main causes of loss arising in connexion with overseas trading should apply to The Export Credits Guarantee Department, 9, Clements Lane, Lombard Street, London, E.C.4.

EMPIRE PARLIAMENTARY ASSOCIATION.—The Empire Parliamentary Association was formed at the Coronation of His late Majesty King George V. in 1911, between representatives of the Dominion Parliaments and Members of the Lords and Commons for the purpose of exchanging information and visits between Members of Parliament of the Empire. The Association has a branch in the Parliament of the United Kingdom and of each Dominion, in the Central Legislature of India [the Legislature of Burma], the Parliament of Southern Rhodesia, the State Parliaments of Australia, the Provincial Parliaments of Canada, in Ceylon, Bermuda, Barbados, Bahamas, Jamaica, Mauritius and British Guiana and Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man, making a total of 32 branches.

Secretary and Editor of Publications.—Sir Howard d'Egville, K.B.E., LL.D., Westminster Hall, Houses of Parliament, S.W.1.

THE BRITISH ISLES.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

The British Constitution.

The British Constitution.—The British Constitution is mainly unwritten and customary, but its development is marked by certain outstanding and fundamental laws, of which the principal are Magna Carta (1215), which secured annual Parliaments and the equal administration of justice; the Habeas Corpus Act (1679), securing the liberty of the person; the Act of Settlement (1701), providing for the Protestant succession to the throne; the Act of Union with Scotland (1707); the Act of Union with Ireland (1800); the Parliament Act (1911), which enabled the Commons to pass certain Acts without the concurrence of the other chamber; the Government of Ireland Act (1920); the Irish Free State (Agreement) Act, 1922; and The Statute of Westminster (1931), which exempted the self-governing Dominions from the Colonial Laws Validity Act and asserted their legislative autonomy.

The Sovereign.

The Sovereign.—The throne is hereditary in the British House of Windsor with mixed succession, the sons of the Sovereign and their descendants having precedence of daughters, but daughters and their descendants preference over lateral lines. The Monarchy is constitutional and limited. The King has a right to veto Bills passed by both Houses of Parliament, but in practice his veto is almost obsolete. "The King can do no wrong" is a maxim of the Constitution, and consequently no action for civil wrong will lie against the Crown. A petition of right will, however, enable an injured subject to obtain redress, while, if in the administration of an Act of Parliament a Government department exceeds its rights, a declaration of right may be obtained in an action against the Attorney-General.

The Legislature.

The Legislature.—Parliament consists of two Houses, the Lords and the Commons. Since 1832 reports of proceedings in open session have been published. From 1832-1888 these were known as Hansard's Parliamentary Debates, and in 1943 the word "Hansard" was restored to the title page. Copies of the reports are obtainable from H.M. Stationery Office. The maximum duration of Parliament is five years. The term is reckoned from the date when a new Parliament first meets after a General Election. During the War of 1914-18 the duration of Parliament was extended by successive Acts from 5 to 8 years, but a General Election was held before the end of the term finally prescribed and the Parliament which first met on Jan. 31, 1911, was dissolved on Nov. 25, 1918, fourteen days after the Armistice. At the outbreak of war in 1939 a similar course was followed and the House which first met on Nov. 26, 1935, was not dissolved until June 15, 1945.

(a) The House of Lords consists of peers. A peer may hold his seat by (1) hereditary right, (2) creation by the King, (3) official position or election. English bishops (24), Irish peers (28, with 16 vacancies) elected for life, and Scottish peers (26) elected for duration of Parliament, also sit in the House of Lords.

The powers of the House of Lords were much restricted by the Parliament Act, 1911. Thus, if a Money Bill is not passed unamended by the House of Lords within a month of its being sent up, it becomes law upon the Royal assent being signified. A Public Bill other than a Money Bill will become law without the consent of the Lords if it is passed by the Commons, and sent up to the Lords, in three successive sessions, provided two years elapse between the date of the second reading in the Commons in the first session and the date when it is passed by that body in the third session. Passing a Bill with amendments by the House of Lords is equivalent to rejection, unless the Commons approve the amendments. Any Bill by which the maximum duration of Parliament is increased is excepted from this Act. Members of the House of Lords are unpaid.

(b) The House of Commons.—This body now consists of 640 elected members. By the Representation of the People Act (1885) membership was increased from 558 (at which it had stood since 1801 through the Act of Union with Ireland) to 670, and by a similar Act (1918) it was increased to 707. By the Government of Ireland Act (1920) membership was decreased to 615, Irish representation being reduced from 105 to 13 members. By the Representation of the People Act (1945) 25 new Constituencies were created, making the present total of 640.

Since 1911 members of the House of Commons have received salaries and travelling facilities over the railways, the payment of £400 being increased in 1937 to £600 per annum. A pension scheme for ex-M.P.'s is in force, the contributions from members (£12 per member per annum) amounting in 1943 to £7,318. The Capital Account (Sept. 30, 1943) stood at £26,368.

The Executive.

The Executive.—The Crown (the King in Council) "makes peace and war, issues charters, increases the peerage, is the fountain of honour, of office, and of justice." The Sovereign entrusts the executive power to Ministers of the Crown, appointed on the advice of the accredited leader of the party in Parliament which enjoys, or can secure, a majority of votes in the House of Commons. When a party is in opposition and its leadership becomes vacant it makes its free choice among the various personalities available; but if the party is in office, the Sovereign's choice may anticipate, and in a certain sense forestall, the decision of the party. The prerogative is absolute. It is not for any party to offer a Prime Minister to the Sovereign. This system of Government by Party is the outcome of a gradual constitutional development. Prior to the reign of William III and Mary II the principal officers of State were responsible to the Sovereign alone, and not to Parliament or to the nation at large. Such officers acted sometimes in concert with one another, but more often independently, and the fall of one did not, of necessity, involve that of others, although all were liable to dismissal at any moment. Parties came into existence and gained increased importance as Parliament claimed and secured predominance in affairs of State. The principle of joint Cabinet responsibility has also become established and internal disagreement leads to a change of personnel or resignation of the whole, but the Cabinet has no corporate existence. Ministers are severally responsible to Parliament for their actions, the Cabinet as a whole being responsible for its joint and several administration. Ministers hold their office during the Sovereign's pleasure; they may be dismissed at any moment (see also 1943 edition of WHITAKER'S ALMANACK, "Government by Party."

In 1905 the office of Prime Minister, which had been in existence for nearly 200 years, was officially recognized and its holder was granted a place in the Table of Precedence.

Under the Ministers of the Crown Acts (1937) there are 17 Ministers of the first rank (Cabinet Ministers) of whom not more than 14 may be members of the House of Commons and not less than 3 members of the House of Lords; and 23 Parliamentary Secretaries, of whom not more than 21 may be members of the Commons and not less than 2 of the Lords. Under the same Act the Leader of the Opposition was officially recognized and a salary was assigned to the post.

The Judicature.

The Judicature.—(a) England and Wales.—The laws in England and Wales are administered by judges appointed by the Crown, who hold office for life, and cannot be removed save on petition presented by both Houses of Parliament. Two Courts of Appeal hear appeals from the High Court, the ultimate Court of Appeal from all the courts in Great Britain being the House of Lords. Civil cases arising in London and Middlesex are tried at the High Court in London, but civil cases arising in the country are tried on circuit by judges of the King's Bench at the Assizes. The Chancery division has exclusive jurisdiction to try certain classes of actions. To the County Courts is relegated the duty of trying actions where the sum in dispute does not exceed a certain amount. The County Courts, too, have jurisdiction to try cases arising under certain special Acts of Parliament, e.g., the Workmen's Compensation Act. Bankruptcy cases arising in London are heard in the London Bankruptcy Court; those arising out of London are dealt with in the County Courts.

With regard to criminal law it is a general principle that, except for certain minor offences, every person charged is entitled to be tried by a jury. Courts of criminal jurisdiction in England are: (1) The judges of the High Court sitting at Assizes for the trial of cases out of London; and at the Central Criminal Court ("The Old Bailey"), for the trial of cases arising in and around London. (2) Courts of Quarter Sessions, holden for every county, and formed of justices of the peace, presided over by a chairman. The Recorders of certain cities and boroughs have a jurisdiction similar to that of courts of Quarter Sessions. (3) Courts of Petty Sessions, consisting of at least two justices of the peace or a stipendiary magistrate. (4) The Court of Criminal Appeal has power to hear appeals against convictions and sentences.

(b) Scotland.—Scots civil law is administered by the Court of Session, which is a court of law and equity. The High Court of Justiciary is the supreme criminal court in Scotland. It consists of all the judges, and as a rule it is confined to the trial of serious cases. The Sheriff of the county exercises functions which correspond to those of the English County Court Judges and the Chairmen of Quarter Sessions. Burgh magistrates and justices of the peace have jurisdiction in petty cases.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

ENGLAND AND WALES.—Local Government is carried out by directly elected councils under the general supervision of the appropriate central Department. In London some functions are performed by the London County Council and the remainder by the Common Council of the City of London and 28 Metropolitan Borough Councils. England and Wales outside London is divided into 61 administrative counties and 83 county boroughs. The councils of county boroughs perform all local government functions within their areas, but in the counties there are, besides the county councils, the councils of 309 non-county boroughs, 572 urban districts and 475 rural districts who perform certain functions within their respective areas. In addition, certain minor functions in rural districts are the responsibility of the parish, acting through a parish council or the parish meeting. All these councils are under elected chairmen except borough councils, who are under Lord Mayors or Mayors; all cities are boroughs and the term "city" is one of historical and ceremonial rather than administrative significance. The chief official is, in boroughs the Town Clerk, and elsewhere the Clerk of the Council.

The central Department chiefly concerned with local government is the Ministry of Health, but the Home Office, the Ministries of Education, of Agriculture and Fisheries, of Transport and of Town and Country Planning are also concerned with particular services. The principal local government services are, in order of expenditure, education, public health, housing, roads, police and public assistance (poor law), in addition to trading services (water supply, gas, electricity, buses and trams), &c. In England and Wales the 61 administrative counties, the county of the City of London and the 83 county boroughs are Town Planning authorities.

SCOTLAND.—For Local Government purposes Scotland is divided into Counties and Burghs. There are 33 counties, each with elected County Councils, first established under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889. The larger counties are divided into districts. County Councils elect a Convener (Chairman). In each county there is a Standing Joint Committee consisting of not more than 7 county councillors appointed annually in May by the County Council, a number of Commissioners of Supply, and the Sheriff of the County. Standing Joint Committees are the police authority under the Police Act, 1857, and they control all capital expenditure in the county. No County Council or District Committee can undertake works involving capital expenditure without the consent in writing of the Standing Joint Committee. The District Committee consists of the County Councillors for the electoral divisions and of parish councillors selected by the council of each parish in the district. The District Committee is the local authority for the administration of the Public Health Acts in the County, and it appoints the Medical Officer of Health and Sanitary inspectors. In each burgh there is a town council consisting of a provost or lord provost (mayor or lord mayor), bailies (justices of the peace), and councillors. A town council is elected for three years; it elects the provost or lord provost and the bailies, and appoints a town clerk, treasurer, and other officers. Under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894, in each parish (about 900 in all) a parish council was set up. The number of councillors in "landward" parishes is fixed by the council of the county in which the parish falls; in "burghal" parishes by the burgh in which the parish is situate; joint appointment is made for parishes part landward and part burghal.

CENSUS POPULATION OF THE BRITISH ISLANDS.

Previous to 1801 there existed no official return of the population of either England or Scotland; nor was it till 1831 that statesmen had anything more than a mischievous guide them respecting Ireland, and the census then taken of that country was far from correct. The estimate formed of the English population at various periods, calculated from the numbers of baptisms, burials, and marriages, was in the years—

1570.....4,160,221	1670.....5,773,646
1600.....4,811,718	1700.....6,045,008
1630.....5,600,517	1750.....6,517,035

The first general Census of Great Britain and Ireland was taken in 1801, and since the time named there has been a fresh numbering every ten years (except in 1941), with the following results:

1801.....16,345,646	1871.....31,629,299
1811.....18,509,116	1881.....35,026,108
1821.....20,983,092	1891.....37,800,764
1831.....24,132,294	1901.....41,609,091
1841.....26,854,969	1911.....45,370,530
1851.....27,533,755	1921.....42,769,196½
1861.....29,070,932	1931.....44,790,485½

The 1931 Census showed 80 per cent. of the population of England and Wales as Urban and 20 per cent. as Rural; for Scotland the proportions were 70 per cent. Urban and 30 per cent. Rural.

OTHER CAPITAL LIABILITIES.

These sums consist of various loans contracted for Telegraph and Telephone extension, for the purchase of land for Government offices, &c. On March 31, 1945, these liabilities stood at £142,948,114.

There are also sundry Contingent or Nominal Liabilities which the State is not likely to be called upon to any material extent to discharge. These liabilities consist of Unclaimed Dividends and unclaimed amounts due to suitors or to creditors of bankrupt estates.

Loans Guaranteed by British Government.—The Nominal Net Liability of the State in respect of loans guaranteed by the British Government was stated on March 31, 1945, to be as follows:—Turkish Loan, £956,573; Greek Loan, £37,300; Mauritius Loan, £490,032; Transvaal Loan, £806,965; Sudan Loans, £6,490,700; Local Loans, £429,196,622; Irish Land Purchase Stocks, £107,724,722; Irish Free State Guaranteed 4½ per cent. Bonds, £23,309,788; Ulster Savings Certificates, £459,938; 2½ per cent. of the Austrian Guaranteed Loan, secured on the gross receipts of Austrian Customs and Tobacco monopoly and £2,364,400 for repayment of advance made; Palestine Loan, £3,400,276; Tanganyika Loans, £3,991,765; Nyasaland, £3,056,367; Newfoundland, £16,370,743, and 3 per cent. Redemption Stock (1938-96) to provide compensation in respect of Tithe Rent Charge £63,125,438.

Unrepaid Advances.—Against these Guaranteed Loans there were amounts remaining unpaid on March 31, 1945, on account of Advances made by Great Britain to various Colonial Governments amounting in all to £3,699,259.

Under the Colonial Development and Welfare Act, 1940, the following loans were remitted:—Antigua, £49,962; Basutoland, £85,226; Bechuanaland, £462,308; British Guiana, £779,529; British Honduras, £78,400; British Somaliland, £236,000; Dominica, £150,540; Kenya and Uganda, £5,502,592; Montserrat, £38,750; Newfoundland, £592,230; Nyasaland, £1,277,021; St. Lucia, £8,169; Swaziland, £563,143; Tanganyika, £1,075,508; Transjordan, £255,107.

The Sinking Fund.

Reductions in the Debt by means of sinking funds. The Old Sinking Fund was the application of the surplus revenue of any year for the redemption of debt when so determined by Parliament. In 1875 Sir Stafford Northcote set up the New Sinking Fund, consisting of the balance of the Annual Charge after providing for interest and cost of management. Debt reduction is also made by means of (1) Terminable Annuities, the capital value of which is deducted from the Debt upon the expiration of the term for which the annuities are payable; and by means of the following Funds:—

(2) Victory Bonds Sinking Fund, by means of which Victory Bonds drawn for repayment on Sept. 1 of each year are discharged (£4,699,995 so applied in 1944-45).

(3) Funding Loan Sinking Fund 4 per cent. £5,497,937 applied in cancellation of Debt in 1944-45.

(4) Conversion Loan Sinking Fund 3½ per cent. (in operation when the average daily price is below £90). No issues made in 1944-45.

National Debt Redemption Fund.

This National Fund (of which Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Limited, 8, Bishopsgate, E.C.2, are the Trustees) has no connexion with the Government—it is a purely voluntary movement to lighten the debt burden of posterity, but not that of the present generation unless there is an undreamed-of accession of funds. It was the expressed hope of the original donor that his contribution should serve as the nucleus of a very large fund. The Fund was constituted on November 10, 1927, with a gift of £499,878 4s. 11d. The audited balance sheet, as at March 31, 1945, shows the following net additions during the year:—Net income and Income Tax recoverable £37,821; net profit on investments realised £5,975. The amount of the Fund (investments at cost and cash) on March 31, 1945, was £1,289,410. Under the provisions of Clause 30 of the Finance Act, 1928, the Fund is exempt from Income Tax.

The Elsie Mackay Fund.

The sum of £227,808 was set aside in 1929 by Lord and Lady Inchcape in memory of their daughter, to accumulate for not more than 50 years and then to be applied to reduction of the National Debt. This sum stood on March 31, 1945, at £1,254,973.

Estimated Assets.

Against the External Debt of £1,268,533,533 owing on March 31, 1945, may be set the amounts outstanding in respect of Inter-Governmental Loans by the United Kingdom which arose out of the War of 1914-18, payments in respect of which have been suspended since July 1, 1931. The total owing to Great Britain was stated to be £3,229,495,000 on March 31, 1945.

The Estimated Assets also include the amount standing to the credit of the Exchange Equalisation Account £575,000,000, Suez Canal Shares and various other investments having a total value of £668,543,647 at March 31, 1945.

The Suez Canal Shares.

In Nov. 1875, the British Government authorized Messrs. Rothschild to buy the Khedive Ismail's shares in the Canal Maritime de Suez (176,622 shares out of a total of 400,000) for £4,080,000, the Khedive to receive the dividends thereon until July 1, 1894. Since that date the dividends have accrued to the British Treasury. In 1939-40 the amount received on 274,424 ordinary shares and 79,000 'Actions de Jonissance' was £1,420,958. On March 31, 1945, the British holdings were valued at £32,035,239.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT DEBTS.

In addition to the National Debt there are considerable amounts outstanding as Loans of Local Authorities. These amounts were raised for the provision of baths, cemeteries, dwelling-houses, electricity supply, gasworks, highways, hospitals, markets, parks, sewerage works, transport (tramways, etc.), harbours, docks, canals, waterworks and other purposes. On March 31, 1941, there were outstanding loans in England and Wales to the amount of £1,626,443,000; against this total the sum of £61,053,000 stood at the credit of various Sinking Funds. The total amount of outstanding loans and capitalized annuities in Scotland (on March 31, 1939) was £206,496,738, and in Northern Ireland (on March 31, 1937) £21,524,653.

† The reduction in the expenditure on domiciliary relief during 1940-41 as compared with previous years was mainly due to the introduction of supplementary pensions in August, 1940, under the Old Age and Widows' Pensions Act, 1940. In one month the number of persons in receipt of out-relief fell from 770,052 to 454,155.

SMUGGLING.

During the year ended the 31st March, 1939, 9,611 seizures of smuggled goods were made by the Customs Department. Of these, 3,671 were seizures of tobacco, cigars and foreign spirits. The quantities seized were 2,025 lb. of tobacco and cigars, and 175 gallons of spirits. 2,536 persons were convicted of smuggling, and penalties to the amount of £17,573 recovered.

WIDOWS' AND ORPHANS' AND AGE 65⁺-70 (Contributory) PENSIONS—Acts 1925-43.

The dual scheme of compulsory National (1) Health, &c., and (2) Pensions insurance (with option of certain voluntary, i.e., "excepted employment," &c., classes), embracing roughly the whole wage-earning community, has been in operation as to (1) for 33 years, but (2) only 20 years, and is interlocked by a "common" contribution by workers and employers jointly, augmented by State grants. Under (2) a weekly pension of 10s. is payable (a) not only to an insured man when he reaches age 65, but also to his wife provided she has attained age 60; (b) to an insured woman when she reaches age 60. Such contributory pensions payable up to age 70 are thereafter continued as old-age pensions irrespective of means as applied to other old-age pensioners under the 1908-24 Acts. Benefits are also payable to widows, viz. 10s. weekly, plus 5s. weekly for eldest and 3s. weekly each younger child of school age or under, orphans 7s. 6d. each weekly. The 1929 Act radically extended pension rights to non-contributors, e.g., all widows over age 55 of men of the insured class who died before 4/1/26. The Old Age and Widows Pensions Act, 1940, however, provided that as from 3/8/40 "old-age" pensions (other than pensions to blind persons) and pensions to widows over age 60, may be supplemented, in case of need, by the Assistance Board—vide page 626 for latest Regulations governing Supplementary Pensions.

Owing to the extensive non-contributory benefits, &c., the Pensions scheme falls largely upon the taxpayer to provide the statutory State grants on a rising scale up to £21,000,000 for each of the 4 years 1942-45, thereafter subject to such sums as Parliament decides.

In the year ended 31 March, 1939, employees and employers together contributed £33,283,000 and benefit payments were £24,546,000 to widows and orphans and £21,693,000 for age 60/65-70 pensions.

For the year ended 31 March, 1944^{*} the Exchequer provided, in all, about 75 per cent. of the total estimated expenditure of £164 million under the Contributory, Non-Contributory, and Supplementary Pensions Acts, and about 5,000,000 persons directly benefited from this expenditure comprising the following amounts:—

Pension Acts.	Expenditure.
Contributory.....	£62,000,000
Non-Contributory.....	£55,000,000
Supplementary.....	£47,000,000

The normal Weekly "Pensions" Contributions (met jointly by employee and employer), as laid down in the 1925 Act, were 11d. (men) and 5½d. (women) for the 10 years ended 1945, but, to provide the extra cost of pensions consequent upon the lowering of the pension age from 65 to 60 for insured women as from 1/7/40, the Old Age and Widows' Pensions Act, 1940, increased the weekly contribution by 2d. in the case of men and 3d. in the case of women, thereby raising the normal "Pensions" contributions from mid year 1940 to 1s. 1d. (men) and 8½d. (women), of which the employer pays 6½d. and 3½d. respectively.

The Pensions (Voluntary Contributors) Act, known as the "Black-Coated Workers" Act, 1937, extended pension rights to some two million independent workers—shopkeepers, professional and other persons of small means, i.e. whose total income for year ended 5/4/37 did not exceed £400 (man) and £250 (woman), not more than half unearned—and came into force 3/1/38. "Initial" entrants were eligible, if under 55 on the latter date at weekly contributions of only 1s. 3d. for a man (or 10d. for widows' and orphans' pensions only), and 6d. for a woman. Benefits and general conditions are the same as for the "main" 1925-36 scheme, but "married" women in gainful occupation (subject to the age and income limits) were, as such, able as from 3/1/38, for the first time to insure for pensions. Eligibility to join this scheme after 2/1/39, however, is restricted to entrants under age 40, on a weekly contribution scale increasing with "entry age," viz. up to maxima of 2s. 11d. (man) and 11d. (woman) for age 39.

* Pension age is lower than 65 for insured Women and Widows—vide text.

OLD AGE (Non-Contributory) PENSIONS PAYABLE FROM AGE 70.

Rates of pensions under the Old Age Pensions Act, 1908, as amended 1911, 1919, 1924, and consolidated by the 1936 Act, to persons who have attained the age of 70 years:—

(a) In the case of a claimant or pensioner who is one of a married couple living together in the same house—

Where the "combined" yearly* means of husband and wife (with a deduction not exceeding £78 from the combined means other than earnings) do not exceed—

£52 10s. to £63.	8s.
£63 to £73 10s.	6s.
£73 10s. to £84.	4s.
£84 to £94 10s.	2s.
£94 10s. to £99 15s.	1s.
Where the yearly means exceed £99 15s.	No pension.

(b) In other cases—

Where the yearly* means (with a deduction not exceeding £39 from means other than earnings) do not exceed—

£26 5s.	10s.
£26 5s. to £31 10s.	8s.
£31 10s. to £36 15s.	6s.
£36 15s. to £42.	4s.
£42 to £47 5s.	2s.
£47 5s. to £49 17s. 6d.	1s.
Where the yearly means exceed £49 17s. 6d.	No pension.

† If each is pensionable, each would receive appropriate weekly pension as above.

Under the Old Age and Widows' Pensions Act, 1940, however, the specific weekly pension rates above may be supplemented in case of need in respect of old age pensioners (other than blind persons, q.v. below) by additional allowances payable by the Assistance Board—vide page 626 for latest Regulations governing Supplementary Pensions.

Of the population over age 70 about four in every five now draw old-age pensions.

* Yearly means are calculated under statutory rules and are not necessarily equivalent to cash income.

CARE OF THE BLIND.

In the United Kingdom all persons certified as blind who are 40 years of age or upwards can on registration obtain a pension of 10s. a week if circumstances require it. There are also certain small benefits accorded by the State to registered blind persons including further assistance, if required, from local government authorities and educational facilities and training. Blind persons accompanied by a guide pay one fare for the two passengers and free dog licences are obtainable if the dog is used as a guide for a totally blind person. There are also special rates of postage for literature for the blind and extra rations are issued for poultry kept by blind persons.

Blind Welfare Associations and Local Government authorities are mainly concerned with training for various branches of industry and with research into the causes of blindness. Two Universities have chairs of Ophthalmology. There are Homes of Rest for aged blind at Harrogate and Abergale.

There were 76,507 blind persons in England and Wales on March 31, 1943, of whom 10,252 (13 per cent.) were below the pensionable age, 66,255 (87 per cent.) being above the age. Of the total number 8,322 (11 per cent.) were in employment and 754 were undergoing training, while 64,979 (85 per cent.) were classed as unemployable, either from age or incapacity.

The Braille System.

The Braille system of printing for the Blind owes its introduction to M. Louis Braille (1809-1852), himself blind, who used it in a Paris school from 1829; in 1871 it was adopted by the British and Foreign Blind Association (now the National Institute for the Blind) and since then has been that most generally used. It consists of embossed characters printed on special paper, recognisable by touch, formed by using varying combinations of six dots arranged in three horizontal pairs and each letter is represented by the omission of something from this root form, a special arrangement being made for the letter W, not included in the French alphabet. There are many contractions, as in shorthand, and there are grades of Braille according to the number used, culminating in Braille Shorthand, used by blind stenographers.

NATIONAL HEALTH INSURANCE.

Acts 1911 to 1941.

In general, all males between the ages of 16* and 65 and, following the Old Age and Widows' Pensions Act, 1940, all females aged 16 up to 60 (instead of 65 as hitherto), who are employed within the meaning of the N.H.I. Acts and do not hold certificates of exemption from health insurance are required to insure for both Health insurance and contributory Pensions, but certain classes of person may insure as Voluntary contributors—such entrants after 1937 having the option to insure for either Health or Pensions or both, thus breaking the "interlocked" system hitherto applicable alike to Compulsory and Voluntary contributors.

Although primarily a "joint" employee and employer contributory scheme, the State provides part of the cost of benefits and administration, viz. $\frac{1}{7}$ for men and $\frac{1}{8}$ for women.

By the end of 1942 the number of persons insured under the State Health scheme had reached 24,000,000 (or fully 10,000,000 more than at the end of 1914), and total annual expenditure on N.H.I. now exceeds £50,000,000. For the year ended 31 March, 1939, contributions totalled £37,555,000 (of which £7,696,000 came from the Exchequer), and interest income at £6,379,000 exceeded administration costs by £403,000, while benefits amounted to £18,600,000 in cash (sick, disablement, &c., pay) plus £15,361,000 for medical treatment, or in all £33,961,000, about one-sixth of which total represented additional benefits from valuation surplus allocations.

The following rates of Contributions and Benefits are inclusive of the 1941 Act increases which became operative as from January 5, 1942—coupled with an extension from £250 to £420 in the annual remuneration limit for the compulsory insurance of non-manual workers with a corresponding rise in the remuneration limit determining the exclusion of voluntary contributors from medical benefit. No contribution, however, is payable during periods of unemployment or sickness for a full week or more.

Contribution ("Combined" Health and Pension g.v.)—Weekly, 2s. 0d. men; 1s. 7d. women; (normally shared jointly by employer and employee), of which 11d. (men) and 10½d. (women) is allocated to Health insurance account. Whilst an employee is serving in H.M. Forces the Health insurance contribution is reduced to 4d. (men) and 3½d. (women) paid wholly by employer.

Benefits.—Medical attendance and treatment (except to voluntary contributors whose total income exceeds £420 p.a.), their weekly contribution being reduced by 3d.. Sickness, men 18s., women—unmarried and widows 15s., married 13s., weekly. Disablement, men, 10s. 6d., women—unmarried and widows 9s., married 8s., weekly. Maternity, 40s. Sickness benefit commences ordinarily on the 4th day of incapacity and continues for not exceeding 26 weeks in all, after which Disablement benefit is payable.

At the end of 1941 about 800,000 persons were drawing sick or disablement benefit.

* Since Dec. 1937, working boys and girls between ages 14–16 have been brought into insurance for medical benefit, to bridge the gap between school medical service and the main insurance arrangements, and the joint contribution is 4d. weekly.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE AND ASSISTANCE, Acts 1934 to 1944.

Subject to certain statutory exceptions compulsory insurance against Unemployment (financed jointly by the Exchequer, employees and employers), now covers all male workers under age 65 and female workers under age 60. The latest estimate of "insured" persons (aged 14 and over) on July 3, 1939, in Great Britain and N. Ireland, gave 15,157,000 in the General scheme, and 741,000 in the separate Agricultural scheme started in 1936. Unemployment Assistance (i.e., as distinct from Benefit proper) has been administered, subject to Regulations for assessing the extent of need, by the Assistance Board since January 1935. Benefits reduced by National Economy Act, 1931, having been restored in July, 1934, the allowance for each dependant child also was raised, in Nov., 1935, from 2s. to 3s. weekly. Later, as a result of the Statutory Committee's review of the fund, the weekly contributions (increased in 1931) were reduced for men and women aged 18 and over by 1d. for each party, viz., employee, employer and State, as from 6/7/36, and the "waiting period" (for which no benefit is paid at the start of a continuous unemployment period) was cut from 6 to 3 days, and further reduced to 2 days in 1940. Adult dependant's benefit was raised from 9s. to 10s. weekly, as from 1/4/38. "Additional" days of benefit drawable by men with fairly regular work record during past 5 years (while drawing relatively little benefit) were increased by deducting 1 "additional" day for every 10 days—in place of every 8 days—of benefit already drawn, as from 1/1/38. Thus, subject to at least 30 stamps to his credit for the 2 years prior to date of claim, an unemployed man may draw benefit for 26 weeks or 156 days, and under the "5 years" proviso "additional" days of benefit equal to 3 for every 5 contributions paid, less 1 for every 10 days of benefit drawn in previous 5 years.

The approximate position of the FUND since mid-1934, when the accumulated debt (£105,780,000) was funded is as follows:—

General and Agricultural Schemes Combined.	6 Years to June, 1940. £000's throughout.	3 Years to June, 1943. £000's throughout.
(A) Insurance Account.
Contributions.....	396,151	227,109

Excess of Income....	92,284	194,807
(B) Unemployment Allowances†.....	222,602	14,387

After finally repaying the funded debt by March, 1941, reduced war-time claims have produced a marked increase of annual income over expenditure, and a further increase in the Fund's credit balance from £195 million in June 1943 to £304 million at Dec. 1944.

† Cost borne by Exchequer. Includes administration (except that on separate U.A.B. vote) and Transitional Payments A/c up to March, 1937.

The Emergency Powers Acts, 1939, however, provide for modification or suspension of certain conditions laid down in the main Unemployment Insurance and Assistance Acts consequent upon the war, and the Prevention and Relief of Distress Regulations, 1939, also extend the right to allowances from the Assistance Board to any person aged 16 or over who loses his normal livelihood, e.g., by official evacuation, and is in distressed circumstances due to the war.

A.C.s passed in 1940 provided for further increases in benefits, coupled with a slight increase of contributions, under both the General and Agricultural schemes, the maximum weekly amount payable in benefit to a claimant under the latter scheme also being raised.

On a 4/38, chauffeurs, lorry-drivers, &c., and domestic workers in Govt. depts., Local Authority and military institutes, hospitals, clubs, &c. (not carried on for gain) were brought into the "General" scheme. Further, on 2/9/40, Unemployment Insurance was extended to non-manual workers earning from £250 up to £420 p.a. and, as from 2/9/41, such persons are also included in the scope of the Unemployment Assistance scheme.

The Current Weekly Rates of Contributions (shared in equal thirds by Employee, Employer and the State), and the relevant Weekly Benefits under the latest "Increase of Benefit" Act as from Nov., 1944, for (A) main GENERAL scheme and (B) AGRICULTURAL scheme are :—

Total Weekly Payment to Claimant for Benefit under Agricultural scheme (B) not to exceed 54s.

UNEMPLOYMENT ASSISTANCE AND "SUPPLEMENTARY" PENSIONS.

(referred to below as "U.A." and "S.P." respectively.)

The new Code of Regulations which came into force in January, 1944, governs both U.A. and S.P. and provides for the following SCALE RATES (weekly)—those in brackets being the relevant S.P. rates where they differ from the U.A. rates:—

		Additions for Dependents.
(a) Married Couple.....	31s.	(35s.)	Aged 21 and up..... 15s.
(b) Applicant living alone or as responsible householder.....	18s.	(20s.)	" 16 and under 21..... 12s. 6d.
(c) Any other applicant:			" 16 " " " 16..... 9s.
Aged 21 and up.....	15s. 6d.	(17s. 6d.)	" 8 " " " 11..... 7s. 6d.
Under age 21.....	12s. 6d.		" under 8..... 6s.

In case of (c) if applicant has no dependant and lives with parent, son or daughter who is householder with weekly income of £6 or other appropriate amount, the scale rate is 7s. 6d. (with no rent addition).

To arrive at the resultant U.A. or S.P. allowance in assessing the applicant's needs, an addition for "Rent" is made to the appropriate "Scale Rate" i.e., the actual net rent paid (where not unreasonably) or, if applicant lives in someone else's household a fair share of the rent paid by the householder—such share normally may not be less than 2s. 6d. nor more than 7s. per week. From the appropriate "Total Scale Allowance" is deducted the applicant's "Available" Resources after disregarding a certain amount in accordance with the relevant "Earnings" Rule, e.g., for U.A. the first 5s. (minimum) up to 10s. (maximum) weekly for the earner's personal requirements, and for S.P. a uniform 10s. 6d. weekly of earnings of applicant (and of husband or wife, as case may be).

The latest SCALE RATES, &c., under the new comprehensive code of Regulations (covering both Unemployment Allowances and Supplementary Pensions) came into force in January, 1944.

The Pensions and Determination of Needs Act of July, 1943 (1) extended eligibility for Supplementary pensions to Widow pensioners under age 60 if drawing an additional allowance for a child as part of their normal pension, and (2) raised the limits of Capital resources which claimants for supplementary pensions, unemployment assistance and blind persons' allowance may possess from £300 to £400, and reduced the "notional" or assumed weekly income per £25 of capital from 15s. to 6d., i.e. in assessing the amount of supplementary pension or allowance, after disregarding the first £25, each further £25 of a claimant's capital resources is treated as producing 6d. interest weekly, but the new £400 capital maximum continues to exclude, as hitherto, any new money lent by a claimant to the Government during the War up to a limit of £375.

By the end of 1943 there were on the Register about 1,270,000 Supplementary Pension cases covering the needs of, in all, approx. 1,475,000 old age and widow pensioners, and for the year ended 31 March, 1944, the cost of Supplementary Pensions was estimated at £47 million, or almost double the cost for the year 1941.

* Women aged 60 and under 65 ceased to be insurable under the Unemployment Insurance Acts as from July 1, 1940, consequent upon the lowering of the Contributory Pension age for women.

At end of 1943 Unemployment Allowances on Register numbered only about 25,000, including 7,000 special war distress cases.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

Acts 1925-1943.

Dissolution of Parliament in 1945 stopped progress of the late Government's "Industrial Injuries" Bill which was designed to replace the system of Workmen's Compensation under the above Acts by the new scheme of insurance against industrial injury set out in Pt. II of the "Social Insurance" White Paper, g.v.

Compensation benefits under the main 1925 Act, as augmented by the 1940 Supplementary Allowances Act, and further raised by the Nov., 1943 (Temporary Increases) Act—which continues in force until the end of 1946—are as follows:—

Fatal Accident—Dependant with children—maximum £700. Dependant in other cases—maximum £400; minimum £300.

Non-Fatal Accident—40s. per week. If married, raised to 50s. per week after 1st 13 weeks., with additional 5s. per week for each child under age 15. In partial incapacity cases these rates are subject to slight scaling down.

Subject to over-riding maximum total weekly payment equivalent to seven-eighths (or where no children, two-thirds) of the worker's loss in weekly earnings.

INDUSTRIAL AND PROVIDENT SOCIETIES.

Great Britain.

A society established to carry on industry, business or trade may be registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts, 1893-1928, and obtain the privileges of incorporation with limited liability, provided that it restricts the share holding of any member, other than a registered society, to £200.

With a view to putting an end to abuses in recent years of the main 1893 Act, the provisions of Section 8 of the "Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act, 1939" affected some societies of the investment trust and property type which were thereby required to effect their removal from registration under the Industrial & Provident Socs. Acts, and their conversion to registration under the Companies Act, 1929—with consequential adherence to the prospectus provisions of the latter Act—free of the normal Companies registration fees and stamp duties on paid-up share capital. Thereafter, registration under the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts is restricted to bona-fide "Co-operative" organisations, including societies "conducted mainly for the purpose of improving the conditions of living, or of otherwise promoting the social well-being, of members of the working classes"—which, in fact, was the principle underlying the old Industrial and Provident Acts when they were framed, although this principle was not laid down in any special terms in the Acts. At the end of 1937, 5,693 registered societies had, in all, 9,283,000 members and funds (omitting inter-society investments) of £281,507,000.

"Clubs" * and "Agricultural Trading and Small Holding Societies" account for 40% and 20% respectively of the total number of registered societies, but their combined membership represents only 10% of that of all I. and P. Socs. By far the most important group is that comprising the Co-operative movement of "Retail, Wholesale & Productive Trading Societies" which account for the greater part of the total membership and funds of all I. and P. Socs., and the following particulars (taken from the Registrar's provisional Statistical Summary) briefly indicate the extent of their activities for 1938:—

"Retail" General Supply Stores.—1,068 societies; 8,316,000 members with £153,747,000 share capital; £261,101,000 sales during the year; surplus on year for distribution £30,829,000 (of which £5,138,000 was disbursed as share interest, and £23,545,000 as dividends on sales—an average of 1s. 10½d. in the £). Since 1928 these societies have more than doubled their membership and their share capital.

Wholesale and Productive Societies.—Sales by the three main Wholesale societies (excluding goods invoiced by the Joint society to its two parent societies) £153,518,000; sales by 117 Productive societies £7,980,000.

Distribution and Production†.—Employees and salaries and wages (1938) exceeded 300,000 and £40,000,000 respectively—of which totals about two-thirds are in respect of Distribution, and one-third Production†. The outstanding Productive operations in the Retail societies are baking and slaughtering, and in the Wholesale societies, milling.

* In addition, Clubs (Wkg.-Men's) under the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, exceed 2,200 in number with a total membership of some 800,000.

SOCIAL SECURITY AND NATIONAL INSURANCE.

THE WHITE PAPER.

A White Paper [Cmd. 6550] presented to Parliament by the Minister of Reconstruction in September, 1944, contained a declaration of national policy in which it was stated that the first duty of a Government is to protect the country from external aggression and the next to secure the general prosperity and happiness of the citizens by fostering the growth of the national power to produce and to earn, with its accompanying opportunities for increased well-being, leisure and recreation, and by the prevention of individual poverty resulting from those hazards of personal fortune over which individuals have little or no control.

The White Paper amplified an announcement made in Parliament in July, 1944, that a Ministry of Social Insurance was to be set up to administer the whole field of Social Security, to cover Unemployment, Sickness and Accidents, and to provide Old Age and Widows Pensions, Family Allowances for Children and Death and Maternity grants.

There will be a compulsory scheme of National Insurance with unified administration, the scheme including everybody. Under the scheme the population will be divided into VI classes:—

- I. Employees.
- II. Self-employed.
- III. Housewives.
- IV. Adults who do not earn.
- V. Children.
- VI. Those over working age.

Those below working age will be provided for by Family Allowances; those of working age by Insurance Benefits; those beyond working age by Retirement Pensions.

The new Ministry will be responsible for an expenditure of about £700,000,000 per annum and will take over duties at present performed by the Ministries of Health and of Labour and the Home Office.

The Ministry of Social Insurance Bill was read a third time in the House of Commons on November 14, 1944, the Government accepting an amendment of the title of the new Ministry, which is now known as The Ministry of National Insurance.

It is anticipated that Public Assistance, as administered by Local Authorities, will disappear and will be replaced by the work of the new Ministry acting through local offices.

The Social Insurance Scheme is in two parts, Part I setting out the Government's proposals for Social Insurance generally (except for Industrial Injury) and for Family Allowances; Part II containing the Government's proposals for replacing the existing system of Workmen's Compensation by a new scheme of Industrial Injury Insurance (which is published as a separate White Paper [Cmd. 6551]).

CLASSIFICATION OF THE POPULATION.

The population of Great Britain was estimated in September, 1944, at 47,500,000 persons, classified as shown on p. 631, on the basis of occupational distribution at the Census of 1931, with allowance for estimated changes up to September, 1939. It includes in Classes I and II those above pensionable age who are assumed to be still working.

UNIVERSALITY.

Everyone in the country will be covered by the scheme, irrespective of age, sex, income or occupation. Those in Class III (Housewives) are covered by their husbands' contributions. Those in Class V (Children) and Class VI (over working age) are not contributors. Professional and business classes, shopkeepers, people of independent means and those working for themselves are included in Class II or Class IV as contributors and will be entitled to all benefits except Unemployment Pay. The main Benefit rates are shown in tabular form on the following page.

INCOME AND EXPENDITURE.

The scheme will be financed by grants from the Exchequer and by weekly contributions from persons over age 18, and for those in Class I (Employees) the contributions will cover the benefits under the Industrial Injury Insurance Scheme as well as those under the Social Insurance Scheme. The weekly rates proposed are shown in tabular form on the following page.

THE DIRECTORATE OF ARMY WELFARE SERVICES.

The welfare of the Army is controlled by the Directorate of Army Welfare Services of the War Office, which is under the Department of the Adjutant-General to the Forces. There are three main branches:—

A.W.S.1.—(General Welfare—Canteens, Clubs and Hostels, Legal Aid, Soldiers' Personal Problems, etc.) A special section deals with officers' welfare.

A.W.S.2.—(Entertainment, Broadcasting.)

A.W.S.3.—(Army Newspapers—syndication of news services, supply of recreational books, periodicals, newspapers.)

Under direct control of A.W.S.1 and 3, respectively, are the Army Comforts Depot, Reading, and the Services Central Book Depot, Artillery House, Handel Street, W.C.1.

All army welfare officers at home hold voluntary and unpaid appointments. Their organisation is based on the organisation of the Territorial Army Associations, viz:—

(a) A command welfare officer (Colonel) is appointed in every command and attached to the staff of the G.O.C.-in-C. He is assisted by an administrative staff and by county and local army welfare officers (men and women), throughout the command.

(b) County and local army welfare officers (men and women) are appointed by Territorial Army Associations in consultation with G.Os. C.-in-C. commands. Each county association appoints a welfare committee to assist these officers in their welfare work. County welfare officers control and co-ordinate the work of the local welfare officers under them. Local army welfare officers help units, and soldiers and their families, in their town or district in a number of ways, and work in close co-operation with the local statutory and non-statutory bodies.

The organisation of Army Welfare Services in the field and at overseas stations varies considerably. In active theatres of operations, the organisation is usually based on that of the War Office, with a Director of Army Welfare Services and appropriate staff at G.H.Q., down to districts, sub-districts, areas, formations, etc. Army welfare officers overseas are paid.

NATIONAL SAVINGS CERTIFICATES.

The total number of Savings Certificates sold from their first issue in February, 1916, to June 30, 1945, was 3,274,296,264 (excluding Certificates of the Conversion issue), representing a cash investment of £2,520,860,616. The amount, including accrued interest, remaining to the credit of investors in National Savings Certificates on June 30, 1945, was approximately £1,808,300,000. In 1944-45 £286,245,351 was subscribed and £66,798,904 (excluding interest) was repaid.

First Issue (cost price 15s. 6d. and ten-year maturity value 26s.), Feb., 1916, to March 31, 1922; may be retained until September 30, 1945, and thereafter in the absence of further notice with interest after the tenth year at 1d. per month per Certificate.

Second Issue (cost price 16s. and ten-year maturity value 26s.), April 1, 1922, to Sept. 30, 1923; may be held until September 30, 1945, and thereafter in the absence of further notice, on similar terms.

Third Issue (cost price 16s. and ten-year maturity value 24s.), Oct. 1, 1923, to June 30, 1932; may be held until September 30, 1945, and thereafter in the absence of further notice, with interest after the tenth year at 2d. per period of three months per unit Certificate until each unit is worth 28s. Then at the rate of 2½d. per completed period of three months until it is worth 33s., and thereafter, in the absence of further notice at the rate of 1d. at the end of each complete month.

Conversion Issue (cost price 16s. and ten-year maturity value 24s.), in exchange for First Issue, January 18 to April 30, 1932. Terms of extension beyond ten years as for Third Issue.

Fourth Issue (cost price 16s. and eleven-year maturity value 23s.), on sale from August 2, 1932, to May 31, 1933. After 11th year 2d. is added at the end of each period of 3 months until the value is 29s.

Fifth Issue (cost price 16s. and twelve-year maturity value 23½s.) on sale from June 1, 1933, to February 28, 1935. After 12th year 4d. is added at the end of each period of 6 months until the value is 29s.

Sixth Issue (cost price 15s. and ten-year maturity value 20s.) on sale from March 1, 1935, to November 21, 1939. After 10th year 3½d. is added at the end of each period of 6 months until the value is 27s.

Seventh Issue (cost price 15s. and ten-year maturity value 20s. 6d.) on sale from November 22, 1939.

£1 Issue (cost price £1, ten year maturity value 23s.) on sale January 11, 1943.

The normal maximum holding of National Savings Certificates by an individual is 500 of the ordinary issues and 250 of the £1 issue.

Note.—Savings Certificates may be bought in single documents representing 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 10, 25, 50, 100 15s. units and 1, 5, 10 or 50 £1 units.

The Societtes (Misc. Provisions) Act, 1940, enables any registered Friendly or Industrial and Provident Society to set up a fund for the purchase, on behalf of members contributing thereto, of National Savings Certificates or such other Government securities as the Chief Registrar may prescribe.

WAR SAVINGS TOTAL.

The total of small savings raised from the opening of the War Savings Campaign in November, 1939, to August 14, 1945, was £3,651,869,779, made up as follows:—National Savings Certificates, £1,420,336,196; Defence Bonds, £835,284,642; increase in balances due to depositors in Post Office Savings Bank and Trustee Savings Banks, £1,396,248,941.

SAVINGS BANKS.

Post Office Savings Banks.—On Dec. 31, 1944, there were approximately 19,000,000 active deposit accounts in the Post Office Savings Banks, with the sum of £1,493,914,000 due to depositors. On Dec. 31, 1944, Government Stock to the amount of £897,470,000 stood to the credit of holders in the books of the Post Office Savings Banks. Any sum from one shilling to £500 may be deposited, and interest is allowed at 2½ per centum per annum. A depositor may have more than one account. There is no limit to the amount which may stand to his credit, but he may not deposit more than £500 in the aggregate in any year.

In 1943 the Average Amount due to each Depositor in Active Accounts was £71 12s. 2d. (E. & W.), £51 3s. 2d. (Scotland), and £65 17s. 8d. (N. Irl.).

Trustee Savings Banks were started in the early years of the 19th century by public-spirited men who recognised the importance of individual thrift to the well-being of the Community. Their aim has always been to improve the facilities for thrift and to increase the recognition of the importance of wise spending and wise saving. They are not conducted for private profit, and their sole concern is to offer to the public the best service and the most convenient and remunerative method of saving compatible with sound administration and the greatest possible degree of security. They combine security, which is inseparable from a close connexion with the State, with the freedom which can only come from independent management. They are directed by local voluntary Trustees and Managers, whose duties are set out in Acts of Parliament and in Rules certified by the Registrar of Friendly Societies. They are subject to Government supervision, and are also inspected on behalf of the Trustee Savings Banks Inspection Committee, a statutory body which submits an Annual Report to Parliament.

Trustee Savings Banks, with their partners in the National Savings Movement, are actively engaged in the campaign for War Savings. Moneys deposited in these Banks are directly assisting the national effort, and their total contribution to date of all forms of War Savings is £273,000,000.

On Nov. 20, 1944, there were 4,260,788 active accounts in the Trustee Savings Banks. The total assets of the Banks amounted to £606,157,944, which included £526,803,351 due to depositors in the Ordinary and Special Investment Departments, £64,758,954 Stocks and Bonds held for depositors and £14,595,639 representing the accumulated surplus of the individual Trustee Savings Banks throughout the country. Information about these Banks and their offices, numbering 744 (principal and subordinate) in October, 1945, can be obtained from the Trustee Savings Banks Association, Tavistock House South, Tavistock Square, London, W.C.1. England and Wales.—The estimated value (including subsidies) for 1940-41 was £400,000,000, and for 1942-43 £530,000,000.

Scotland.—The estimated value of livestock, crops, fruit and vegetables raised 1938-39 (latest available) was £40,000,000 (exclusive of subsidies).

Northern Ireland.—Estimated value (as above) for 1938-39 £15,000,000 (exclusive of subsidies).

CAUSES OF THE FOOD SCARCITY.

A former Minister of Food (Col. J. J. Llewellyn) stated (June 18, 1945) that the factors which caused the scarcity of food were, in order of importance:—

- I. Lack of men on the farms owing to the call-up for the Allied Armies.
- II. Scarcity of fertilizers in producing countries owing to lack of shipping for transporting purposes.
- III. Disastrous droughts in Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, South America and the Caribbean area.
- IV. Vastly increased demands because, as soon as a man became a soldier, sailor or airman he needed much more food than he had consumed as a civilian.
- V. Because of urgent needs in the liberated countries of Europe, where production had declined under Nazi domination.

NOTES.—When the yield of wheat per acre differed from the average for the 30 years 1892-1921 by less than one-tenth of a bushel, the year has been noted as "Average." When the difference was between 0.1 and 0.5 bushel, the year has been noted as "Slightly above (or below) average"; when between 0.5 and 1.5 bushels, as "Decidedly above average" or "Deficient"; when between 1.5 and 2.5 bushels, as "Good" or "Bad"; when between 2.5 and 3.5 bushels, as "Very good" or "Very bad"; and when above 3.5 bushels, as "Extremely good" or "Extremely bad."

FISHERIES.

The quantities and values of sea fish of British taking landed in Great Britain in 1938 (exclusive of salmon) are shown in the following table. The total catch was 41,156 tons less than in 1937, and 125,322 tons less than the record catch of 1913. Representing the 1913 catch by 100, the catches during 1932-38 were respectively 83, 80, 80, 85, 89, 93 and 89. The total value in 1938 was £659,205 more than in the previous year.

In 1944 the quantity of fish of British taking landed in England and Wales was 3,444,905 cwt. (172,245 tons) valued at £10,066,231, against 15,532,692 cwt. (776,635 tons) valued at £12,233,209 in 1938.

The Number of Fishermen (1931) in England and Wales was 26,945, with 18,472 in Scotland. In 1936 there were, in Gt. Britain 48,693 regular and 6,081 occasional fishermen—total 54,774.

INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION (1935)—GREAT BRITAIN.

For the fifth quinquennial Census of Production, completed in 1938, particulars relating to the year 1935 were collated for 123 industrial divisions, viz. 109 "manufacturing or processing" trades carried on by private enterprise, and 14 other (non-factory) trades or services.

The following summary, embracing all firms furnishing returns, shows the average number of employees (excluding out-workers) in the categories indicated for the fifth (1935) census, with comparative totals for the fourth (1930) census:—

Nearly all the industrial groups comprising factory trades showed increases for 1935 on 1930, but such increases were more than offset by reductions in the non-factory trades, notably "mines and quarries" which alone account for almost one-half the totals for non-factories. Since 1935, however, substantial contraction has occurred in certain industries, notably "textile," while others have shown some expansion, e.g. "coal mining," "quarrying," "iron and steel," and "general engineering."

The following particulars show for the years 1935 and 1930 the estimated approx. :—

(1) Total Gross Output Values (viz. total value of goods made and work done) in £ millions.

(2) Total Net Output Values (viz. after deducting cost of materials and fuel used, and payment, for work put out to other concerns) in £ millions.

There is a Central Canal Committee under the chairmanship of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of War Transport to advise him on questions of policy affecting inland waterways and to co-ordinate the work of six Regional Canal Committees which have been reconstituted and strengthened to ensure that canals and canal facilities are worked as a unit and that their resources as a whole are utilized to the greatest advantage; to survey traffic possibilities and to make sure that traffic conveniently water-borne is allocated as far as possible to the canals, and generally to organize the effective operation of the canals and the efficient working of craft.

FUEL AND POWER.

The appointment of a Fuel and Power Advisory Council was announced in the House of Commons on Nov. 14, 1944, to consider and advise upon questions, referred from time to time by the Minister to the Council, concerning the development and utilization of the fuel and power resources of the country in the national interest.

Electricity and Gas.

Electricity.—The production of authorized electricity undertakings rose from 24,372,000,000 units in 1938 (10,100,000 consumers) to 36,942,000,000 units (10,500,000 consumers) in 1943.

Gas.—Gas manufactured in 1938 amounted to 317,640,000,000 cubic feet, in addition to 29,621,000,000 cubic feet bought from coke ovens. In 1943 the production was 347,851,000,000 cubic feet, with 46,992,000,000 cubic feet bought from coke ovens.

British Oil.

The British Oil Control Board reported in September, 1944, that 78,000,000 gallons of British oil had been produced since the outbreak of War in 1939, production from the 238 wells in operation being at the rate of 26,000,000 gallons per annum at the time the report was issued.

JOINT STOCK COMPANIES.

On Dec. 31, 1938, there were 147,861 Companies on the Register (E. & W.) with paid-up capital £5,542,800,000; 9,775 (Scotland) capital £447,800,000, and 1,753 (Northern Ireland) capital £45,500,000, a total of 159,329 with a paid-up capital £6,036,100,000.

In all, 3,175 Companies (including 365 by Court order) were wound up in England and Wales during 1938.

BANKRUPTCIES.

England and Wales (1938).—The number of debtors adjudicated bankrupts was 3,024, with liabilities £6,711,000, and assets £1,787,000; of compositions 33, with liabilities £176,000, and assets £44,000; of administration orders for deceased debtors' estates 48, with liabilities £109,000, and assets £27,000. In addition, there were 1,663 assignments, compositions, &c., under deeds of arrangement, with liabilities £3,380,000, and assets £1,579,000.

Scotland (1938).—The number of sequestrations in Scotland was 122, with liabilities £517,000, and assets £41,000.

Northern Ireland (1938).—The bankruptcies numbered 33, with liabilities £27,000, and assets £8,000; deeds of arrangement 17, with liabilities £45,000, and assets £26,000; arrangements under the control of the Court 21, with liabilities £59,000, and assets £30,000.

EXTERNAL TRADE (GREAT BRITAIN AND NORTHERN IRELAND)

IN statistics of Trade, the term TOTAL TRADE refers to the whole volume of Imports (including such as are temporarily retained and afterwards exported), and to the whole volume of Exports. The term NET TRADE includes only Imports for consumption in the country receiving them, and Exports of home produce or manufacture. Imports are taken at their CIF value (which includes the Cost of the merchandise and the charges for Insurance and Freight), whereas Exports are taken at their FOB (free on board) value, which includes only the Cost of the merchandise delivered to the exporting ship. Exports have an added value by the time they reach their destination, having become loaded en route with Insurance and Freight. They leave the country of origin with an FOB value and arrive with an acquired CIF value.

ROADS AND ROAD VEHICLES.

The total mileage of public roads in Great Britain is approximately 180,527 miles, of which 154,566 are in England and Wales and 25,961 in Scotland. The cost of maintenance, improvement (widening, etc.), and new construction in 1914-15 was £18,800,000, and in 1936-37 approximately £68,000,000. The roads of Great Britain have been classified by the former Ministry of Transport, and out of the total mileage of 180,527, 27,545 (approximately) have been included in Class I, and 17,634 miles (approximately) in Class II.

Highway Authorities.—Under the Local Government Act, 1929, county councils in England and Wales, became (from April 1, 1930), the highway authorities for all roads in rural districts and all classified roads (i.e. Class I and Class II Roads) outside the county and metropolitan boroughs. The borough and urban councils are the highway authorities for roads other than county roads which lie within their areas. In Scotland similar provisions have been made. As from April 1, 1937, in England and Wales (May 16, 1937, in Scotland) the Minister of Transport became the Highway Authority for 4,500 miles of road in Great Britain. These roads are known as Trunk Roads, and the Minister is responsible for their maintenance and improvement.

The total gross receipts from the taxation of road vehicles between December 1, 1938, to November 30, 1939, amounted to £36,795,041. The number of mechanically-propelled vehicles for which licences were current at any time during the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1938, was 2,938,485, while licences in respect of private and hackney horse-drawn vehicles numbered 7,607 on Nov. 30, 1939. The average receipt in respect of a whole year licence was £9. 4s. 6d. for cars taxed on horse-power; £1 17s. 6d. for motor bicycles; £27 5s. 6d. for internal combustion and steam-driven goods vehicles; £19 8s. 6d. for electric goods vehicles; and £55 14s. 6d. for motor hackneys.

The Road Fund.—The motor licence duties (see col. 1), apart from the portion due to the Exchequer under the Finance Acts, 1926 and 1934, were paid into a Road Fund until the close of financial year 1936-37, when the liability of the Exchequer to transfer licence duties, apart from the Exchequer share, to the Road Fund ceased. Amounts are now paid into the Road Fund from moneys provided by Parliament. Grants are made from the Road Fund to highway authorities towards the cost of maintenance, improvement and construction of roads and bridges. During the year 1938-39 the grants from the Road Fund amounted to £20,628,809, in 1939-40 £12,000,000 and in 1940-41 £8,000,000. The expenditure on trunk roads was reduced in 1940-41 by £500,000 and on new construction and improvements by £1,000,000. The Fund had a balance of £5,485,000 at the end of the Financial Year 1940-41 as against £1,000,000 in 1939-40. Under the Local Government Acts, 1929, the grants hitherto made out of the Road Fund towards the maintenance of classified roads in London and the county boroughs (England and Wales) and large burghs (Scotland), and of unclassified roads in counties, were discontinued as from April 1, 1930 (May 16—Scotland), and a sum corresponding to the amounts paid in respect of these grants for the year 1928-29, together with an additional contribution was paid out of the Road Fund towards the block grants to local authorities for which the Acts provide.

TRAMWAYS, TROLLEY VEHICLES, &c.

The total mileage of tramways and light railways open in Great Britain on March 31, 1938, was 1,008. The total receipts in 1937-8 were £12,936,328, the working expenses £10,480,289, and the net receipts £2,456,039, the total paid-up capital being £67,837,039. 2,357,470,918 passengers were carried.

The mileage of trolley vehicle routes open for traffic was 445, the number of passengers carried being 496,860,916.

These figures exclude the tramway and trolley vehicle undertakings of the London Passenger Transport Board, the approximate length of which was 175 miles of tramways and 198 miles of trolley vehicle route on June 30, 1938.

* The world's first signal box was built at Corbett's Lane Junction, Southwark, in 1839 (London & Greenwich Railway) and was called the "Lighthouse".
The world's largest signal box—the Grand Central Terminal, New York, 700 levers (in reality slide handles) is the largest ever grouped in one signal box. Victoria Central signal box (Southern Railway) contains 225 lever all-electric locking frame.

Percentage of Total Holders:—All Stocks all Railways:—

63.3 £500 or under.
36.0 £500 to £10,000.
0.7 over £10,000.

The total number of stockholdings of the four British railway companies is 1,137,000 divided as follows:—L.N.E. 402,000; L.M.S. 396,000; Southern 181,000; G.W. 158,000.

Capital:—The financial importance of the Railway industry in Great Britain can be gauged from the Capital Expenditure of the 4 great Railway Companies and London Transport, which in the aggregate amounts to £1,300,000,000. Britain's largest private undertaking. Railway Capital has never been remunerated at a high level. In 1913—one of the best years—the net revenue was only 4 per cent. of the Capital Receipts; for 1943 the percentage was 3.7.

Railway Employees.—Number employed: Males 668,145; Females 135,000. The following are the new rates of pay agreed between the railway companies and the three unions and cover rural areas, Industrial Districts and London. Leading porters from £4 6s. 6d. to £4 9s. 6d.; Ticket collectors from £4 14s. 6d. to £4 17s. 6d.; Signalmen according to Class from £4 8s. 6d. to £5 16s. 6d.; Guards from £4 11s. 6d. to £5 0s. 6d.; Firemen from £4 13s. 6d. to £5 7s. 6d.; Drivers £5 13s. 6d. rising to £6 6s. 6d.; Salaried staffs are to receive minimum increases of from £10 to £15 a year with an increase in war advance of £6 10s. 6d. These rates were finally agreed to in August, 1945. Women clerks—Class 1 is increased by 5s. per week; Class 2 is increased by 3s. 6d. per week. The whole of increases, Male and Female, will increase expenses by £15,500,000 per annum.

The First Motor Omnibus Service to be run in this country was between Helston and The Lizard in Cornwall. Started in 1903.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS IN GT. BRITAIN.

Year 1944.	Killed.	Seriously Injured.
Passengers.....	157	500
Servants.....	220	2,300
Other Persons.....	92	122
Trespassers and Suicides.....	309	61
Total.....	768	2,983

The most notable railway accidents in which 20 persons and over were killed in Great Britain since 1840 are as follows:—Dec. 24, 1874, Shipton-on-Cherwell G.W. 34 killed—Derailment. Dec. 28, 1879, Tay Bridge, N.B. 68 killed—Bridge failed. June 12, 1889, Armagh, G.N.I. 80 killed—Collision. May 22, 1915, Quintinshill, Caledonian 227 killed—Collision. Dec. 10, 1937, Castle Cary, L. & N.W. 35 killed—Collision. Nov. 1940, G.W. Norton Fitzwarren 36 killed—Ran into trap. Dec. 30, 1941, L.M. & S. Eccles 23 killed—Collision. Sept. 30, 1945, Bourne End, Hertfordshire 42 killed—Fouled points.

There are 4,360 Public Road Crossings in Great Britain and all but 200 are provided with gates and are attended. 50 persons were killed and 17 injured in using these crossings. As a comparison the U.S.A. possessed at the end of 1941, 232,322 public crossings and accidents at these crossings were 1,880 killed and 6,140 injured during that year.

VANDALISM ON RAILWAYS.

Vandalism on British Railways during 1944.—Over 25,000 carriage windows smashed. 45,000 blinds removed, stolen or destroyed. 20,000 window-frames stolen or destroyed. Over 13,500 seats damaged by slashing and many of the removable cushions stolen. 13,000 luggage racks rendered useless. More than 3,500 mirrors stolen or smashed. On the L. & N.E. alone an average of 2,400 electric light bulbs were broken or stolen every month. (These facts were given by the Parliamentary Secretary, Ministry of War Transport.)

Thefts from the four big railway companies during the period of nine months ended September, 1944:—G.W. £335,474; L. & N.E. £525,990; L.M. & S. £887,538; Southern £109,288. Total 4 Cos. £1,758,290.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL AND HIRE OF RAILWAYS DURING WAR PERIOD AND BEYOND, AND FINANCIAL RESULTS TO STOCKHOLDERS.

Hire of the Railways by the Government from January 1st, 1941, and to continue for a year after the war ends.

The fixed Annual Rent is £43,468,705. This amount will be divided as under:—

G.W. £6,670,603; L. & N.E. £10,136,355; L.M. & S. £14,749,698; Southern, £6,607,639; London Transport, £4,835,705, and 468,705 to the lines worked by the larger companies.

In addition to the fixed £43,468,705 the Railways will be entitled to the Net Revenue from their Road Transport investments and from their Railway interests in Northern Ireland and Eire.

Maintenance Charges, Trust Funds.—Under the provisions of the control agreement, maintenance charges including renewals are standardised on the basis of an average pre-war charge. If expenditure of any of the controlled undertakings in any year of control is less than the standardised charge, the difference, representing arrears of maintenance is invested in Government Securities. The amounts of the trust funds at December 31, 1944, are shown in following table:—

	Arrears of Maintenance etc.	Interest (net).	Total Balance of Fund.
Southern....	19,258,000	395,000	19,653,000
G. Western....	16,401,000	374,000	16,775,000
L. M. & Scot.	28,950,000	704,000	29,654,000
L. & N.E....	33,352,000	814,000	34,166,000
Lon. Pass. T.	24,945,000	567,000	25,512,000
	£122,906,000	2,854,000	125,760,000

The cost of restoring war damage as from January 1st, 1941, is not to be charged to the net revenue accruing to the Government, but is to be dealt with under a new scheme to be introduced by the Government for public utility undertakings, the cost to the utilities under this scheme to be borne by them.

The annual payment of £43,469,000 is substantially less than the "Standard revenues" of the four main line railways and London Transport (£56,900,000).

On and from Monday, October 6th, 1941, all trains which began and ended their journeys within the London Passenger Transport area were made third class only.

Length of daily continuous locomotive runs :—
40½ miles, Euston & Glasgow.
392½ miles, King's Cross & Edinburgh.
(Northern Pacific) 1,008 miles, St. Paul & Livingston (Montana).

Rails have only one-ninth of the route mileage of British roads, and there are railway stations at only 7,700 of our 39,000 smaller towns and villages.

RAILWAYS AND AIR TRANSPORT.

The L.M.S.R., the G.W., and the Southern Railways have acquired the Capital of British and Foreign Aviation, Ltd., also the additional holdings acquired in Channel Island Airways, Ltd., which means that that Company and its subsidiaries (Jersey Airways, Ltd., and Guernsey Airways, Ltd.) were now wholly owned by the G.W. and the Southern Railways.

During the war, under agreement with the Air Ministry, railway associated air companies have operated, with one exception, all internal air routes. During this war they flew 7,000,000 aircraft miles, carried 300,000 passengers and more than 7,000,000 pounds of urgent mail and freight. Except on one occasion (due to enemy action) there was no loss of life, and regularity of service in winter and summer exceeded 95 per cent.

THE RAILWAY CLEARING HOUSE.

Offices, 123 Eversholt St., Euston Square, London, N.W.1. Established and January, 1842, was incorporated by Acts of Parliament in 1850 and 1897. It clears through traffic of railways in Great Britain and also certain Irish Railways and Ports. Its affairs are managed by a Committee consisting of four representatives from the Board of each of the Amalgamated Companies in Great Britain, and one from each of the remaining Railway Companies parties to the clearing system. The Irish Railway Clearing House was established July 1, 1848.

BRITISH AND WORLD'S RAILWAY FACTS AND RECORDS.

British Railway Companies are the world's largest dock owners (53 in all). World's largest hotel owners. World's longest non-stop runs: "Flying Scotsman," King's Cross to Edinburgh, 392½ miles, during the summer; "Royal Scot," Carlisle to Euston, 299 miles, all the year round. This train is also the oldest scheduled train in the world; it has been running from Euston Station at 10.0 a.m. since 1848. The carriages on the Hastings electric (opened July 4, 1935) are the first in the world to use air-stream ventilators. The Southern Railway, with the World's largest Main Line and Suburban electric train service, had (at end of 1940) 709 route miles, 1,760 track miles and 160 sub-stations, at a cost of nearly £11,000,000. World's most intensive steam suburban train service, L. & N.E.R., Liverpool Street. World's largest escalator (Leicester Square Underground Station), 161 feet long, with a rise of 80 ft. 6 in. World's largest covered goods station, Bristol (Temple Meads), and Europe's largest group of sorting sidings, Whitmoor (Cambs). Clapham Junction is the world's busiest railway junction—2,500 trains in every 24 hours. 700,000,000

OWNERSHIP OF RAILWAYS.

Nearly half of all the Railways of the world are privately owned. The actual figures are: 47 per cent. of the total railway mileage of all countries in the world is owned and operated by private enterprise; 53 per cent. is state-owned.

EUROPEAN RAILWAYS.

Dates when public railway traffic was inaugurated in various European Countries. Austria, 1828; France, 1828; Belgium, 1835; Germany, 1835; Russia, 1838; Italy, 1839; Switzerland, 1844; Spain, 1848; Sweden, 1851; Portugal, 1854; Turkey, 1860.

COOK'S EXCURSION AGENCY.

Founder, Thomas Cook, lived at Market Harborough, was a turner by trade and keen temperance worker. First organized excursion was on July 5, 1841, Leicester to Loughborough. The price was one shilling for return journey of 20 miles—570 people made the trip. For fifteen years before the second World War, this well-known travel firm was Belgian controlled. The British Custodian of Enemy Property sold Cook's impounded shares to the four British Railway Companies and so "Cook's Tours," became all British again. Cook's was the only firm allowed to handle postal packets between this country and enemy and enemy-occupied countries.

George Lunn's Tours Ltd. were discontinued and the Company was struck off the Register on July 17, 1942.

"At Your Service Bureau."—The staff in the Central Bureau at Euston Station dealt with 1,378,802 calls during 1944.

railway tickets are printed annually by the British Railways at their own ticket printing works.

Bradshaw.—Bradshaw's (Monthly) Guide to the British Railways was first issued in December, 1841. In February, 1945, "Bradshaw" received the grant of a Royal Warrant of Appointment to H.M. the King.

The Oldest Train.—The oldest scheduled train in the world runs from Euston. This Irish Mail has been running since 1848.

The Flying Scotsman is now aged 83 years. In June, 1862, she pulled out from No. 10 Platform, King's Cross, at 10.0 a.m., and has left this same platform every day since.

The First Murder on an English Railway was on the North London Railway near Hackney Wick in 1864. Franz Muller murdered Mr. Briggs. Muller fled to New York, was traced by the police, brought back, tried and executed.

The first streamlined locomotive and train in Great Britain was the "Silver Jubilee" of the L. &

N.E. Railway which commenced operation both ways between Newcastle and London on September 30th, 1935.

In 1942 the Southern Railway produced a new type of electric locomotive for the operation of both freight and passenger services. It consists of a box type cab carried on two six-wheel bogie trucks. The cab contains an electrically fired boiler for supplying steam for heating passenger trains. A novel feature embodied in the design enables the locomotive to continue a drawbar pull when passing over the gaps in the conductor rail when no collector shoes are in contact with the conductor rail. With a 1,000-ton freight train the engine has an acceleration to 24 m.p.h. in 100 seconds and hauls the heaviest passenger train at a speed of 75 m.p.h.

The first railway carriage built in Britain was named "Experiment" and was run over the world's first public railway (Stockton & Darlington), opened in September, 1825, and the carriage was used in October, 1825, a fortnight after the line was opened. The earliest locomotives in the world to run on rails were "Uncle Dick's Puffer" built by Richard Trevithick in 1804, and successfully used on the Penydarran tramroad at Merthyr Tydfil, and Blackett's "Puffing Billy" built in 1813, and used on the plateway at Wylam colliery.

The first slip coaches.—When the London and Blackwall Railway was opened in 1840, the various intermediate stations were served by slipping or dropping a carriage at each station.

The first Corridor Train in Gt. Britain.—The first corridor train gangwayed throughout and heated by steam made its appearance on March 7th, 1892, between Paddington and Birkenhead (G.W.). The first corridor coach (L. & N.W.) in 1865. The first British sleeping car appeared on the East Coast Scotch expresses early in 1873.

The Most Luxurious Pre-war Trains in Gt. Britain were the "Cheltenham Flyer" of the G.W., "The Coronation" of the L.N.E., the "Coronation Scot" of the L.M.S., and the "Golden Arrow" of the Southern.

Air Attacks, 1939-1945.—From start to finish of the war 10,000 enemy air attacks were made on British Railways. With the exception of Coventry probably the most bombed section of line was one of 2½ miles near London with 92 attacks in nine months.

Sheltering from Air Raids in London Tube Stations.—The London Transport Board states that during the War years over 50,000,000 persons were given shelter at 79 Underground Stations—7,600 three-tier bunks were installed on platforms and in subways, 124 canteens were opened, using 300 urinals and 90 pie warmers, 11 tons of food were distributed nightly. Reservation tickets were issued to shelterers for numbered bunk and floor space positions. Eight deep-level raid shelters were constructed by London Transport engineers for the Government at several points in the London area. These straight lengths of tube tunnel were for use wholly as public shelters when necessary. Shelter accommodation for 20,000 people had also been provided at the Southern Main Line terminus. Sheltering at Tube Stations ended on May 6, 1945.

British Railway Horses.—Horses owned by the British Railways, numbering 9,714, collect and deliver some 9,319,000 tons of goods and 26,220,000 parcels per year. Each year the Companies spend £5,250 on medicines for their horses—Shoeing costs £86,000 each year. The horse manure provides the railways with an annual income of £47,350.

Southampton is the world's largest graving dock and Britain's most important passenger port.

Number of sleepers to one mile of track 2,112. Dimension of a sleeper 8' 6" x 10' x 5", weight 17 to a ton. Standard length of rail 60 ft. and weight 95 lb. per yard. The weight of a standard chair is 45 lb. Stone sleepers were first used instead of wood on Leicester and Swannington Railway (the first railway in the Midlands opened in 1836). They were used for a total distance of 7½ miles. Some of these sleepers may be seen in the Science Museum at South Kensington.

The Farthest One can get from a Railway Line in England was, up to a short time ago, the village of Hartland (14 miles) in North Devon. But owing to the closing down of a small local line to Barnstaple, the record is now held by Lynton (18 miles).

Stockton and Darlington Railway is the oldest passenger railway in this country, opened 1825, although there was a 9½-mile public plate-way from Wandsworth to Croydon, opened in 1801; animal traction was employed, and in 1808 Trevithick's circular "London Railway" was built and was enclosed in what is now Euston Square. It consisted of locomotive and one carriage. One shilling admittance was charged, including a ride for the few who were not too timid. The oldest passenger line in the world is the Oystermouth or Swansea and Mumbles Line (horses were the motive power).

Railway Centenary.—Over 100 years ago (March 29th 1843) the extension of the Eastern Counties Railway, an ancestor of the L.N.E.R., from Chelmsford to Colchester was opened. The line was originally begun with a stretch from London to Romford in 1839, the following year it was carried to Brentwood and finally on March 29th 1843, to Colchester. In 1862 it became the G.E.R.

Britain's Largest Groups of Sorting Sidings.—Whitemoor (Cambs) capacity 20,500 wagons. England's most extensive sidings are at Toton (L.M. & S.R.) near Nottingham. They have 58 miles of sidings; these form the largest mineral marshalling centre in the world.

Great Britain's two Mountain Railways are from Llanberis to the summit of Snowdon—length 4½ miles, gauge 2 ft. 7½ ins., steam operated; and the rack railway (electric) ascending Snaefell in the Isle of Man.

Railway Mania Year was so called because 272 Acts were passed for new railways during 1846.

The Longest Stretch of Continuous Four-track Main Line in Great Britain is the 75 miles (L.M. & S.) between St. Pancras and Glendon North Junction, Kettering.

First London Main Line Station.—Euston, opened July 20th, 1837.

Smallest Passenger Station.—Blackwell Mill, Derbyshire (L.M.S.).

The Two Longest Stretches of Main Line in Great Britain entirely free from facing points are: Cairn Valley Jct. North of Dumfries to Old Cumnock on the G. & S.W. Section of the L.M. & S. Railway 40½ miles and the Salisbury to Yeovil Jct. (S.R.) 39 miles.

Ventilating London Tube Railways.—The present system (1945) is to run fans to exhaust the warmed air through exit shafts. Fresh air to feed the fans arrives with the passenger at the station entrances and proceeds with him down the escalators. There are more than 100 miles of Tube railways in the London Transport system with some 80 stations. The annual operating and maintenance cost for the system may be £350 to £400 a station for the supply of nearly 50,000 cu. ft. of fresh air a minute for each station interval.

The Longest Stretches of Straight Track in Great Britain are the 18 miles of line between Selby and Hull and the 16 miles Boston-Grimsby line between Grimsby and Burgh-le-Marsh on the L.N.E.R.

The Southern Railway main line to Dover is nearly straight for 24 miles between Tonbridge and Ashford; 10½ miles as far as Staplehurst, is dead straight.

The Longest Stretch of Line Between Two Adjacent Stations.—In Great Britain between York and Malton (L. & N.E.) 21 miles, and Bridge of Orchy and Rannoch on the L. & N.W. West Highland Line, distance 15.6 miles.

Railway Station with Longest Name.—A station in Anglesey on the L.M.S. has a name which runs nearly the whole length of the platform. The name is LLANFAIRPWLLGWYNGYLLGOGERYCH-WYRNDROBWL'LLANTYSILIOGOGOGCH. The first twenty letters are sufficient address for the Post Office.

The Welsh Highland Railway from Portmadoc to Dinas Jct. (Caernarvon), 28 miles long, was purchased in 1941 for dismantling.

The First Irish Built Locomotive "Princess" emerged from the Grand Canal St. Works, Dublin, in 1841.

Pacific (4-6-2).—The Southern Railway have introduced a new type of "Pacific (4-6-2) locomotive for use on main line trains in the West of England. They are similar in outward appearance to the well-known "Merchant Navy" class but somewhat smaller. Reduction in weight has been effected which is 128 tons 12 cwt (engine 86 tons, tender 42 tons 12 cwt), compared with 144 tons 2 cwt. of the engine and tender of the "Merchant Navy" locomotives. They have been built at the Brighton works. Tractive effort 85 per cent.;

boiler pressure 31,000 lb.; water capacity of tender 4,500 gal.; coal capacity of tender 5 tons.

The First American Passenger Freight Engine to be used in this country was put into use at Paddington Station on December 11th, 1942. It was one of eight just received. Built in the American Schenectady Works, weighs 130 tons 10 cwt., and with tender 61 feet long, carries 5,400 gallons of water. These engines are used for the haulage of heavy coal and special freight trains up to 1,500 tons. They possess the most penetrating whistles which have ever screamed out in Britain. These freight locos. are not the first American freight locos. to be used in this country. A number of American 2.6.0. Locomotives were in use on the Midland and Great Northern Rlys. at the beginning of the century for goods work. There were a few examples in Ireland of U.S. Locomotives.

Fog Signals.—In the course of an average winter fogmen on British Railways place 2,174,000 fog signals or detonators on the line.

Fenchurch Street Station, the oldest London Terminal of the L. & N.E. had been open 100 years on August and, 1941.

Loud Speakers.—Crewe (L.M. & S.) possesses 90 of these speakers, allocated to the six platforms and used from 8.0 a.m. until midnight. The reduction during night hours is in order that passengers sleeping in trains stopping there should not be awakened.

"Billy,"—The first locomotive made by George Stephenson, took the rails again in April, 1945, for the first time in over sixty years. He left his special pedestal at Newcastle Central, where he has been since 1906. The first stage of his journey was to a nearby goods yard and thence by road to the Municipal Museum.

Coal.—Between 75 per cent. and 80 per cent. of the output of saleable coal totalling 4,000,000 tons weekly is carried by the railways. British Railway locomotives used on an average 42 lb. of coal and 32 gallons of water per mile.

Driverless Subway Railway.—Post Office Tube between Paddington and Whitechapel, length 6½ miles, 80 feet below London streets, gauge 4 feet—shifts nearly 30,000 Mail Bags per day.

The Canterbury & Whitstable Railway (Southern Rly.) was opened on the 3rd May, 1830, with Stephenson's Locomotive "Invicta."

London and Greenwich Railway (Spa Road to Deptford) opened Feb. 8th, 1836, extended to London Bridge Dec. 14th, 1836, and extension to Greenwich Dec. 24th, 1838.

Cannon St. Bridge and Station opened by S.E. Railway, 1st September, 1866.

Length and Width of Standard Composite passenger coaches of the Four Main Line Railways in use on express Services : G.W. 59 ft. 10 ins. long, 8 ft. 11 ins. in width; L.M. & S. 60 ft. long, 8 ft. 11½ ins. in width; L. & N.E. 60 ft. long, 8 ft. 6 ins. in width; Southern 59 ft. long, 9 ft. in width.

London and Blackwall Railway.—Opened (cable haulage) 5 ft. gauge, July 6, 1840.

Boat Trains Again.—First civilian boat train to the Continent since May, 1940, left London (Southern Railway) on Jan. 15, 1945, and the first left Paris for London after the first civilian boat train had arrived in Paris from London. The Channel Islands Service was resumed on June 25, 1945.

Travelling Post Offices, in abeyance during the last war, were reintroduced in October, 1945.

O.H.M.S. "Specials."—The official figures of O.H.M.S. "Specials" during the "invasion period" March 26 to June 24, 1944, are:—Passenger trains 6,841; Freight trains 6,888; total 13,729.

Rapier discontinued.—The secret war train, in use since 1940, made its 120th and last journey from King's Cross on July 8, 1945. It had covered 100,000 miles and was known as "Rapier."

Ghost Trains are empty trains run over an electrified railway line at night in hard frosty weather to prevent ice accumulating.

The Most Westerly Point in Europe that can be Reached by Rail.—The Tralee and Dingle Light Railway; the map measurements of this line shows 20 deg. 23 min. 30 sec. West of Greenwich—a very near measurement of this is the Valentia Harbour Railway in Eire—20 deg. 28 min. 30 sec., a difference of 5 min., or one-twelfth of a degree.

The Channel Tunnel.—During 1944 the Channel Tunnel Company made a profit of £309—from money not spent on the tunnel and invested.

The British Empire's Highest Railway.—On the Kenya-Uganda Railway, at a point near Timboroa, the line goes over a summit level of 9,130 feet, and Timboroa Station at 9,000 feet is the highest railway station in the Empire. Britain's greatest railway altitude—between Dalnaspical and Dalwhinnie (Scotland), 11,484 feet. This ignores the Snowdon Mountain Railway (p. 641) which the summit is 3,540 feet above sea-level.

The First Railway in New South Wales (Sydney to Parramatta) was opened September 26, 1855.

American Records.—Highest summit terminus is held by the Manitou and Pike's Peak rack Railway in Colorado, 14,109 feet above sea-level. The longest tunnel in the western hemisphere is Cascade on the G. Northern main line Spokane to Seattle (Washington), 7 miles 1,387 yards. The longest bridge being the 70 miles of Pile trestle construction on the Lucin cut off in the Southern Pacific across the Great Salt Lake in Utah.

The largest steam locomotive in the world (Big Boy), built by the American Loco. Coy. and running in that country, is a huge articulated engine, with 4-8-8-4 wheel arrangement and coupled wheels 5 ft. 8 in. diameter, designed for a maximum speed of 80 m.p.h., also to produce a maximum power output continuously at 70 m.p.h. Total wheelbase (engine only) is 72 ft. 5½ in. and the overall length 85 ft. 3 in. It has developed an indicated h.p. of 7,000.

Chairway to the Stars.—The new two-mile long electric chair ski lift recently completed to the top of 9,200 ft. Baldy Mountain, Sun Valley, Idaho, and known as the "Chairway to the Stars," is the longest ski lift in the world.

Chicago's First Tube Railway was opened Oct. 17, 1943. Length 5 miles, cost $34,000,000.

World's most Powerful Electric Locomotive, used on the St. Gothard line, weighs 232 tons, is 105 feet in length and develops 12,000 h.p.

First underground city railway in the world.—First section of Metropolitan Railway (mixed gauge) opened from Bishop's Road to Farringdon St., Jan 13th, 1863, extended to Moorgate St., July 1st, 1866. Its carriages were lighted by gas from the first. First underground electric tube line, City and South London, opened in 1890.

The Shortest Public Railways in the World are the Easingwold (2½ miles). The North Sunderland (Light Railway) 4 miles 6 chains—gauge 4 ft. 8½ ins.—the Ravenglass and Eskdale Railway, 7½ miles gauge 15 inches, and the Romney, Hythe and Dymchurch Railway 13½ miles—gauge 15 inches. The engines used on the R.H. & D. Ry. are one-third the size of standard gauge main line locomotives.

The Shortest Private Railway in the World is that built by the Pope in Vatican City. It is one-third of a mile and cost £260,000.

The World's Longest Tunnel.—The Morden-East Finchley tunnel on the Northern Line tube. It is 17½ miles long.

The World's Shortest Double-Track Railway is the 750 feet line connecting the Capitol and Senate buildings in Washington. The train makes about 225 trips a day carrying senators and visitors between its two terminals. The motors used are 7-h.p., and a rail fixed in the roof supplies the current.

Post Office Tube Railway.—From Whitechapel District Post Office to Paddington G.W. Station and links the important Post Offices with the main sorting office at Mount Pleasant. It has a track of 2-foot gauge and is laid in a single tunnel 9 feet in diameter. It is 70 feet beneath the street level, and 30,000 bags of mail are dealt with daily.

The Largest Underground Station in the World was opened in Berlin on April 15, 1930. There are nine separate entrances from the street, of which six lead directly into a huge underground booking hall. Eight moving staircases lead to platforms which are flanked with glass walls.

One of the Railway Wonders of the World is the Darjeeling Himalayan Railway. It is almost a toy railway, the gauge is only two feet, the engines and vehicles are necessarily diminutive; but a big traffic is conveyed over the 54½ miles between Siliguri on the Bengal and Assam Railway and Darjeeling. The gradients and curves are terrific, for no less than 7,200 feet have to be climbed and by adhesion only. The steepest gradient is 1 in 24 and the average 1 in 26, and there are many curves of less than 60 feet radius. The railway carries annually over 80,000 tons of general merchandise and many hundred thousand passengers; there were formerly 360 unprotected level crossings, now reduced to 120. Most of the original engines are still functioning although they have all been rebuilt at least once.

The Steepest Adhesion Gradients in the world are a section between the River Samala Bridge and Zunil Station on the Guatemalan State Electric Railway (Central America) and the metre gauge electric line of the P.L.M. (France) between Chedde and Servoz, both 1 in 11.

The World's Authenticated Record Non-Stop Run was made in 1925 from Montreal to Vancouver, 2,937 miles; oil-electric journey completed in 67 hours; and the second record was made on the Denver-Zephyr of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad of U.S.A. on October 23, 1936, from Chicago to Denver (1,017 miles), without a stop, in 12 hr. 12 min. 27 sec. at a start to stop speed of 83.3 m.p.h.

Railway Speed Records.—1903, Berlin-Zoosen Military Railway Tests: 84-ton electric car achieved 130.8 m.p.h. 1931, Germany: Kruckenberg experimental propeller-driven coach achieved 143 m.p.h. France: Bugatti Diesel-engined rail-car achieved 115.5 m.p.h. On July 20, 1939, Italian Railway from Florence to Milan 195 miles in 115 minutes at an average speed of 100 miles per hour.

Steam Records per Mile.—The scheduled steam-operated records per mile per hour are as follows: U.S.A. 78.3, Belgium 74.9, British 71.9, Germany 71.7, and France 70.2. The unscheduled record for the World's maximum speed for steam traction is held by the Pacific locomotive "Mallard" owned by L.N.E.R., which in July, 1938, between Grantham and Peterborough attained 125 m.p.h.

The World's Slowest Train.—Mañana. Operating over the 110 miles between Corrientes and Mburucuyá (Ferrocarril Económico Corrientino Argentina) on a schedule of 13 hours 10 minutes. It is almost unknown for the train to get in on time and it is usually some hours late.

The World's busiest railway junction is Clapham Junction (Southern) 2,500 trains in 24 hours.

The Longest continuous curve is the Portchartrain on the Illinois Central Railway between Ruddock and Trinity, Louisiana. It is 9.45 miles long.

First Railway in Japan Yokohama to Samagawa opened 12th June, 1872. Completed to Tokio 14th October, 1872.

The First Railway in China.—A short 2 feet 6 inches gauge line connecting Shanghai with Wosung at the mouth of the Yangtze was built in 1876.

The First Railway in the Austrian Empire was opened 7th September, 1827, from Bridweis to Trojanov (animal traction).

The First Railway to be built in Italy was the line from Naples to Portici, 4½ miles long, and opened to the public on October 4th, 1839.

First Belgian Railway—Brussels to Malines (May 5th, 1835).

First German Railway—Nuremburg to Fürth (Dec. 7th, 1835).

The first railway opened in Canada between Laprairie and St. John's in 1836.

The first railway in Roumania was built as the result of a concession granted to an Englishman John Trevor Barkley, opened Oct. 19th, 1869, between Bucharest and Gurgin, a distance of 43 miles. The first project for a railway in Japan dates back to 1869; but as the Treasury of that country was in no position to cover the outlay, a loan of a million sterling was floated in London and construction was begun in 1870. The Vulcan Foundry of Newton-Le-Willows, Lancashire, provided the first locomotives to run in Japan. They were the 2-4-0 T type.

Railway Statistics for Eire (1943) (latest to reach this country):—

Gt. Southern.	Gross receipts	£6,239,322
	Expenditure...	5,631,665
Gt. Northern.	Gross receipts	3,067,775

Railway Unionist King—The late King Boris was the only Royal Railway Unionist in the world. He also drove the Coronation Scot Express when last in England.

The Best Engine Driver in Australia.—Mr. J. B. Chiffley, now Prime Minister of Australia (1945), was at one period of his life the best railway engine driver in the Commonwealth.

Braking of High-Speed Trains.—A train running at 100 m.p.h. cannot be stopped in less than 3,900 feet with brakes governed by the adhesion between a steel wheel and the rail, and unless electrically-controlled air brakes giving an initial force of the order of 200 per cent. of the braked weight are used, the stopping distance is more likely to be about 4,500 feet. An express train of 12/13 coaches travelling at 60 m.p.h. can be brought to a stand in approximately 360 yards. The vacuum automatic brake is used on most steam trains and the Westinghouse compressed air brake on electric trains.

Railway to Mecca. The Hejaz Railway from Damascus to Mecca entirely built by capital subscribed by Muhammadans. The distance is 2,000 miles. This line, or rather a branch of it to Haifa includes the only railway bridge over the river Jordan and is built upon five stone arches.

Railway Gauges.—Standard gauge is 4 ft. 8½ in. The G.W. Railway was built to a seven-foot gauge. In order to enable the 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge to travel over the G.W. a third rail was laid over most of the track. In May, 1892, the whole G.W. system was altered to standard gauge. This gauge of 4 ft. 8½ in. is the standard for U.S.A. and European Continent (except Spain, Portugal, and U.S.S.R.). In 1942 the Australian Railway gauges were 6,131 miles of 5 ft. 3 in.; 7,296 miles of 4 ft. 8½ in., and 13,011 miles of 3 ft. 6 in.

Railway Electrification.—With 3,660 miles of railway, 2,800 of which is operated electrically, Switzerland far surpasses any other European country; Italy coming next with 2,430 miles of railway operated electrically. The only country in the world with a longer electrified mileage is the United States. The London Passenger Transport Board have a number of locomotives which are driven entirely by batteries carried on the vehicles. At the end of 1940 the total single track mileage of electrified railways in England (including sidings) was 2,013, and out of a total of 19,131 route mileage 806 is electrified (see page 642). The first electrified railway in Britain is the "Volk." built in 1883, at Brighton and owned by Magnus Volk. This line was taken over by the Brighton Corporation in April, 1940. In 1866 one half was washed away by heavy seas. The Swedish State Railways have 2,241 miles of electrified route. The City and South London Railway, the first section of which came into operation on December 18, 1890, was the first electrically-operated under-ground line in the world. "The Dead Man's Handle."—On steam trains there must be at least two men on the engine; but on electric trains only one is required. Should the driver be taken ill or die, a device called a "Dead Man's Handle" is employed. In the handle is a central portion, which while the driver has his hand upon it is pressed down—should he release his hold, as would occur if he were taken ill or died, this certain portion is necessarily released, and this causes current to be cut off, and the brakes to be applied and the train to come at once to a standstill.

An electrified line in the Arctic Circle.—The Swedish Ore Railway from Luleå (Sweden) to Narvik (Norway) is 300 miles long, built for steam operation in 1902 and electrified in 1912 and 1914. Deposits estimated at 750 million tons. The ore is very rich, at times yielding over 80 per cent.

The Steepest Railway in the World is in Switzerland in the Canton Ticino. From Piotta to Lake Ritorn level has an average gradient of 72 per cent. and a maximum of 87.8 per cent.

World's Highest Cable Railway.—The Aiguille du Midi on Mont Blanc—3,625 metres to Col du Midi.

Double-Decker Trains.—In Germany a double-decker train runs between Bremen and Beuchen. In the United States the Long Island Railway Company has introduced these double-deckers. Each carriage is 84 feet long and carries 136 passengers—72 more than before.

World's Longest Distance Non-stop in War time, 301.1 miles, L.M.S. 8.40 p.m. express Euston to Kingsmoor (Carlisle).

The World's Longest Stretch of Straight Railway belongs to the Transcontinental Railway of the Commonwealth of Australia, which is dead-straight for 328 miles across the Nullarbor Plain (but not dead-level), without a curve, without crossing a river, and without sighting a tree.

The most Northerly Railway in the World is at King's Bay, Spitsbergen, it is only 750 miles from the North Pole, and is narrow gauge.

Railway Tickets.—The standard size used in Great Britain is 2½ inches by 1½ inches. These sizes have been adopted by most countries. This modern ticket is the invention of Thomas Edmondson a Lancashire Quaker, born in 1792.

MERCANTILE SHIPPING.

Census of Seamen (June 15, 1938).—Total number of seamen employed, 159,373, as under:—

Maritime Regiments.—During the War 4 specially constituted Maritime Regiments, officially part of the Royal Regiment of Artillery and numbering 10,000 all ranks, were manning guns in merchant ships to supplement the ratings already trained in gunnery.

British Shipbuilding the Eighth Wonder of the World.—Sir Earle Page, on return to Sydney, N.S.W., from London, where he had been representing the Australian Government, said (Aug., 1942), "I am pleased to be able to testify to the amazing development in British Shipbuilding. It has become the Eighth Wonder of the World. Vessels are being launched 30 days after their keels have been laid down and they are ready for service soon after."

The tonnage of merchant vessels launched in the four years 1915-1918 was 3,770,170, whereas in the four years 1940-1943 the tonnage was 4,415,668 (914 vessels), in fewer available yards, with less labour available, and in spite of the blackout and air raid damage to the yards and workers' homes. As the war progressed the proportion of faster vessels was increased, particularly that of standardized cargo liners of 15 knots.

Wrecks (World).—In the twelve months ended Dec. 31, 1938, the total losses of the World's Mercantile Marine from casualties or stress of weather were 137 vessels (500 tons gross and upwards) of 405,909 tons. In addition, during the twelve months ended June 30, 1938, over 851,000 tons of shipping were broken up or sold for that purpose.

(British).—In 1938 22 sailing vessels (2,166 gross tons) and 101 steam and motor vessels (52,321 gross tons), a total of 123 vessels (54,487 gross tons), were totally lost at sea. In 1938 lives were lost through wrecks at sea—from sailing vessels, crew 3, passengers 2; from steam and motor vessels, crew 128, passengers 8—a total of 201. The years with the heaviest losses of life at sea were 1912 and 1914. In 1912 the total of 2,335 included 673 of the crew and 825 passengers on S.S. Titanic; in 1914 the total of 1,778 included 171 of the crew and 840 passengers on S.S. Empress of Ireland.

PARCELS.

Should be marked "Parcel Post," and must be handed across the counter; postage must be prepaid by stamps, affixed by the sender. On Sundays parcels are not accepted nor (except during Christmas) delivered. The name and address of sender should be inside or (not too prominent) on the outside of every parcel, and preferably at right angles to the name and address of the addressee.

A rural postman will accept any packets he can conveniently carry, except overseas parcels or overseas letters intended for insurance; but if on foot or cycle not more, without notice, than 15 lb. from one person. He may weigh parcels on request. Mail-drivers need not accept between regular stopping points.

Parcels to or from Eire, Channel Is. or I. of Man are liable to customs duty: except in last case, the sender must declare contents when posting. Addressee must pay clearance fees (6d. or 1s.) if any duty be payable. Senders can undertake to pay customs charges of Eire and some overseas countries (see 6d., and a deposit).

Imperial and Foreign:—

Various (see pp. 652, 653, where the rates shown are mainly those for direct sea and land services and are generally the lowest in force). See P.O. Guide for mode of packing, prohibitions, &c.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

WAR RESTRICTIONS.—Under Board of Trade regulations many kinds of goods may be sent abroad (including Eire) only under the authority of an export licence. Enquiries in the matter should be addressed to the Controller, Export Licensing Department, Board of Trade, 4, Fenchurch Avenue, London, E.C.3.

Under the Defence (Finance) Regulations, senders of parcels to most foreign countries, including the U.S.A., and also to Canada and Newfoundland must furnish with the parcel a currency declaration (form C.D.3) which, together with explanatory notices, may be obtained from banks.

DELIVERY NUMBERS.—The London Postal Area (about 322 square miles) comprises 10 Head Districts and 108 Sub-Districts; each has its own delivery number, and 114 have their own sorting office. Thirteen other important cities also have numbered postal districts. To avoid delay, the proper numbers should appear in the address of letters, and of telegrams for hand delivery.

HOURS OF BUSINESS.—The hours at each office are shown on a notice in its window.

LATE FITS.—On payment of an extra $\frac{1}{2}$ d. (late fee), letters for despatch by night (and sometimes day) mails may be posted, after the ordinary hours of collection, at many post offices.

PROHIBITED AND DUTIABLE ARTICLES.—Among prohibitions are offensive or dangerous things, packets likely to impede the P.O. sorters and certain kinds of advertisement. To Eire, Channel Islands, and I. of Man dutiable articles must be sent as Parcels. Abroad generally they may also be sent as Insured Boxes, or (where the "Green Label" system applies) as Letters, or Small Packets (p. 65a).

FOODSTUFFS (whether in tins or not), including chocolate and confectionery of all kinds, are prohibited from transmission to places abroad, whether intended for soldiers or civilians.

CERTIFICATE OF POSTING unregistered parcels, free; other unregistered postal packets, $\frac{1}{2}$ d.

UNPAID PACKETS except redirected parcels, are charged double postage on delivery; UNDERPAID PACKETS, double the deficiency.

UNDELIVERABLE POSTAL PACKETS.—Inland packets chargeable with a postage of $\frac{1}{2}$ d. or more, undelivered, are returned to sender without charge, if his address is found either outside or inside. Packets without sender's address or any enclosure of importance are destroyed, except parcels, which, if not applied for, are generally disposed of after 3 months, or if perishable are dealt with as requisite. Packets chargeable with postage not exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ d. are returned to sender only on payment of a second postage, and if name, address and request for return appear on outside; those without such request are disposed of. British packets undelivered abroad are returned to sender here on payment of charges due; printed papers only if request for return appears outside. Magazine Post packets are charged with return postage, when return is requested. Parcels further incur other charges unless abandonment is requested at the time of posting.

REPLY COUPONS, for the purpose of prepaying replies to letters, are exchangeable abroad for stamps representing a minimum Imperial or Foreign letter-postage. Price (valid in foreign countries of the Postal Union), $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; (valid within British Empire and Palestine only, not in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan), $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Sold at chief offices.

POSTE RESTANTE.—(solely for the accommodation of strangers and travellers, and for three months only in any one town).—A packet may be addressed as a rule to any Post Office except Town Sub-Offices, and should have the words "Poste Restante" or "to be called for" in the address. If addressed to initials, fictitious names, or Christian name only, it is treated as Undeliverable. Applicants must furnish sufficient particulars to ensure delivery to the proper owner. Redirection from a Poste Restante is not undertaken for more than 14 days unless longer (up to 3 months) is applied for. Letters, parcels, &c., from abroad, or letters at a seaport for an expected ship, are kept a month; others, a week; thereafter they are treated as Undeliverable, unless bearing a request for return at or before the end of the period.

REDIRECTION.—(1) By agent of addressee: Packets other than parcels may be reposted free not later than the day after delivery (not counting Sundays and public holidays) if unopened and not tampered with, and if original addressee's name is unobscured. Parcels may be redirected free of charge, within the same time limits, only if the original and the corrected addresses are both within the same Town Delivery Area (or within the London Postal District). Registered packets, which must be taken to a Post Office, are re-registered free only up to day after delivery. (2) By the Post Office (not undertaken when other persons remain at the address). Requests for redirection of letters, &c., should be on printed forms, obtainable from the postmaster, and must be signed by the persons to whom the letters are to be addressed. Redirection is free for 6 months; thereafter for each different surname and each new address costs 1s. for 12 months, and 5s. for each subsequent year. Separate forms must be filled in for the forwarding of telegrams.

REGISTRATION, INLAND.—All kinds of postal packets intended for registration should be marked "Registered" in bottom left-hand corner, and must be handed to an officer of the Post Office, and a receipt taken. Parcels (or the string with which they are tied) and letters must be fastened with adhesive (if tape is used each piece must be signed or distinctively marked), or sealed with wax, lead, &c. Minimum fee $\frac{1}{2}$ d. exclusive of postage. Advice of delivery, a further $\frac{1}{2}$ d. The latest time for registering is usually half an hour before the latest time for posting ordinary packets; at Head Offices, if open, this may be done later for $\frac{1}{2}$ d. late fee. Compulsory registration, carrying no compensation, is applied to (a) unregistered packets containing coin or jewellery, or any apparently meant for registration and wrongly posted ($\frac{1}{2}$ d.); (b) packets found open (or undeliverable) and containing stamps, uncrossed bearer cheques, uncrossed postal orders without payee's name, &c., in each case 10s. or more in value ($\frac{1}{2}$ d.).

COMPENSATION, INLAND, for loss or damage is granted, though not as a legal right even if fee is paid and packing adequate.—The fees for compensation inclusive of registration are:—Fee $\frac{1}{2}$ d., compensation up to £5; 4d., £5 and £10; and 1d. for each additional £10 up to the maximum 1s. 11d. for £400. Compensation is given up to (a) £3 (or from Eire, £2) on unregistered parcels (for loss, only if certificate of posting is produced), (b) £3 on unregistered packets conveyed by Express Messenger all the way. Compensation in respect of money of any kind (coin, notes, orders, cheques, stamps, &c.) is only given if particulars (for identification) are kept and the money is sent by Registered Letter Post in one of the special envelopes sold officially (see p. 65a); the maximum compensation for coin, which must be packed so as not to shift, is £5. Compensation for jewellery, watches, &c., is only given on registered packets; for eggs, fish, game and rabbits, meat, fruit, and vegetables only when sent as parcels. Compensation is not given for delay to perishable or other articles or for damage to packets containing (1) eggs, soft fruit, or exceptionally fragile articles, in any case; (2) fragile articles by registered letter post, unless conspicuously marked "Fragile, with care"; (3) liquids by letter post (and by parcel post to or from Eire).

No compensation will be paid for any loss or damage due to the act of the King's Enemies.

REGISTRATION, IMPERIAL AND FOREIGN (except for parcels and magazine post), is in force to all countries; valuable articles may not be sent in unregistered letters. Fee, $\frac{1}{2}$ d. If claimed within a year, compensation (in the U.K., £2) is paid for entire avoidable loss of registered packets while in the custody of a country in the Postal Union.

INSURANCE, IMPERIAL AND FOREIGN (including except for parcels REGISTRATION), may be effected on packets to many countries at the following rates:—5d. for £12; 2d. each further £12 up to 55. 11d. for £40 (lower maxima in many countries). For H.M. Warships outside Home Waters only parcels are insurable, and up to £50 only.

COMPENSATION up to 20s. (38s. if over 11 lb.) may be given for loss or damage in the U.K. to insured parcels to or from Newfoundland, India, and the smaller colonies, Egypt, with many larger foreign countries, except U.S.A., if certificate of posting is produced. Packets containing no articles (besides correspondence) but valuable papers (banknotes, &c.) or valuable documents (plans, &c.) can 'be insured as letters; other valuable articles should be sent as insured parcels, or as "insured boxes".

No compensation will be paid for any loss or damage due to the act of the King's Enemies.

INSURED BOX POST.—Jewellery and precious articles (not letters or valuable paper) may be sent in strong boxes by letter mails to certain countries. Postage 2d. per 2 oz. (minimum 10d.); maximum weight 2 lb., size 12 x 8 x 4 in. Customs declarations must be filled in.

CASH ON DELIVERY SERVICE, INLAND (not to or from Eire, nor to H.M. Ships, nor to military personnel using an open address, e.g. "c/o Army Post Office").—A sum (Trade Charge) up to £40 can, under certain conditions, be collected from addressee and remitted to sender of a parcel or registered letter posted at a Money Order Office, or of goods consigned by railway. Fees (extra to usual postal or rail charges): For Trade Charge up to 20s., 4d.; up to £1, 6d.; £2, 8d.; £5, 10d.; and for each further £5 or part thereof, 2d. An additional charge of 3d. is made on consignments sent by rail.

CASH ON DELIVERY, IMPERIAL AND FOREIGN.—Applicable to parcels only, and not to all countries, nor to H.M. Naval and Military Forces and R.A.F. serving overseas. Fees for collection: 4d. for Trade Charge (amount to be collected) not exceeding £1, with 2d. extra for each additional £1 of Trade Charge up to the maximum, which is usually £40 (fee 8s. 6d.), but in some countries less. Addressee has generally also to pay on delivery, besides Customs, if any, a further fee (4d. in U.K.) not prepayable. If Trade Charge cannot be collected, the rules for undeliverable parcels apply.

EXPRESS AND SPECIAL SERVICES (INLAND).—Utilizing P.O. messengers, these are only available in connection with offices that deliver telegrams during hours of duty. Nos. 4 and 5 are alone available on Sundays (see p. 654, and next paragraph). Waiting fees: 10 minutes free, each further 10 minutes or less, 2d.—(1) All the way, by P.O. messenger, of packets, conspicuously marked "Express" above the address, handed over the counter. Inclusive charge, 6d. per mile, or part of a mile, with 2d. on each separate packet after the first. Live animals, liquids, and money may be delivered by this service. (2) After transmission by post, on addressee's application (6d. per mile minimum, and 2d. for every ten or less additional packets). (3) After transmission by post, at sender's request "Special Delivery" from the ordinary delivery office, if messengers are available (6d.+ postage). Packets must be marked "Express," and letters bear a broad vertical line back and front. (4) See p. 653. (5) Of a message telephoned to an express delivery office (10 words 2d., minimum 3d., besides express and telephone charges). (6) ("Ratier.") Postal packets not liable to registration are despatched by rail, met, and specially delivered in Britain, Douglas (I.O.M.), North Ireland, Jersey and Guernsey. Inclusive charges, 2 oz., 3s.; 1 lb. (maximum) 3s. 6d.; but packets from Jersey and Guernsey to Britain, Douglas or N. Ireland may not exceed 2 oz. (7) A Railway Parcel, is similarly accelerated at the cost of a telegram, of railway charges, and of Service (1) at both ends of its journey.

RAILWAY LETTERS, &c.—A letter not liable to registration, if taken to a Parcel or Booking Office of most railways while station is open, weekdays or Sundays, will be sent off by next train or steamer to a station or port on any of these railways within Gt. Britain, or to Douglas (I.O.M.), Ireland. Fee (besides postage): 2 oz., 4d.; 4 oz., 7d.; 1 lb. (maximum), 11d.; to Eire, 2 oz. (maximum), 4d. Unless marked "to be called for," it is posted in the nearest letter-box at station of address. Except on Sundays or in Eire, it can be delivered Express under Service 3, or directly from the station (Service 1) by wiring for messenger to meet it. For other combinations of rail and express, see preceding paragraph, Services 6 and 7.

INTERNATIONAL EXPRESS SERVICE.—Delivery by special messenger of correspondence (locally including parcels) to or from certain countries or certaintowns in the same. 6d. is paid by the sender, the rest, if any, by addressee, according to the local regulations.

POST CARDS.—Minimum size 4 x 2½ in., maximum 5½ x 4½ in. The left-hand half of the address side may be used for correspondence, inland or abroad. Plain cards, as if stiff as official cards and not under 1½th inch thick, may also be used both inland and abroad.

Reply Post Cards for abroad must have the heading Carte Postale avec réponse payée on first part, and on the second part (valid only to country of origin) Carte Postale—Réponse.

BUSINESS REPLY AND POSTAGE FORWARD (PARCEL) SERVICES. Suspended.

PRINTED PAPER POST (including former BOOK POST).—For printed or written matter not in the nature of a letter (p. 647).

By this post may be sent books and other works of a literary character, with or without written dedications, and any other written, typed or printed matter not being in the nature of a letter (e.g. with personal news or enquiry); drawings, paintings, photographic prints, engravings, maps, &c., together with normal non-fragile binding and anything necessary for safe transmission. Commercial printed forms, legal documents, printers' copy and proofs, examination papers, answers and corrections, the writing on which refers solely to the subject matter of the document, Christmas and picture cards with date, names and addresses of sender and addressee, and with conventional formulas not exceeding 5 words or initials, are also admitted, and circulars (if in characters resembling typewriting, only under special conditions). To overseas, receipts, invoices and statements of account, admissible inland, go only as Commercial Papers, and there are other differences. Written chess-moves and puzzle-solutions, also blank stationery, are inadmissible. Printed papers being subject to examination in the post, the cover, if any, must be capable of easy removal and replacement for purposes of examination, i.e. without breaking, tearing, ungumming, or cutting. (For full conditions see the official Guide, or free leaflet F. 386 w.).

"BLIND POST" (in other respects treated as Printed Papers).—Papers, periodicals and books, if printed in special type and subject to certain conditions of posting, marked outside "Blind Literature," with name and address of sender. Rate to all parts—2 lb., 4d.; 5 lb., 12d.; 8 lb., 11d.; 11 lb., 2d.; 15 lb., 2d. (maximum for Eire, 11 lb.). Many other "Articles for the Blind" may be sent by this post, when so marked.

SAMPLE POST (not to Eire).—Restricted to bona-fide Trade Samples, without saleable value; but one key, printers' blocks, fresh cut flowers, and some scientific specimens can be sent abroad. Rate:—Inland: Up to 4 oz., 1*d.*; 6 oz., 2*d.*; 8 oz., 3*d.*; Abroad: ½*d.* per oz., minimum 1*d.* Limits: Inland: Size, 24×18×18 in., weight 8 oz.; Abroad: Imperial 24×12×12 in., 5 lb.; Elsewhere: as for Letters, B iii (p. 647), 1 lb. If in roll form, everywhere as for Letters, A ii. Packets must be capable of easy examination in the post.

SMALL PACKETS POST (Imperial & Foreign).—For small articles of merchandise (with "Green Label" if dutiable) by Printed Paper mails. Registration is allowed; not insurance. Available only to certain countries. Postage 1*d.* per oz., minimum 5*d.* Limits: weight, 2 lb.; size, as for Letters, A ii and B iii (p. 647).

NEWSPAPER POST (INLAND).—For newspapers "registered at the G.P.O." (p. 649).

The cover, if any, must be open at both ends and easily removable, and copies should be folded so that title is readily inspected. No writing or additional printing is permitted, other than the words "with compliments," name and address of sender, request for return if undelivered, and a reference to a page.

Newspapers not "registered at G.P.O." or supplements to registered newspapers apart from their ordinary publications should be sent at printed paper rate.

STAMPS, ENVELOPES, POST CARDS, &C.

Stamps of reigns before that of King George V are no longer valid.

POSTAGE STAMPS (used also for receipts, telegrams, and certain Inland Revenue duties) are sold of the respective values of ½*d.*, 1*d.*, 1½*d.*, 2*d.*, 2½*d.*, 3*d.*, 4*d.*, 5*d.*, 6*d.*, 7*d.*, 8*d.*, 9*d.*, 10*d.*, 1*s.*, 2*s.*, 6*d.*, 5*s.*, and 10*s.* Books of 6 ½*d.* and 6 2*d.* stamps, together with (a) 6 2½*d.* stamps, 2*s.* 6*d.* or (b) 8 2½*d.* stamps, 5*s.* Rolls of ½*d.*, 1*d.*, 1½*d.*, 2*d.*, 2½*d.*, or 3*d.* stamps are also sold, joined lengthwise or sideways and rolls of 6*d.* stamps joined lengthwise. Stamps may be purchased at most offices when open, at licensed shops, and, in some places, from automatic machines at all hours. Rural postmen can supply the cheaper stamps, and registered letter envelopes.

REGISTERED LETTER ENVELOPES for foreign and inland letters, with a 5½*d.* embossed stamp (for registration and postage), are of four sizes: F. 5½ in.×3½ in. or G. 6½ in.×3½ in., 6½*d.* each; H. 8 in.×5 in., 7*d.* each; K. 11½ in.×6 in., 8*d.* each.

LETTER CARDS with 2½*d.* stamp: 3*d.* each.

POST CARDS, with impressed 2*d.* stamp: 2½*d.* each. Reply: double the Single figures.

EMBOSSSED ENVELOPES with 2½*d.* stamp; "A" (4½×3½ in.) or "Commercial" (5½×3½ in.), 3*d.* each.

Embossed or impressed postage stamps cut out of envelopes, post-cards, letter-cards, newspaper-wrappers, or telegram forms, may be used as adhesive stamps in payment of postage or telegrams provided they are not imperfect, mutilated, or defaced in any way.

MONEY ORDERS.

Advice of Payment: 2*d.* inland (and to Eire), 3*d.* for foreign and colonial orders (to certain countries). Payment may be stopped (fee 4*d.*); or deferred up to 10 days in case of Ordinary Inland Money Orders. Inland orders (including those for Eire) may be crossed for payment through a bank.

Inland Ordinary Money Orders (and to Eire).

The poundage charged is, for sums not exceeding £3, 4*d.*; £10, 6*d.*; £20, 8*d.*; £30, 10*d.*; £40,

1*s.*; £50 (maximum), 1*s.* 2*d.* (The maximum for orders issued in or payable in Eire is £40.) No order may contain a fractional part of 1*d.* The rules and regulations are on the forms issued. No poundage is charged for M.O. in payment of many Revenues (e.g., Income Tax) if demand note is produced.

Inland Telegraph Money Orders (and to Eire).

Money may be transmitted by this means from all Money Order offices which despatch telegrams, and paid at most of those which also deliver telegrams, and at some other offices. On Sundays, Christmas Day and Good Friday, sums up to £5 are payable at, or in the delivery areas of, Central Telegraph Office, the District Offices, and some Branch Offices in London, and all head and many of the more important other offices outside London.

Poundage at the same rate as for Ordinary Inland Money Orders, plus supplementary fee of 2*d.*, and cost of official Telegram of Advice.

Ordinary Money Orders for Abroad.

Poundage, £1, 6*d.*; £2, 1*s.*; £3, 1*s.* 6*d.*; and thereafter 3*d.* per £1 or part thereof. Limits of amount, £10, or £40; of validity, 6 or 12 months.

At present, not more than £10 per day per remitter can be sent to Canada, Newfoundland, or other country outside the Sterling Area, and then only when the purpose of the remittance is declared on a special form and permission has previously been granted by the Accountant General's Department G.P.O. (Overseas Remittances Branch).

Telegraph Money Orders for Abroad.

Only to certain countries, e.g., Australia, Canada, India, New Zealand, Palestine, S. Africa, Egypt, U.S.A. Poundage as in last paragraph, plus cost of official Telegram of Advice (at deferred rate, if desired, to most British Possessions) plus supplementary fee of 6*d.* or 1*s.* (Cuba 4*s.* 8*d.*) For restrictions, see the preceding paragraph.

POSTAL ORDERS.

Postal Orders (British pattern) are issued and paid at nearly all post offices in the United Kingdom during the ordinary hours of business on weekdays. They are also issued and paid in most British Possessions, etc. (not Australia or Canada), Egypt, Iraq, Transjordan. Transmission of postal orders to Canada and Newfoundland is prohibited. They are paid (but not issued) in Eire. They are printed, with a counterfoil, for every multiple of 6*d.* up to 5*s.* for 6*s.*, 7*s.*, 7*s.* 6*d.*, 8*s.*, and by 1*s.* steps up to 21*s.* Adhesive, unmarked current British Postage Stamps, if affixed in the 2 spaces provided, increase the value of an Order by not more than 5*d.* (orders up to 4*s.* 6*d.*) or 1*d.* (orders of 5*s.* and upwards). Poundage: 6*d.* and 1*s.*, 1*d.*; 1*s.* 6*d.* to 5*s.*, 1½*d.*; 6*s.* to 21*s.*, 2*d.* The name of payee must be inserted. If not presented before the seventh month from month of issue or the tenth month from the month of issue if sent to H.M. Forces overseas, Orders must be sent to the local Head Postmaster, or in London to the Accountant General's Department G.P.O. (Postal Order Branch), for verification, and a second poundage will be charged.

INLAND TELEGRAMS.

Telegrams may be handed in at a telegraph office, or, if prepaid and enclosed in envelope marked "Telegram," posted (without stamp), or handed to a rural postman or to a messenger delivering telegrams or express letters. Telegrams may be tendered by telephone at all times. Rate, 9 words or less 1s. (to or from Eire 12 words 1s. 6d.), each further word 1d. Priority rate (U.K. only) 6d. extra. The redirection charge for telegrams is 1s. per telegram if the original and new addresses are in the same place, free delivery area or London Postal District, and in all other cases at the ordinary inland rate. Telegrams sent on Sundays and (exc. Scotland) Good Friday or Christmas Day are charged 6d. extra. Replies may be prepaid up to 4s. (Eire 4s. 6d.); the reply voucher may be used, or its value refunded to sender of original telegram, within 12 months. Receipt for charges free. Certified copy 6d., sometimes more. Hand-delivery is free within 3 miles (x in Eire) of the nearest telegraph delivery office, or within the town postal area; beyond the free limit the charge is 6d. per mile to be paid by sender.

DELIVERY IS BY TELEPHONE to a telephone subscriber, thus accelerating receipt and making late delivery possible, if (a) address is telephonic (ex. change, number, and town or country if needed, count as 2 words only); (b) "Telephone" (not charged for) precedes full telegraphic address, where exchange and number are unknown to sender; (c) considered by P.O. officers to be quicker unless (i) subscriber has otherwise directed, (ii) "Private" (charged for) precedes telegraphic address, Confirmatory copies follow, if desired, by post.

ABBREVIATED ADDRESSES, registered for at least one year (£2 per annum), appear gratis in Sell's Directory (Business Dictionaries, Ltd., 133-137, Fetter Lane, London, E.C.4.)

COUNTING, &c.—Plain language, i.e., Latin, Esperanto or any modern European language, if in English characters, is charged by the number of words; all other words or unintelligible combinations of letters are charged one word per 5 letters. The following count one word—(1) in addresses, as a rule, everything essential after street name; (2) all names of towns and villages in U.K.; (3) names of districts in towns; (4) words ordinarily written as one or with hyphen, including "couldn't," &c.; (5) Names with prefix "St.," "De," "De la," "O'," "Mac," "Fitz," and surnames ordinarily hyphenated; (6) each five figures (th, &c., in ordinals count as two figures); (7) each initial, unless combined in groups of 5 or fewer; (8) signs of punctuation, and the symbols a/c, b/l, s/s, c/o ("c" counts as one word or as three figures); (9) letters amid figures or signs, and vice versa, except when part of addresses; (10) names of the principal places abroad.

(1) TELEGRAPH OFFICES ALWAYS OPEN IN LONDON:—Chief Office (King Edward Street), Leicester Sq., Charing Cross Road).

(2) PROVINCIAL TELEGRAPH OFFICES.—Certain offices are normally open for delivery on weekdays at all hours; but the hours of public business are liable to alteration without notice.

IMPERIAL AND FOREIGN TELEGRAMS.

In the list of countries on pp. 654, 655, the ordinary or FULL RATE per word is given (minimum charge, cost of 5 words) from any part of the United Kingdom, whether transmitted by cable or by radio-telegraphy (wireless). Between any two places in the British Empire, full rate does not exceed 1s. 3d. per word, nor letter-telegram rate 10s. 5d. for 25 words.

A special service (EFM) at reduced rate (2s. 6d. a tel.) is available to and from members of His Majesty's Forces in many areas abroad.

SUNDAY AND HOLIDAY ARRANGEMENTS.

ON SUNDAY THROUGHOUT THE U.K. no Parcel Post, non-telegraphic Money Order, Postal Order business is transacted, nor is there a delivery of letters, &c., except by Express Services (4) and (5) below. There is a collection for night despatch in most places. IN LONDON, the Chief Office, Leicester Square, and 33 other offices (including those named in the next paragraph) are alone open (mostly 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.) for stamps, telephone, telegrams, telegraph money orders up to £5, savings bank demand withdrawals up to £3. OUTSIDE LONDON all Head Offices and most country telegraphic Sub-offices open 9-10.30 a.m. (Scotland 9-10 a.m.) for stamps, telegrams, registration; but all town Sub-offices, and most non-telegraphic offices, are closed. Many stations send railway letters (p. 649), and telegrams at train times.

EXPRESS SERVICE 4 ("Special Delivery on Sundays"): Two limited inter-city services, (a) for London and certain provincial cities, (b) between Belfast, Dublin and Cork, are available only: (1) Sundays: reciprocally between the cities in each group; (2) Good Friday: to London only from the others of group (a). Delivery is made from offices only during periods when they are open for telegraphic business. The handing-in offices in London are:—The Head Post Office, King Edward St., E.C.1., W. and S.W. District Offices, and (Branch Offices) Camberwell Green, Clapham Common, Hammersmith Broadway, Holloway, Leicester Square, Stratford, and Swiss Cottage. Packets, marked "Express: Sunday Delivery," must be handed in in time to catch preceding night mails (in London, Sat., 12 noon-1.30 p.m.). Fee 1s. 6d., besides postage, covers delivery within any of the cities (in Dublin and Cork, not beyond the first mile). Not available for parcels.

EXPRESS DELIVERY by messenger of a telephoned message (Service 5, p. 649) is on Sundays restricted to the London Postal Area. But a letter reaching "Central Telegraph Office, London, E.C.1.," early on Sunday morning will be telephoned to a telephone subscriber in the London Telecommunications Region if the envelope be marked conspicuously "For Telephone Delivery on Sunday," with a broad perpendicular line back and front, usual postage being prepaid on the envelope, and 3d. per 30 words or less by stamps affixed to the enclosed message.

CHRISTMAS DAY AND GOOD FRIDAY AND PUBLIC HOLIDAYS.—Local announcements are made about the delivery and collection arrangements and the offices which will be open on Christmas Day, Good Friday and Public Holidays. Peace Time arrangements, which will be resumed as early as possible, were stated in full on p. 635 of "Whitaker", 1947.

AIR MAILS TO COUNTRIES ABROAD.

Air Mail Services are available to many countries on payment of special air postage rates. Full particulars of these services can be obtained on application at a post office.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Post Office as Licensing Authority.—By the Wireless Telegraphy Acts, 1904-26, it was made illegal to install or work wireless telegraphy in the United Kingdom or on board British ships in territorial waters except with the Postmaster General's licence. By the Wireless Telegraphy Order, 1908, the provisions of the Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1904, apply to British Ships whilst on the high seas. The Merchant Shipping (Wireless Telegraphy) Act, 1919, made it compulsory for all British sea-going ships over 1,600 tons to carry wireless apparatus. The Post Office inspects such apparatus under the Acts, and also examines Wireless Operators for the Postmaster-General's Certificate.

TELEPHONES.

Quarterly rentals for single exclusive lines for private-residence subscribers range from 20s. to 26s., and include, free, 50d.-worth of local calls (viz. calls of 1d. to 4d. value, up to 15 miles distance); if over 3 miles from the exchange, an extra 5s. per furlong is payable. The above charges are subject to a surcharge of 15 %. Trunk call charges (viz., to exchanges over 15 miles away) vary with distance, but do not exceed 3s. 9d. by day (for 3 minutes) and 1s. 6d. from 6.30 p.m. to 9.30 p.m. (5.30 p.m. to 9.30 p.m. for calls made from public call offices, and from other exchange lines fitted with coin boxes). (7s. 6d. and 2s. 3d. to Eire.) Call office charges 2d. extra. Personal calls (to specified person) 1s. 6d. extra (6.30 p.m.—9.30 p.m., 9d.); if he, or an acceptable substitute, cannot be found, nothing further is charged. For fuller information, see the first pages of Telephone Directories.

INTERNATIONAL TELEPHONES.

CONTINENTAL TELEPHONES.—All public services suspended.

OVERSEAS SERVICES.—Public service is available to Canada, Kenya and the United States of America. The charges for calls of 3 minutes duration are as follows: Canada (all Provinces except British Columbia) 60s.; British Columbia, 75s.; Kenya, 60s.; U.S.A. (all states except Western States), 60s.; Western States, 75s. A report charge of 4s. is payable when a "person to person" call on any of the above-mentioned services fails or is cancelled.

ATLANTIC FLIGHT RECORDS.

1919 (June 14-15)—Sir John Alcock and Sir J. Whitten Brown flew from Newfoundland to Ireland.

1943 (Nov. 29)—By making a non-stop flight of 3,100 miles from Montreal to an airport on the west coast of Britain in 17 hours 25 minutes, Captain Richard Allen eclipsed all long-distance and transatlantic air speed records when flying a B-4 Liberator on the R.A.F. Transport Command North Atlantic shuttle ferry for British Overseas Airways Corporation. His time was 21 minutes shorter than the previous best in October, 1943, by a British-built Lancaster piloted by Captain M. B. Barclay, of Perth, Scotland, on the Canadian Government Atlantic service operated by Trans-Canada Air Lines. The best time in a Liberator before this flight was 12 hours 51 minutes by Captain S. T. B. Cripps, of British Overseas Airways Corporation. In Nov., 1944 (see p. 857) the time was reduced to 10 hours 13 minutes.

1944 (May 26)—1,500th Atlantic crossing (R.A.F. and U.S.A. Transport Command Regular Ferry Service), the 1,000th having been made on Christmas Eve, 1943.

THE KINGDOM OF ENGLAND

Position and Extent.—The Kingdom of England occupies the southern portion of the island of Great Britain and lies between 55° 46' and 49° 57' 30" N. latitude (from the mouth of the Tweed to the Lizard), and between 1° 46' E. and 5° 43' W. (from Lowestoft to Land's End). England is bounded on the north by the summit of the Cheviot Hills, which form a natural boundary with the Kingdom of Scotland; on the south by the English Channel; on the east by the Straits of Dover (Pas de Calais) and the North Sea; and on the west by the Atlantic Ocean, Wales and the Irish Sea. Area, 50,337 square miles. Population (1931) 37,354,917.

Relief.—There is a natural orographic division into the hilly districts of the north, west and south-west, and the undulating downs and low-lying plains of the east and south-east. In the extreme north the Cheviot Hills run from east to west, culminating in the Cheviot, 2,676 feet above mean sea level. Divided from the Cheviots by the Tyne Gap is the Pennine Chain, running N. by W. to S. by E., with their highest point in Cross Fell, 2,932 feet above mean sea level. West of the Pennines are the Cumbrian Mountains, which contain in Sawfell Pike (3,210 feet) the highest land in England, and east of the Pennines are the Yorkshire Moors, their highest point being Urre Moor (2,489 feet). South of the Pennines are the Peak of Derbyshire (2,088 feet) and Dartmoor (High Willhays, 2,039 feet). In the western county of Shropshire are the isolated Wrekin (1,335 feet), Long Mynd (1,674 feet), and Brown Clee (1,805 feet); in Herefordshire the Black Mountain (2,310 feet), in Worcestershire the Malvern Hills (1,395 feet), in Monmouthshire (now usually grouped with Wales) the Sugar Loaf (1,955 feet) and Coity (1,905 feet), and the Cotswold Hills of Gloucestershire contain Cleeve Cloud (1,134 feet).

Hydrography.—The Thames is the longest and most important river of England, with a total length of 210 miles from its source in the Cotswold Hills to its outflow into the North Sea, and is navigable by ocean-going steamers to London Bridge. The Thames is tidal to Teddington (60 miles from its mouth) and forms county boundaries almost throughout its course; on its banks are situated London, the capital of the British Empire; Windsor Castle, the home of the Sovereign, Eton College, the first of the public schools, and Oxford, the oldest university in the kingdom. The Severn is the longest river in Great Britain, rising in the north-eastern slopes of Plinlimmon (Wales) and entering England in Shropshire, with a total length of 220 miles from its source to its outflow into the Bristol Channel, where it receives on the left the Bristol Avon, and on the right the Wye, its other tributaries being the Vyrnwy, Tern, Stour, Teme and Upper (or Warwickshire) Avon. The Severn is tidal below Gloucester, and a high bore or tidal wave sometimes reverses the flow as high as Tewkesbury (13½ miles above Gloucester). The scenery of the greater part of the river is very picturesque and beautiful, and the Severn is a noted salmon river, some of its tributaries being famous for trout. Navigation is assisted by the Gloucester and Berkeley Ship Canal (16½ miles), which admits vessels of 350 tons to Gloucester. The Severn Tunnel, 2½ miles below the Sharpness Bridge, begun in 1873 and completed in 1886 (at a cost of £2,000,000) after many difficulties from flooding, is 4 miles 624 yards in length (of which 2½ miles are under the river). A road bridge over the Severn estuary, between Aust

Cliff and Beachley Peninsula, is under discussion; probable cost £2,500,000 to £3,000,000. Of the remaining English rivers those flowing into the North Sea are the Tyne, Wear, Tees, Ouse and Trent from the Pennine Range, the Great Ouse (160 miles) from the Central Plain, and the Orwell and Stour from the hills of East Anglia. Flowing into the English Channel are the Sussex Ouse from the Weald, the Itchen from the Wiltshire and Hampshire Hills, and the Axe, Teign, Dart, Tamar and Exe from the Devonian Hills; and flowing into the Irish Sea are the Mersey, Ribble and Eden from the western slopes of the Pennines and the Derwent from the Cumbrian Mountains. The English Lakes are noteworthy rather for their picturesque scenery and poetic associations than for their size. These lie mainly in Cumberland, but partly in Westmorland and Lancashire, the largest being Windermere (10 miles long), Ullswater and Derwentwater.

Islands.—The Isle of Wight is separated from Hampshire by the Solent, total area 147 sq. miles, population (1931), 88,400. The climate is mild and healthy, and many watering places have grown up during the last century. Capital, Newport, at the head of the estuary of the Medina, Cowes (at the mouth) being the chief port; other centres are Ryde, Sandown, Shanklin, Ventnor, Freshwater, Yarmouth, Totland Bay, Seaview and Embridge. The Scilly Islands, 25 miles from Land's End, consist of about 40 islands, with a total area of about 4,000 acres, only St. Mary's, Tresco, St. Martin's, St. Agnes and Bryher being inhabited, population (1931), 1,732. The capital is Hugh Town, in St. Mary's. The climate is unusually mild, and vegetation luxuriant, semi-tropical plants flourishing in the open. Lundy (= Island), 11 miles N.W. of Hartland Point, Devon, is about 2½ miles long, and 1 mile broad, with a total area of about 1,050 acres (mainly picturesque), and a population of about 50; it contains the seat of the proprietor of the island and two lighthouses.

Climate.—The south-westerly winds from the Atlantic Ocean penetrate to the heart of the country, affecting the temperature of the greater part of the kingdom, and only the coastal regions of the east have a modified continental climate. The mean annual temperature is about 50° Fahrenheit, varying from 52° in the Scilly Islands to 48° at the mouth of the Tweed, and generally the west of England is mild and wet in winter and cool and less wet in summer, while the east is cool and dry in winter and spring and hot and less dry in summer and autumn, the wettest region being the Lake district of Cumberland and the driest in the Thames estuary and the Lincolnshire Wash. The climate of England is influenced by the much-indentured coastline of the west and by the flow of warm water in the Gulf Stream Drift, which emerges from the Gulf of Mexico as a strong current about 30 miles wide, with a speed of about 4 miles per hour. This stream gradually loses its velocity and becomes shallower and cooler until at about 35° N. lat. (off Cape Hatteras) it ceases to be a distinct stream, and its surface waters are carried across the Atlantic by the prevailing westerly winds to impinge upon the Scilly Isles and the south-western projection of England and to flow East along the south coast (providing Southampton with a double tide) and North along the west coast to Scotland and to part of the north-western coast of Europe.

EARLY INHABITANTS.

Prehistoric Man.—Paleolithic and Neolithic remains are abundantly found throughout England. The Neolithic period is held to have merged into the Bronze Age about 2000 to 1500 B.C., and a date between these years has been given to Stonehenge (10 miles N. of Salisbury, Wiltshire) which consists of two circles of menhirs (the largest monolith being 22½ feet in height), only 16 remaining in position in the outer circle, while two of the five triple sets are still in position in the inner circle. The village of Avebury and its surroundings were scheduled in 1937, and in 1943 about 1000 acres at Avebury were purchased by the National Trust, thus preserving the Circle of megalithic monuments, the Avenue, Silbury Hill, &c., relics of Stone Age culture of 1500-1800 B.C., which make this one of the most important archaeological sites in Europe.

The Celtic Invasion.—In the latter part of the Bronze Age the Goidels, a people of Celtic race, and in the Iron Age other Celtic races of Brythons and Belgae invaded the country and brought with them Celtic civilization and dialects, place names in England bearing witness to the spread of the invasion over the whole kingdom.

The Roman Conquest.—After the Roman conquest of Northern Gaul (57-50 B.C.) the annexation of Britain was contemplated for some years. Julius Caesar raided Britain in 55 B.C. and 54 B.C. In 43 A.D. Claudius sent Aulus Plautius with a well-equipped army of 40,000 men and himself visited Colchester (Camulodunum) and Londinium. The British leader from 48-51 A.D. was Caratacus (Caractacus), who was finally captured and sent to Rome. By 70 A.D. the conquest of South Britain was completed, a great revolt under Boudicca (popularly "Boadicea"), Queen of the Iceni, Norfolk (pronounced "Iokny"), being crushed in 61 A.D. In 122 A.D. the Emperor Hadrian visited Britain and built a continuous rampart, known as Hadrian's Wall, from Wallsend to Bowness (Tyne to Solway). The Romans administered Britain as a Province under a Governor, with a well defined system of local government, each Roman municipality ruling itself and the surrounding territory. Colchester, Lincoln, York, Gloucester and St. Albans stand on the sites of five Roman municipalities, while London was the centre of the road system and the seat of the financial officials of the Province of Britain. Well preserved Roman towns have been uncovered at (or near) Silchester (Calleva Atrabatum), 10 miles south of Reading, Wroxeter (Viroconium), near Shrewsbury, and St. Albans (Verulamium) in Hertfordshire. Four main groups of roads radiated from London, and a fifth (the Fosse) ran obliquely from Ermine Street (at Lincoln), through Leicester, Cirencester and Bath to Exeter. Of the four groups radiating from London one ran S.E. to Canterbury and the coast of Kent, a second to Silchester and thence to parts of Western Britain and South Wales, a third (now known as Watling Street) ran through Verulamium to Chester, with various branches, and the fourth reached Colchester, Lincoln, York and the eastern counties. Christianity reached the Roman Province of Britain from Gaul in the 3rd century (or possibly earlier), Alban, "the protomartyr of Britain", being put to death as a Christian during the persecution of Diocletian (June 22, 303), at his native town Verulamium. The Bishops of Londinium, Eboracum (York), and Lindum (Lincoln) attended the Council of Arles in 314. The Roman garrison of Britain was much harassed in the 4th century by Saxon pirates, who invaded the eastern counties. A system of coast defence was organized from the Wash to Spithead, with forts at Brancaster, Burgh Castle (Yarmouth), Walton (Felixstowe), Bradwell, Reculver, Richborough, Dover and Lympne, and along the coast to Pevensey and Porchester (Portsmouth). About 350 A.D. incursions in the north of Irish (Scotti) and Picts became most formidable, and towards the end of the 4th century many troops were removed from Britain for service in other parts of the Roman Empire. Early in the 5th century Gaul was taken from the Romans by Teutonic invaders and Britain was cut off from Rome. The last Roman garrison was withdrawn from Britain in 442 A.D. and the S.E. portion was conquered by the Saxons. The Latin-speaking Celts of England were replaced by their heathen and Teutonic conquerors, to the submergence of the Christian religion and the loss of Latin speech. According to legend, the British King Vortigern called in the Saxons to defend him against the Picts, the Saxon chieftains being Hengist and Horsa, who landed at Ebbsfleet, Kent, and established themselves in the Isle of Thanet. Bede, a Northumbrian monk, author of the Ecclesiastical History at the opening of the 8th century, described these settlers as Jutes, and there are traces of differences in Kentish customs from those of other Anglo-Saxon kingdoms.

Anglo-Saxons and Normans.—What happened in Britain during the 150 years which elapsed between the final break with Rome and the coming of St. Augustine is shrouded in the deepest mystery. The Jutes, the Saxons and the Angles (whose gods Tiw, Woden, Thunor and Frigg are commemorated in "Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday") were converted to Christianity by a mission under Augustine (dispatched by Pope Gregory in 597), which established Archbishopsrics at Canterbury and York, and England appears to have been again converted by the end of the 7th century. In the 8th century Offa, King of Mercia, is stated to have built a wall and rampart, afterwards known as Offa's Dike, from the mouth of the Dee to that of the Wye, as a protection against the Welsh. The greatest of the English kingdoms was Wessex, with its capital at Winchester, and the greatest of the Wessex kings was Alfred the Great (871-901), who resisted the incursions of the Northmen (Danes) and fixed a limit to their advance by the Treaty of Wedmore (878). In the 10th century the Kings of Wessex recovered the whole of England from the Danes, but subsequent rulers were unable to resist the invaders, and England paid tribute (Danegelt) for many years, and was ruled by Danish Kings from 1016 to 1042, when Edward the Confessor was recalled from exile. In 1066 Harold (brother-in-law of Edward and son of Earl Godwin of Wessex) was chosen King of England, but after defeating (at Stamford Bridge, Yorkshire, Sept. 25) an invading army under Harald Godrada, King of Norway (aided by the outlawed Earl Tostig, of Northumbria, younger son of Earl Godwin), he was himself defeated at the Battle of Hastings on Oct. 14, 1066, and the Norman Conquest secured the throne of England for Duke William of Normandy.

The German Invasion.—The "Invasion of England" predicted by Hitler and first attempted by German aircraft in the summer and autumn of 1940 was rendered abortive by the victories of the Royal Air Force in the "Battle of Britain," August 11 to September 15, 1940.

(a) Administrative Counties, excluding County Boroughs, named in the First Schedule of the Local Government Act, 1933; (b) Geographical Counties, including County Boroughs.

Lords Lieutenant of Counties.—The actual words used in the Letters Patent relative to these appointments are "His Majesty's Lieutenant of and in the County of . . ." and this is the official title whether the individual appointed be a Peer or a Commoner. In documents of the highest formality the proper term is therefore "His Majesty's Lieutenant." In less formal and informal documents and colloquially, the style "Lord Lieutenant" has been applied to H.M. Lieutenants, Peers and Commoners alike, for a great many years.

The Government of London

LONDON, the capital of England and of the British Empire, and the greatest city in the world, is situated on both banks of the River Thames, 50 miles from the North Sea.

The City of London (see pp. 664-670) represents London within its ancient boundaries.

The City of Westminster, which is bounded by the City of London on the east, by Chelsea and Kensington on the west, by Paddington, St. Marylebone and Holborn on the north, and by the Thames and Chelsea on the south, was formed into a borough by the London Government Act of 1899, and was created a city by Royal Charter of Oct. 19, 1900, the Council consisting of a Mayor, 10 Aldermen and 60 Councillors. Extending from the eastern end of the Strand to Kensington Gardens, and from Oxford-street to the Thames, it includes within its boundaries a large number of the finest buildings in London. The Abbey and the Roman Catholic Cathedral, the Houses of Parliament and the Law Courts, Buckingham Palace and St. James's, and the principal Government offices, Clubs and Theatres are situated in Westminster, which also includes the fashionable residential districts of Mayfair and Belgravia. Westminster is the richest of the London areas.

Metropolitan Boroughs.—Under the London Government Act of 1899 the administrative functions of the various vestries in the Metropolitan districts surrounding the City of London were transferred to 28 Metropolitan Boroughs, of which one became afterwards the City of Westminster. The area covered by these boroughs extends northwards to include Stoke Newington, southwards to Wandsworth and Lewisham, eastwards to Woolwich, and westwards to Hammer-smith.

London County Council.—For County purposes the affairs of London are administered by the London County Council (see pp. 671-674), which was created by the Local Government Act of 1888.

Miscellaneous Authorities.—For Police purposes the administration is invested in the Corporation of London as to the City Police and in the Home Office as to the Metropolitan Police. The water authority is the Metropolitan Water Board; while the River Thames is administered as to its tidal portion by the Port of London Authority and above Teddington by the Thames Conservancy; the Port Health Committee of the Corporation is the Health Authority for the River, the lighthouse and pilotage authority being Trinity House. The bridges are maintained in the City of London by the Bridge House Estates Committee of the Corporation and in the remaining area by the London County Council. London Transport (formerly known as the London Passenger Transport Board) controls passenger transport in the metropolitan area (omnibuses and trams, and metropolitan above- and under-ground railways). The London and Home Counties Joint Electricity Authority (5 Millbank, Westminster, S.W.1) provides (or secures the provision of) electricity throughout an area of 1,797 sq. miles.

THE CITY OF LONDON represents London within its ancient boundaries and is governed by the Corporation of London, which consists of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Commons in Common Council assembled. The City of London is the financial and business centre of London and includes the head offices of the principal banks, insurance companies and mercantile houses, in addition to buildings ranging from the historic interest of the Roman Wall, the Norman Tower and the 15th century Guildhall, to the massive splendour of St. Paul's Cathedral and the architectural beauty of Wren's spires (Bow Church, St. Bride's, St. Dunstan's in the East, etc.).

London, described by Tacitus (born A.D. 55; died A.D. 120) as "widely renowned for the number of its business men and the density of its traffic" is said to have received from the Romans municipal institutions which have endured in their main features to the present day. In Saxon times it was, in reality, a small independent State, and its burghesses maintained their independence even after the Battle of Hastings. William the Norman only gained possession of their city by means of a treaty with them, and about eight years after he granted a charter, which is still preserved. It is addressed to William the Bishop, Godfrey the Portreeve, and all the Burghesses, and promises that they shall be "law worthy" (i.e., possessed of privileges) as they were in the days of Edward the Confessor. The mayoralty was established in recognition of the corporate unity of the citizens by King John in 1191; the first holder under the new name being Henry Fitzailwyn, who filled the office for 21 years. On his death a new charter was granted by King John in 1214, which directed the Mayor to be chosen annually, which has ever since been done; though in early times the same individual often held the office more than once. A familiar instance is that of "Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London" (in reality four times, A.D. 1397, 1398, 1406, 1419); and many modern cases have occurred. The earliest instance of the phrase "Lord Mayor" in English is in 1414. It is used more generally in the latter part of the 15th century and becomes invariable from 1535 onwards. At Michaelmas the Livery men in Common Hall choose two Aldermen who have served the office of Sheriff for presentation to the Court of Aldermen, and one is chosen to be Lord Mayor for the ensuing mayoral year. The Lord Mayor is sworn into office on November 8, and on the following day presented to the Lord Chief Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice, to make the final declaration of office—the pagent being popularly known as the Lord Mayor's Show.

Aldermen are mentioned in the 11th century and their office is of Saxon origin. They were elected annually between 1377 and 1394, when a charter of Richard II. directed them to be chosen for life. The Common Council, elected annually on St. Thomas's Day (Dec. 21), was, at an early date, substituted for a popular assembly called the Folkmote. At first only two representatives were sent from each ward, but the number has since been greatly increased, some wards having as many as 16 members, and none less than four. Sheriffs were Saxon officers; their predecessors were the wit-neeves and portreeves of London and Middlesex. At first they were officers of the Crown, and were named by the Barons of the Exchequer; but King John gave the citizens permission to choose their own Sheriffs, and the annual election of Sheriffs became fully operative under the charter of 1199. The citizens lost this privilege, as far as the election of Sheriff of Middlesex is concerned, by the Local Government Act, 1888; but the Liverymen continue, as heretofore, to choose two Sheriffs of the City of London, who are appointed on Midsummer Day, and enter on office at Michaelmas.

* The above is abstracted from the 312th "City's Cash Account" of the series extant—A.D. 1633 to 1944-45. (The Accounts earlier than A.D. 1633 were believed to have been destroyed in the Fire of London; but two years' Accounts, temp. Queen Elizabeth, have been discovered among the Corporation Archives, as exceptions to that belief.) The Volumes are in full detail, signed by the Auditors, and in perfect preservation. The above extract is from the 161st Annual Printed Account of the Corporation, A.D. 1784 to 1794-45.

Officers.—The Recorder was first appointed in 1298. The Chamberlain is an ancient officer. There were at one time two Chamberlains—the King's Chamberlain and the Chamberlain of the Guildhall. The former appears to have fallen into abeyance circa 1319. The first contemporary record of the office of City Chamberlain is 1276. The Town Clerk (or Common Clerk) is mentioned in 1275 and the Common Serjeant in 1291.

The work of the Corporation is assigned to Ward Committees consisting of 6 Aldermen and 29 Common Councilmen, and to Committees specially appointed. These Committees present reports to the Court of Common Council. The Ward Committees are:—City Lands, Bridge House Estates, Coal and Corn and Finance, Rates Finance, Improvements and Town Planning, Streets, Public Health, Central Markets, Cattle Markets, Billingsgate and Leadenhall Markets, Spitalfields Market, Police, Port of London Health, County Purposes, Library (Library, Art Gallery and Museum), City of London Schools, Freemen's School, Music (Guildhall School of Music and Drama), General Purposes, Officers and Clerks, Law and City Courts, Valuation, Civil Defence, and Airport. The Committees specially appointed are:—Gresham (City side), Epping Forest, West Ham Park, Visiting (City of London Mental Hospital), Special, Elementary Education, Assessment, Privileges, Special (Emergency), Food Control, Special (Labour) and Special (War Damage Act, 1941).

The Honourable the Irish Society, which manages the Corporation's Estates in Ulster, consists of a Governor and 5 other Aldermen, the Recorder, and 29 Common Councilmen, of whom one is elected Deputy Governor.

The City's Estate, in the possession of which the Corporation of London differs from all other municipalities in the Kingdom, is managed by the City Lands Committee, the Chairmanship of which carries with it the title of "Chief Commoner."

The Coal and Corn and Finance Committee manages the funds derived from the City's Estate and other sources and receives accounts of the Bridge House Estates (which are employed in the provision and maintenance of London, Blackfriars, Southwark and Tower Bridges). The coal and corn dues have been abolished and the cost of Civil Government and other public services, including the maintenance of Open Spaces (Burnham Beeches, Coudson and other Commons, Bunhill Fields, Highgate Woods, Queen's Park, Kilburn, etc.) are met from the City's Cash, which also provides for the expenses of Epping Forest and West Ham Park, open spaces under the management of separate Committees.

Since the year 1760 the sum of £18,564,374 has been expended by the Corporation from the City's Cash on various public services, exclusive of charges on Rates.

The Rates Finance Committee supervises the expenditure of all moneys derived from the Rates. Expenditure chargeable to the Poor Rate, unlike that from funds under the management of the Coal and Corn and Finance Committee, is subject to audit by the Ministry of Health.

FREEDOMS AND ADDRESSES (CITY OF LONDON)

The Freedom of the City of London may be acquired after strict compliance with regulations made from time to time pursuant to resolutions of the Court of Common Council. The names of applicants by Redemption who have complied with the regulations are submitted to the Court of Common Council for approval, those applying through the medium of a Livery Company being submitted to the Court of Aldermen in a similar manner. Persons entitled to the Freedom of the City by Patrimony or Servitude (according to the Custom of London) may be admitted without application to either Court. The fees payable upon admission to the Freedom are applied towards the maintenance of the City of London Freeman's School at Ashted, Surrey, to which the Orphans of Freemen are eligible for election as Foundation Scholars. Freemen of the City of London are themselves eligible for admission to Almshouses at Brixton.

The Freedom of the City of London is conferred by Presentation as a mark of high distinction for exceptional services to the Country, the Empire or to the world at large. As only those persons who owe allegiance to the Crown may be admitted to the Freedom, they alone can be recorded as Freemen. Foreign personages of eminence are, however, occasionally voted the Honorary Freedom, but their names cannot be entered on the Roll of Freemen in view of their nationality. Their names, together with those of the recipients of the Freedom by Presentation, are recorded in the Roll of Fame. Upon occasions when it is desired to honour a person who is already a Freeman of the City, his name is added to the Roll of Fame with a record of the resolution to present him with the Honorary Freedom.

Addresses of Welcome are occasionally offered to Foreign Sovereigns and Presidents pursuant to resolutions of the Court of Common Council.

THE CITY GUILDS (LIVERY COMPANIES).

The Livery Companies of the City of London derive their name from the assumption of a distinctive dress or livery by their members in the XIV century.

The order of precedence (according to and Report of Municipal Corporations' Commissioners, 1837) and omitting extinct companies, is given in parentheses after the name of each Company. There are 79 Guilds in existence. The Combmakers, Silk-throwers, Silkmen, Pin-makers, Soapmakers, Hatbandmakers, Tobacco Pipe Makers, Long-bow Stringmakers, Woodmongers, Starchmakers and Fishermen are extinct.

About 10,000 Liverymen of the Guilds are entitled to vote at elections in Common Hall.

The Livers of the Stationers and Newspaper Makers (415), Liners (225), and Merchant Taylors (303), are the most numerous, the Bowyers (25), the smallest.

THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL.

Offices, The County Hall, Westminster Bridge, S.E.1.

Hours 9.30 to 5 (Monday to Thursday; 5.30 Friday), 9.30 to 12.30 (Saturday).

Meets on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m.

THE London County Council was constituted under the Local Government Act of 1888. London is an administrative county, covering an area of 117 square miles.

The City of London is an electoral division of the county. The County of the City of London is a county for non-administrative purposes, such as quarter sessions, justices, &c.; and the Metropolis outside the City is a county for non-administrative purposes, by name the County of London, in which the justices continue their judicial duties.

The Council comprises a chairman, 20 aldermen, and 124 councillors, together 145, or, if the chairman be also an elected member or alderman, 144. The term of office for aldermen is 6 years, and ten retire every 3 years. The councillors are elected for 3 years. The councillors are elected directly by the ratepayers, and the councillors elect the aldermen. The positions of aldermen and councillors are the same, except as to the term of office.

The method by which the Council discharges the multitudinous duties entrusted to it is a generous delegation of powers to committees under well defined rules, subject to the reservation to the Council itself of all questions of principle, and to periodical reports of action taken. In addition to members of the Council, co-opted members are included on the following committees: Education, Hospitals and Medical Services, Housing and Public Health, Mental Hospitals and Social Welfare.

In present circumstances meetings of the Council are held fortnightly in session time, and the Standing Committees normally meet fortnightly, except the Parliamentary, Social Welfare, and Welfare of the Blind Committees, which meet monthly.

The Finance Committee have important statutory powers. No costs, debt or liability exceeding £50 may be incurred by the Council except upon a resolution passed on an estimate submitted by the Finance Committee. The Council is the principal money-raising body for all the local authorities in the county, and has a net debt, according to the latest returns, of £80,329,035 (£52,755,185 represents debt incurred for housing), and an annual expenditure on revenue account of about 50 millions. Advances amounting to £5,570,000 have been made on loan under the Housing Acts, and the Small Dwellings Acquisition Acts in respect of the building and purchase of houses by private enterprise.

The General Purposes (at present Civil Defence and General Purposes) Committee are responsible for the conduct of the administrative work of the Council or of any of its Committees or departments, the consideration of new proposals as to their bearing on the law of the land or the Council's general lines of action, standing orders and orders of reference to committees, determination of differences between committees, alterations of boundaries, etc.

The Education Committee comprise thirty eight members of the Council and twelve co-opted members. Women as well as men must be included.

The Education Act, 1944, imposes on the Council as local education authority the duty of surveying immediate and prospective needs within the Administrative County and the submission to the Minister of Education of proposals for securing that education throughout the three progressive stages, primary, secondary and further education, shall be available to meet the needs of the population. Radical changes are involved and planning is in progress.

The Establishment Committee are charged with the direction of the central administrative staff (with certain exceptions). They also deal with rates of pay and conditions of appointment and service of all staff in the Council's employment (except teaching staff and certain trade employees).

The Hospitals and Medical Services Committee, among other duties affecting public health, are responsible for the maintenance of 74 hospitals, with accommodation for 36,400 patients (involving maintenance expenditure of approximately £6,900,000 a year), the treatment of tuberculosis, the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of venereal disease or any other epidemic or infectious disease, the administration of the Midwives Acts and the Council's ambulance service.

The Housing and Public Health Committee deal with matters relating to the housing of the working classes and perform the duties cast upon the Council by the various Housing Acts, including the clearance of insanitary areas and providing the necessary accommodation areas and also accommodation required for the relief of overcrowding. The total capital expenditure incurred up to March 31, 1945, in respect of all schemes was £66,818,520. The income (rents, &c.) for 1945-46 in respect of dwellings and housing estates of the Council is estimated at £5,052,045. The total of the Exchequer subsidy in respect of the Council's housing operations is estimated at £1,066,602. The Committee also administer the Metropolitan Main Drainage system which covers about 179 square miles, including certain districts outside the county, and comprises about 400 miles of main, storm-relief, intercepting and outfall sewers, twelve pumping stations, two sewage precipitation stations, and five sludge vessels. The total capital outlay on main drainage is over £18,000,000, and further expenditure is in progress.

The Mental Hospitals Committee administer the duties falling on the Council under the Lunacy and Mental Treatment Act, 1890 to 1930, and the Mental Deficiency Acts, 1913 to 1927. The Council has mental hospitals and institutions with about 30,000 patients.

The Social Welfare Committee administer the duties in connexion with poor relief, other than hospital treatment, including the maintenance of institutions, etc.

The Town Planning Committee deal with questions relating to the carrying out of street improvements and construction of bridges, tunnels and ferries and also prepare schemes to control development of land, including building and rebuilding operations, and regulate under statute such matters as the construction and safety of buildings, building lines, space about buildings, means of escape in case of fire, and dangerous structures.

The Council has had a provisional plan of redevelopment for the County of London prepared by its Architect (J. H. Forshaw, M.C., M.A., F.R.I.B.A.) and Sir Patrick Abercrombie, M.A., F.R.I.B.A., and has approved certain of its principles.

These include a system of three major ring roads linked with radial roads, three principal density zones, a standard of open space per 1,000 population of 4 acres within the County plus 3 outside, and the recognition of the community structure of London. It has authorised in principle several immediate projects including a programme of road works, the redevelopment of certain reconstruction areas and of the South Bank of the Thames, as well as the provision everywhere of 2½ acres of open space per 1,000 population as a step towards the ultimate standard of 4 acres.

Amongst the Other Powers and Duties of the Council may be mentioned the following:—Sanctioning of loans required by the councils of the metropolitan boroughs; acquisition and maintenance of parks and open spaces; the sanctioning of local sewers; the naming of streets and numbering of houses; appointment of district surveyors; controlling storage of explosive substances and petroleum; infant life protection; gas, gas-meter and electricity-meter testing; testing weights and measure; the granting of licences for music, dancing, boxing and wrestling; historic buildings and monuments; administration of the Shops Acts, the Children Act, and the Young Persons (Employment) Act; licensing and inspection of employment agencies; registration of massage establishments; licensing of premises under the Cinematograph Act; registration of motor cars; collection of duties on motor cars, dog, game, gun and certain other local taxation licences; registration of War charities; and welfare of blind persons.

The Expenditure of the Council, including loans to other local authorities, is met by two chief sources of supply—capital money raised by external borrowing, or by the use of the Sinking Fund of the Council's debt, the Superannuation Fund, etc., and current income raised in a county rate or by the revenue of undertakings. Certain contributions, including education grants, housing subsidies, etc., are also received from the Imperial Exchequer. All borrowings by the Council are subject to the provision of a sinking fund, under Treasury approval, sufficient to repay all expenditure generally within a period of 60 years (in a few cases the limit is 80 years). The total Stock outstanding at 31st March, 1945, was £121,198,004.

The Rating for the year 1945-46, as shown by the statement below (which relates to rate accounts only), amounted to 6s. 6½d. in the pound over the whole county, including the City, and a further rate over the county outside the City of 2d. in the pound, together 6s. 9½d. The total rate for 1944-45 was 6s. 9½d. The Rateable Value of the County of London on April 6, 1945, was estimated to be approximately £53,500,000—a 1d. rate over the whole county producing £223,000.

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF THE 20 ALDERMEN AND 124 COUNCILLORS.

The Sixteenth London County Council was elected March 4, 1937, for Three years; the electors returned 75 Labour representatives and 49 representatives of the Municipal Reform Party. The Aldermen (12 Labour, 8 MR) increase the Labour Majority to 30. Under the provisions of the Local Elections and Register of Electors (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1939, the triennial election due in March, 1940, was postponed. Under the Representation of the People Act, 1945, an election will be held in March, 1946, and the County Aldermen continue in office until that time.

BIRMINGHAM.

BIRMINGHAM (Warwickshire), the second City in England, situated in the heart of industrial England, is the chief centre of the hardware trade of the world. It is practically equidistant from the other important trade centres in the country, being 111 miles from London, 85 miles from Manchester and 91 miles from Bristol. The municipal area is 51,147 acres (about 80 square miles), with an estimated population (1940) of 1,002,603.

It is estimated that over 1,500 distinct trades are carried on in the city, the chief industries being the manufacture of buttons, bedsteads, plastic goods, chocolate, chemicals, cycles and their component parts, electroplate, guns, magnetos, railway rolling-stock, glass, motor-cars and motor-cycles, motor tyres, nuts and bolts, pens and nibs, tubes, tyre valves, tools, toys, electrical apparatus, wire, wireless sets and components, jewellery and brass working, etc.

Gas, water and electricity are supplied by the Corporation, who also own the transport undertaking, markets and Municipal Bank. An Information Bureau has been opened at the Council House to deal with all enquiries relating to the Municipal, Industrial and Tourist facilities of Birmingham.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall, built in 1832-1850 on the lines of the Temple of Jupiter Stator at Rome, with a large hall; the Council House and Corporation Art Gallery and Museum (1878); the University (Aston Webb, 1909); the Central Library; the 13th century Church of St. Martin (rebuilt 1873); the Cathedral (formerly St. Philip's Church, built by Archer, a pupil of Wren's), the Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Chad (Eugin), and the Methodist Central Hall. The first section of Birmingham's new Hospital Centre, erected at Edgbaston at a cost of approximately £1,000,000, is claimed to be the finest of its type in Europe. A Municipal Airport, on the main Birmingham-Coventry Road, was opened in July 1939. Birmingham was incorporated as a borough in 1838, and was created a city in 1889; it is governed by a Lord Mayor and City Council of 34 Aldermen and 102 Councillors. The generally accepted derivation of "Birmingham" is the ham or dwelling-place of the ing or the family of Berm, presumed to have been a Saxon. Between the 12th and 16th centuries, the de Berminghams were Lords of the Manor.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46), Major A. S. Giles, O.B.E., M.C.
Recorder, Paul E. Sandlands, O.B.E., K.C. (1944).
Stipendiary Magistrate, The Rt. Hon. Lord Ilkerton (1910).
Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace, Sir Frank Wiltshire, M.C. (1918).

LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL (Lancashire), on the right bank of the river Mersey, 3 miles from the Irish Sea and 194 miles N.W. of London, is one of the greatest trading centres of the world and the principal port in the United Kingdom for the Atlantic trade. The municipal area is 30,204 acres (which includes 2,883 acres in the bed of the river Mersey) (about 43 square miles, excluding the bed of the river), with a population at the census of 1931 of 855,688. Liverpool's Warship Week total was £14,889,660, which easily beat Glasgow's record, and enabled Liverpool to adopt the battleship Prince of Wales and to make up for the loss of the Ark Royal. Small investors contributed £1,221,000. The docks, on both sides of the river, have a linear quaysage of about 37 miles, and the Gladstone docks can accommodate the largest vessels afloat. The dock authority is the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board. The chief import is grain, those next in importance being sugar, fruit, oil, timber, cotton and provisions.

The principal buildings are the Cathedral, erected from the designs of Sir Gilbert Scott and consecrated in 1924; when completed this will be the largest ecclesiastical building in England; St. George's Hall, erected 1838-1854, from the designs of Harvey Lonsdale Elmes, at a cost of £300,000, and regarded as the finest modern example of classical architecture; the Town Hall, erected 1754 from the designs of Wood; the Walker Fine Art Gallery; the University; the Royal Infirmary; the Municipal Offices; and the Custom House. A Roman Catholic Cathedral, designed to be the largest in the world, is in course of erection on Brownlow Hill.

In 1943 the City Council approved a proposal to take a lease from the National Trust (for 99 years at a nominal rent) of Speke Hall, an Elizabethan "black and white" mansion, built around a quadrangle.

Liverpool was incorporated as a borough early in the 13th century and was created a city in 1880. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor and a City Council which comprises 39 Aldermen and 118 Councillors. The name is believed to be derived from Norse words meaning the "Pool of the Slopes."

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46), Luke Hogan, M.B.E. Recorder, Edward G. Hemmide, K.C. (1909).
Stipendiary Magistrate, Stuart Deacon (1910).
President, Court of Passage, Sir Wm. F. Kyffin Taylor, K.B.E., K.C.
Town Clerk, W. H. Baines, C.B.E., LL.M., £3,300 (1936).
Clerk of the Peace, L. S. Holmes.

MANCHESTER.

MANCHESTER (Lancashire), the centre of the world's cotton trade, is 12½ miles N.W. of London. The municipal area is 27,255 acres (about 43 square miles), the population at the census of 1921 being 766,211 (after adjustment).

Manchester is the distributing centre of the cotton spinning and weaving of Lancashire for the whole world, and of butter and foodstuffs for the most densely populated part of England. It also contains large engineering and machinery works and factories of hats, clothing, indiarubber goods, chemicals, &c. The city is connected with the sea by the Manchester Ship Canal (opened in 1894), which has a total length of 35½ miles, an excavated depth of 28 to 30 feet, and a general excavated bottom width of 120 feet.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall, erected in 1877 from the designs of Alfred Waterhouse, R.A., together with a large extension (E. Vincent Harris); the Royal Exchange, built in 1869, enlarged at cost of £800,000 and reopened by King George V. in 1921; the Central Library, opened by King George V. in 1934; the Art Gallery; the Whitworth Institute; the 17th century Chetham Library; the Rylands Library (1899), which includes the Althorp collection; the University (Owens College); and the 15th century Cathedral (formerly the parish church). Manchester is one of the principal centres of political, literary and scientific advancement, and the Hallé Concerts have placed the city in the forefront of musical development. The Manchester Guardian newspaper exercises a widespread influence throughout the English-speaking world.

The town received a charter of incorporation in 1838 and was created a city in 1853. The City Council consists of 36 Aldermen and 108 Councillors. The Latin name of the city was Mancunium.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46), Hugh Lee.

Recorder, Sir Noel Barré Goldie, K.C. (1935).

Stipendiary Magistrate, J. Wellesley Orr, M.A. (1927).

Town Clerk, Philip B. Dingle, LL.M. (1944).

SHEFFIELD.

SHEFFIELD (Yorkshire, West Riding), the chief centre of the heavy steel and cutlery trade, is situated in the extreme south of Yorkshire, 15.9 miles N.N.W. of London, at the junction of the Sheaf, Porter, Rivelin and Loxley with the river Don. The city has an area of 39.598 acres (about 61 square miles), and a larger acreage of parks and woodland than any other city, with the exception of Birmingham; it has a population (estimated in 1943) at 483,320. The principal industries are the manufacture of heavy steel (armour plates, rails, tyres, axles, engine castings, &c.), cutlery, and precision tools and instruments, in addition to engines and general machinery, confectionery, bicycles, iron and brass founding, silver refining, brush making, silver plating, and many other industries. Sheffield plate (silver sealed to copper by process of fusion) made during the years 1740-1850, when electro-plating superseded the process, is greatly prized by collectors.

The principal buildings are the 14th century Parish Church (St. Peter's), the Town Hall (1837 and 1926), the Cutlers' Hall (1832), Corn Exchange, Market Hall, Museum, Mappin Art Gallery, Ruskin Museum, the University, City Hall (1932), and Central Library and Graves' Art Gallery (1934).

Sheffield was created a borough on Aug. 24, 1843, a county borough in 1888 and a city in 1893, the Chief Magistrate becoming a Lord Mayor in 1897. The Corporation includes 25 Aldermen and 75 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46), Charles William Gascoigne.

Recorder, N. L. C. Macaskie, K.C. (1941).

Master Cutler, 1945-46 (Master of the Cutlers Company of Hallamshire), Samuel Eric Osborn.

Town Clerk, John Heys (1941).

LEEDS.

LEEDS (Yorkshire, West Riding) is favourably situated in the coal and iron districts of England, 18.5 miles N.N.W. of London, and is the centre of the woollen industry and the wholesale clothing trade. The city has also the largest share of the leather trade of the United Kingdom, in addition to large rope works, printing works, and factories of thread, glass and earthenware, with metal casting, machinery and machine tools, steam engines, railway wagons, and other engineering works. Leeds is connected with the Mersey in the west by the Leeds and Liverpool Canal, with the Humber in the east by the Aire and Calder Navigation, and is an important railway centre.

60 square miles), the population at the census of 1931 being 464,863.

The principal buildings are the Civic Hall (opened by King George V. in 1933), the Town Hall (1858), the Philosophical Hall, the Municipal Buildings and Art Gallery (1884), the University and the Leeds Institute (1865). The Parish Church (St. Peter's) was rebuilt in 1840; the 17th century St. John's Church has a fine interior with a famous Renaissance screen; the 17th century Mill Hill Chapel was rebuilt in 1849. Kirkstall Abbey (about 3 miles from the centre of the city), founded by Henry de Laci in 1152, is one of the most complete examples of Cistercian houses now remaining. Temple Newsam, birthplace of Lord Darnley, was acquired by the Corporation in 1922. The present mansion, a stately edifice in red brick, was built by Sir Arthur Ingram in 1620. Adel Church, about 3½ miles from the centre of the city, is a fine Norman structure.

Leeds was first incorporated by Charles I. in 1626, made a county borough in 1839, and was created a city in 1893. The Lord Mayor presides over a corporation of 26 Aldermen and 78 Councillors. The earliest forms of the name are Loidis or Ledes, the origin of which is obscure.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46), David Beever.

Recorder, C. Paley Scott, K.C. (1943).

Stipendiary Magistrate, Ronald Sykes (1944).

Clerk of the Peace, Geoffrey Copson Peck (1933).

BRISTOL.

BRISTOL is situated partly in Gloucestershire and partly in Somerset, is a City and County of itself, and is 11.9 miles W. of London. The present municipal area is 24,406 acres with a population, at the census of 1931, of 397,012 (estimated at 415,500 in 1939). Bristol is noted for its maritime history. Within one mile of the centre of Bristol are the beautiful Clifton and Durdham Downs (442 acres), popular places of resort and recreation. Clifton is a favourite place of residence, standing on the steep bank of the Avon, 200 to 300 feet above mean sea level.

The principal industries are paints, jams, pickles, and preserves, milling, aircraft design and construction, shipbuilding, rope making, chocolate, sugar and tobacco factories, motor and general engineering, clothing, printing, paper bag and cardboard making, glass and earthenware, soap, leather and chemical works, breweries, and copper, lead and iron works. The docks comprised within the Port are the City Docks, 6 miles from the entrance to the river Avon; the Royal Edward and Avonmouth Docks, at the mouth of the river; and the Portishead Docks, to the westward of the river entrance. The net register tonnage of vessels that arrived with cargoes and in ballast Foreign and Coastwise in 1945 was 5,782,713 and of those departed 5,562,507, while the value of Imports and Exports of merchandise was stated at £35,724,000 for 1937. The principal imports are grain, cereal products, wood pulp, feeding stuffs, fruit, provisions, frozen meat, sugar, metals, ores, oil-seeds, paper, petroleum and petroleum spirit, timber, tobacco and general merchandise, and the chief exports are machinery, manufactured oils, chemicals, strontia, hardware, and unmanufactured clay.

The chief buildings, in addition to the 14th century Cathedral (rebuilt by Street 1868-1888), with Norman Chapter House and gateway, the 14th century Church of St. Mary, Redcliffe (described by Queen Elizabeth as "the fairest, goodliest, and most famous parish church in England"), the 15th century Temple Church, and Wesley's Chapel, Broadmead, are Canynge's House, the Merchant Venturers' Almshouses, the Council House, Guildhall, Exchange (erected from the designs of John Wood in 1743), Art Gallery, Central Library, Cabot Tower, the University and Clifton College. The Clifton Suspension Bridge, with a span of 702 feet over the Avon, was projected by I. K. Brunel (the designer of the Great Eastern) in 1836, but was not completed until 1864. It is a remarkable engineering triumph, affords by far the best view of the wonderful Avon Gorge and the low level road from Bristol to the Royal Edward and Avonmouth Docks, known as Portway, and it is seldom that such a panoramic view is to be found in such close proximity to a great city. The Leigh Woods and Nightingale Valley on the opposite side of the river to Clifton Down add enormously to the beauty of the surroundings. Bristol offers to the visitor a wealth of beauty and charm of historic and romantic associations which can in no other part of the country be surpassed.

Bristol was a Royal Borough before the Norman Conquest, and in 1899 its Chief Magistrate (Sir Herbert Ashman) became a Lord Mayor. The Corporation includes 28 Aldermen and 84 Councillors. The earliest forms of the name are Brigstove and Bristol.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46) James Owen.
High Steward and Lord Lieutenant, His Grace the Duke of Beaufort, K.G., G.C.V.O.
Recorder, Ferdinand Philip Maximilian Schiller, K.C. (1935).
Town Clerk, Alexander Pickard, C.B.E. (1945).

KINGSTON UPON HULL.

HULL (officially "Kingston upon Hull") is situated in the East Riding of Yorkshire, at the junction of the Hull with the Humber, 22 miles from the North Sea and 18 miles N. of London. The municipal area is 14,433 acres, with a population of 328,700 (1938).

Hull is the third port in the United Kingdom and the chief port of North-Eastern England. Ten docks cover a water area of 210 acres and are equipped with every modern appliance for the rapid handling of cargoes. Hull has the reputation of being the cheapest port in the U.K. The net register tonnage of vessels using the docks in 1938 was 7,163,692, while the value of imports (grain, oilseed, provisions, wood, fruit, wool, &c.) and exports (cotton, woollen goods, coal, machinery, cattle food, &c.) of merchandise for 1938 was stated at £86,855,571. Hull is the largest centre of the seed-crushing and oil-extracting industry in the world, the premier fishing port of the U.K. and an important centre of the flour-milling industry; other manufactures are acetates, canisters, cement, cocoa-butter, cod-liver oil, colours and chemicals, electric lamps, whale oil refinery and edible oil manufacture, mill machinery, oil cakes and meals, paint, paper, polishes, power alcohol, radiators, rope, ship-building, soap, starch, surgical dressings, tanning, tar products, varnish, vegetable oils, wood milling, &c.

The chief buildings, in addition to the Docks, are the Parish Church (Holy Trinity), 272 feet in length (the longest parish church in England), the Guildhall (1713), Exchange (1866), Chamber of Commerce, Corn Exchange, Market Hall, City Hall, Custom House, Dock Offices, Royal Institution (1854), Wilberforce House, Trinity House (1753), and the Ferens Art Gallery. A Municipal Art Gallery has been established under the gift of the late Mr. T. R. Ferens. A municipal airport was opened in 1929.

The name of Wyke-upon-Hull was changed to Kingston upon Hull by Edward I. in the 13th century. The town was incorporated in 1440 and made a county borough in 1888. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor, 21 Aldermen and 63 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46) Herbert Harrison.
Recorder, G. H. B. Streetfield, M.C., K.C. (1944).
Town Clerk, E. H. Bullock (1945).

BRADFORD.

BRADFORD (Yorkshire, West Riding), 192 miles N.N.W. of London and 8 miles W. of Leeds, in the coal and iron district, is the centre of the woollen and worsted trade. The city is connected with the Mersey in the west and with the Humber in the east by canals, and is an important railway centre. The municipal area is 25,504 acres (about 40 square miles), with a population at the 1931 Census of 298,041.

The principal textile industries are worsteds, woollens, silks and cottons, and there are also important engineering and iron works, and quarries of freestone.

The chief public buildings, in addition to the 15th century Cathedral (formerly the Parish Church) and Bolling Hall (14th century), are the Town Hall (1873) the tower of which contains a clock with 4 dials, chimes and a carillon, Exchange (1867), Cartwright Memorial Hall (1904), commemorating the inventor of the power loom, the Windsor (Baths and Public Halls, 1905), Grammar School (Charter, 1662), Technical College (1882), the Mechanics' Institute (1832), Kirkgate Market Hall, and Britannia House (1933).

The Saxon township was created a parliamentary borough in 1832, a borough in 1847, a county borough in 1888, and a city in 1907. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor, 20 Aldermen and 60 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46), Kathleen Chambers.
Recorder, Frank Beverley, M.C. (1926).
Stipendiary Magistrate, F. J. O. Coddington (1934).
Town Clerk, N. L. Fleming (1939).

NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE.

NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE (Northumberland), a City and a County on the north bank of the Tyne estuary, 8 miles from the North Sea and 272 miles N. of London, has an area of 11,401 acres (18 square miles) and a population of 283,250 at the Census of 1931.

The city is conveniently placed on the estuary, in the neighbourhood of the Northumberland and Durham coalfields. The exports of the Port of Newcastle upon Tyne (River Tyne) include coal, chemicals, cotton, canvas, linen, woollen and jute goods, firebricks and fireclay goods, lead goods, oils, oil fuel (as cargo and bunkers), pig iron, steel manufactures, and tar, pitch and resin; the chief imports being burnt ore, sulphur ore, cement, chemicals, fruit and vegetables, grain, iron manufactures, iron ore, petroleum spirit, pig lead, provisions, steel manufactures and timber. For the Customs Ports of Newcastle and North and South Shields the net tonnage of ships engaged in the Foreign Trade was 5,015,106 for arrivals and 6,223,388 for departures in 1938 the value of ocean-borne trade being £30,668,104 in 1938; the net tonnage of arrivals in the Coasting Trade was 4,115,016 and of departures 2,892,988 net tons in 1938. The chief industries are shipbuilding, ship repairing, iron and steel manufactures, engineering and boilermaking shops, locomotives, lead and copper works, chemical manufactories, &c.

The principal buildings include the (11th century) "New" Castle, of which the walls, keep and chapel are well preserved, the Cathedral (St. Nicholas), St. Andrew's Church (11th century), St. John's (12th century), St. George Jesmond, the Roman Catholic Cathedral of Hexham and Newcastle, Holy Trinity War Memorial, Guildhall (1658), Moot Hall (1810), Exchange (1860), Central Public Library and Laing Art Gallery and Museum, Wood Memorial Hall (1870), and the Custom House. The beauty of Jesmond Dene (gift of 1st Lord Armstrong) is much appreciated by visitors, as well as the Town Moor, a tract of over 600 acres of open grassland. The city is connected with the south bank of the Tyne by six bridges, viz.:—High Level (Stephenson) for road and rail, Swing bridge (road), Redheugh (road), Scotswood suspension (road), King Edward VII. (rail), Tyne (road).

The pre-Norman borough of Monkchester was re-named Newcastle in the 11th century when the castle was erected as a defence against the Scots. In 1200 it was made a county and in 1259 was incorporated. The City Corporation now includes a Lord Mayor (1900), 19 Aldermen and 57 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46), James Alexander, Clydesdale.

Sheriff, (1945-46), James Pearson.

Recorder, Godfrey Russell Vick, K.C. (1939).

Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace, John Atkinson (1937).

NOTTINGHAM.

NOTTINGHAM (Nottinghamshire), the principal manufacturing centre of hosiery and lace, stands on the left bank of the Trent, where the tributary stream Leen enters the river, 125 miles

N.N.W. of London. The municipal area is 26,166 acres ($25\frac{1}{2}$ square miles), and includes the historic old market-place of $5\frac{1}{2}$ acres in the centre of the city, recently laid out as an ornamental square and garden. Population, Census of 1931, 268,801 (est. at 283,000 in 1939).

The city is connected with the North Sea and the Atlantic by the river Trent and canals and is an important railway centre. The principal industries are cotton, silk and merino hosiery, lace, bleaching, dyeing and spinning, tanning, engineering and cycle works, brewing, the manufacture of tobacco, chemicals, furniture, typewriters, and colour printing.

The chief buildings are the 11th century Nottingham Castle (restored in 1878, and now the City Museum and Gallery of Art), Wollaton Hall (1580-88) owned by the Corporation and now a Natural History Museum, St. Mary's, St. Peter's, and St. Nicholas's Churches, the Roman Catholic Cathedral (Pugin, 1842-4), the Council House, opened by H.R.H. the Duke of Windsor (then Prince of Wales) in 1929, the Guildhall and Court House (1887), Shire Hall, Albert Hall, University College, The General and other Hospitals, Eye Infirmary, and New University College.

Snotengham or Notingham, "the home of the sons of Snod" (the Wise), is the Anglo-Saxon name for the Celtic Notogogobanc, "Cave Homes." The city possesses a Charter of Henry II., and was created a city in 1897. The Corporation comprises 16 Aldermen and 43 Councillors (including the Lord Mayor and Sheriff).

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46), Edmund Greaves Underwood.

Recorder, Sir Albion Richardson, K.C., C.B.E.

Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace, J. E. Richards (1936).

UPON AVON

STRATFORD-UPON-AVON (a municipal borough in Warwickshire, on the banks of the River Avon) had a population (Census 1931) of 11,616. As the birthplace of Shakespeare the borough is visited annually by travellers from all parts of the globe.

Shakespeare's Birthplace (April 23, 1564). Holds library of rare editions, transcripts of Midland parish registers, deeds, manor rolls, pictures, and relics.

Guild Chapel and Guildhall.—Founded A.D. 1269. In the old hall young Shakespeare could witness strolling companies performing (mentioned in Records). Now part of Grammar School. In chapel, mural, scriptural and other paintings, done by medieval artists (now largely decayed, but copies were taken and preserved in the Fisher and Nichols folio 1836-38, in colours).

Hall's Croft.—Unaltered old-timbered residence of Susanna, poet's elder daughter, wife of Dr. John Hall, churchwarden and poet's executor.

Harvard House.—Rebuilt 1596 by Alderman Thomas Rogers, whose descendant (John Harvard) founded Harvard University, U.S.A.

Hathaway Cottage.—At Shottery, one mile from the centre of the town, is the little thatched farmstead, the undisturbed birthplace of Anne Shakespeare, poet's wife, who bore him three children, Susanna, Hamnet, and Judith. Contains Tudor and Jacobean furniture.

King Edward VI. School.—Founded circa 1429 by Rev. Thomas Jolyffe, M.A., of Stratford.

Stripped of property and endowment at dissolution of monasteries; re-endowed and improved by King Edward VI. Here Shakespeare acquired his "small Latin and less Greek."

Shakespeare Memorial.—Mainly due to munificence of C. E. Flower (1830-92) and his wife. Group comprises Library, with 10,000 volumes of Shakespeare editions and dramatic literature, including Irving and other collections of Sir Theodore Martin and William Jaggard. Gallery of pictures (including unique "Droeshout" portrait). Gardens. Theatre, burnt down in 1926, rebuilt 1932, with 1,200 seats, chiefly by U.S.A. generosity.

New Place.—Shakespeare bought this estate in 1597; retired to it about 1610; died there April 23, 1616. House was repaired about 1702, and demolished by Rev. Francis Gastrell, 1759.

The Cage.—For 36 years the home of Judith, poet's younger daughter, who married Thomas Quiney, vintner; an unhappy union.

Town Hall.—Erected 1633; rebuilt 1768. Contains details of the unbroken sequence of Bailiffs, Mayors and Town Clerks since A.D. 1553 (including the poet's father, John Shakespeare); also High Stewards since 1610. Exhibits: Gainsborough portrait of Garrick, original charters, and four old English maces.

Trinity Church.—Dates from 13th Century. Shelters remains of poet and family.

Wilmote.—House of Shakespeare's mother, Mary Arden, purchased 1930; a fine timbered manor-house of the Tudor period, with dovecot. The ancient barns house a large collection of obsolete agricultural and dairying implements.

PREVIOUS to the formation of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade the churchwardens and overseers in every parish were required, under Acts passed in 1707 and 1774, to provide fire engines and ladders, and the leading insurance companies also organised private fire brigades, which were amalgamated in 1832 to form the London Fire Engine Establishment. On January 1, 1866, under the Metropolitan Fire Brigade Act, 1865, the Metropolitan Board of Works took over these responsibilities and established "The Metropolitan Fire Brigade," which (Jan. 1, 1867) also took over the fire escapes provided by the Royal Society for the Protection of Life from Fire, a voluntary body which had been founded in 1836. Under the Local Government Act, 1888, the London County Council assumed control of the Fire Brigade, and in 1904 the title of the Brigade was altered to "London Fire Brigade."

The Brigade has been augmented very considerably for the purposes of the late War, and its members, with those of the Auxiliary Fire Service (A.F.S.) showed unflinching courage and devotion to duty throughout the "Battle of London." The London Fire Brigade and London Auxiliary Fire Service in common with all fire brigades in England, Wales, and Scotland had been taken over by the State for the duration of the war, and formed part of the National Fire Service.

The number of calls to which the Brigade responded during the year ended Dec. 31, 1944, totalled 20,572, the fires numbered 9,129, chimney fires 2,369, false alarms 2,418, and the calls to perform special services numbered 656.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF WALES AND MONMOUTHSHIRE

Position and Extent.—Wales and Monmouthshire occupy the extreme west of the central southern portion of the island of Great Britain, with a total area of 8,066 sq. miles; they are bounded on the N. by the Irish Sea, on the S. by the Bristol Channel, on the E. by the English counties of Cheshire, Salop, and Hereford, and on the W. by St. George's Channel. The greatest length from N. to S. (Point of Air to Barry Island) is 126 miles, and the greatest breadth from W. to E. (St. David's Head to the English border) is 92 miles. Separated from the mainland by the Menai Straits is the Welsh island-county of Anglesey or Môn (276 sq. miles), communication with which is facilitated by the Menai Suspension Bridge (5,000 ft. long), built by Telford in 1826 (freed from toll as from Jan. 1, 1941) and by the tubular railway bridge (1,100 ft. long) of the L.M. & S. Railway, built by Stephenson in 1850. Holyhead harbour, on Holy Isle (N.W. of Anglesey), provides accommodation for a fast steam packet service to Kingstown and Dublin (70 miles).

Population.—The population at the Census of 1931 was 2,593,014 (inclusive of Monmouthshire) estimated at mid-year 1940, 2,523,000.

Relief.—Wales is generally mountainous, the chief systems being those of North Wales (Snowdon 3,560 ft., Carnedd Llywelyn 3,424 ft., Carnedd Dafydd 3,426 ft.); Berwyn (Aran-fawdd 2,970 ft.); Powys (Plinlimmon 2,462 ft., Drygan Fawr 2,115 ft., Radnor 2,163 ft.); and the Black Mountain, Brecknock Beacons and Black Forest ranges (Carmarthen Van 2,632 ft., Brecon Beacon 2,862 ft., Pen-y-gawr fawr 2,660 ft.).

Hydrography.—The principal river of those rising in Wales is the Severn (see England), which flows from the slopes of Plinlimmon to the English border, dividing Montgomeryshire on its way. The Wye (130 miles) also rises in the slopes of Plinlimmon, and flows between Radnor and Brecon on its course to England. The Uk (56 miles) flows into the Bristol Channel, through Monmouthshire. The Dee (70 miles) rises in Bala lake and flows through the Vale of Llangollen, where an aqueduct (built by Telford in 1805) carries the Pontcysyllte branch of the Shropshire Union Canal across the valley. The estuary of the Dee is the navigable portion, 14 miles in length and about 5 miles in breadth, and the tide rushes in with dangerous speed over the "Sands of Dee." The Towy (68 miles), Teifi (50 miles), Taf (40 miles), Dovey (30 miles), Taf (25 miles), and Conwy (24 miles), the last named broad and navigable, are wholly Welsh rivers.

The largest natural lake in Wales is Bala (Llyn Tegid) in Merionethshire, 4 miles long and about 1 mile wide; Lake Vyrnwy is an artificial reservoir, about the size of Bala, and forms the water supply of Liverpool, while Birmingham is supplied from a chain of reservoirs in the Elan and Claerwen valleys.

EARLY HISTORY.

Celts and Romans.—The earliest inhabitants of whom there is any record appear to have been subdued or exterminated by the Goidels (a people of Celtic race) in the Bronze Age, and a further invasion of Celtic Brythons and Belgae followed in the ensuing Iron Age. A collection of Celtic bronze and iron weapons, etc., found near Holyhead in 1943, and regarded as one of the most important finds of pre-Roman antiquities yet made in Wales or the whole of Britain, is housed in the National Museum of Wales at Cardiff. The Roman conquest of South Britain and Wales was for some time successfully opposed by Caratacus (Caractacus or Caradog), Chieftain of the Catuvellauni and son of Cunobelinus (Cymbeline) King of the Atrebatians. In A.D. 78 the conquest of Wales was completed under Julius Frontinus, and communications were opened up by the construction of military roads from Chester to Caerleon-on-Usk and Caerwent, and from Chester to Conway (and thence to Carmarthen and Neath). Christianity was introduced (during the Roman occupation) in the 4th century, and the faith thus established was preserved (after the withdrawal of the Roman garrison) by native effort, and was carried to the northernmost corners of the British Isles by missionaries to the Hebrides and to the Orkneys and Shetlands.

The Anglo-Saxon Attacks.—The Anglo-Saxon invaders of South Britain drove the Celtic Goidels and Erythrons into the mountain fastnesses of Wales, and into Strathclyde (Lumberland and S.W. Scotland) and Cornwall, giving them the name of Waelisc, or Welsh (=Foreign). The West Saxons' victory of Deorham (577) isolated the Waelisc of Wales from those of Cornwall, while the battle of Chester (633) similarly cut off communication with the Waelisc of Strathclyde. In the 8th century the boundaries of the Welsh were further restricted by the annexations of Offa, King of Mercia, and counter-attacks were largely prevented by the construction of an artificial boundary from the Dee to the Wye (Offa's Dike). In the 9th century Rhodri Mawr united the country against further incursions of the Saxons by land and against the raids of Norse and Danish pirates by sea, but at his death his three provinces of Gwynedd (N.), Powys (Mid.) and Dehenbarth (S.) were divided among his three sons—Anarawd, Mervyn and Cadell—the son of the last-named being Howel Dda, who codified the laws of the country, while Llewelyn ap Seissyllt (husband of the heiress of Gwynedd) again united the provinces and reigned as Prince from 1015-1022.

The Norman Conquest.—After the Norman conquest of England William I. created Palatine counties along the Welsh frontier, and Robert FitzHamon, the Norman Earl of Gloucester, raided South Wales and erected fortresses from the Wye to Milford Haven. Henry I. introduced Flemish settlers into South Wales, but after his death the Welsh rose under the leadership of Griffith ap Rhys and routed the Norman-Flemish forces at the fords of the Teifi (Cardigan) in 1136. From the early years of the 12th century the house Gwynedd, in the north, gained an ascendancy over the whole of Wales, and Llewelyn ap Iorwerth was in constant strife with England for recognition as an independent sovereign; but Llewelyn, the son of Iorwerth, was killed in 1242 during hostilities between the Welsh and English, and his brother David was captured and executed by the English in 1283. On Feb. 7, 1301, Edward of Carnarvon, son of Edward I., was created Prince of Wales.

The Welsh are a distinct nationality, with a language and literature of their own, and the national bardic festival (Eisteddfod), instituted by Prince Rhys ap Griffith in 1176, is annually maintained. These Eisteddfodau (sessions) form part of the Gorsedd (assembly), which is believed to date from the time of Prydian, a ruling prince in an age many centuries before the Christian era.

RELIGIONS AND LANGUAGES OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

Gt. Britain and Ireland.—The inhabitants of Great Britain and Ireland are almost entirely Christians, the exceptions being about 300,000 Jews and a small number of non-Christian immigrants. In England the Church of England (with an Episcopal form of government), and in Scotland the Church of Scotland (with a Presbyterian form of government), are the "Established Religions." The Church was disestablished in Ireland in 1869, and in Wales in 1920. There has been no religious census since 1851, but many of the religious bodies publish estimates of membership. The language of the people is English. In Wales and Monmouthshire (1931 Census), 77,932 persons aged 3 years and upwards were Welsh-speaking only, and 811,329 were able to speak English and Welsh.

The "Cockney" dialect, formerly prevalent in the more congested areas of London, is being gradually superseded by speech more closely related to "The King's English" as a result of free and compulsory education and the increase of "Listening-in" licences. Strictly speaking, a "Cockney" is one born within the sound of Bow Bells, the chimes of a City Church partly destroyed by enemy action.

Gaelic is still spoken in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, there being 7,069 persons speaking Gaelic only (Ross and Cromarty 3,435, Inverness 3,123, Argyll 335, other counties 176), and 137,149 speaking Gaelic and English at the Census of 1931. Gaelic is being revived in Eire.

CARDIFF.

CARDIFF (Glamorgan), at the mouth of the rivers Taff (Caer Taff), Rhymney and Ely, the port of the South Wales coalfields, has a municipal area of 16,785 acres, and a population (1938) of 227,765. Within the city are 90 separate industries; including ship repairing, rope making, steel, copper, lead and zinc works, iron and steel foundries, patent fuel works, engine wagon works, flour mills, chemical factories, paper mills, breweries, jam, vinegar and ice factories, tin plate and paint works. The chief imports are grain, timber, pit-wood, ore, fruit, butter, cheese, frozen and chilled meat, live cattle, canned goods, sugar, potatoes. The exports include coal, coke, patent fuel, iron and steel manufactures, tin plates, &c.

The principal buildings are Cardiff Castle, built in the 11th century, the National Museum of Wales, Public Library, the University College of South Wales and Monmouthshire, the Registry of the University of Wales, Technical College, City Hall and Law Courts, Glamorgan County Hall, Offices of the Welsh Board of Health, and the "Hall of Nations" (1938). The city returns 3 members to Parliament.

The Lord Mayor (1945-46), W. R. Wills.
Stipendiary Magistrate, W. Hugh Jones, K.C.
Recorder, Hildreth Glyn-Jones, K.C. (1945).
Town Clerk & Clk. of Peace S. Tapper Jones, LL.B.

SWANSEA.

SWANSEA (Glamorgan), a County Borough, at the mouth of the River Tawe, is the chief centre of the copper, tinplate and spelter industry of the United Kingdom. The trade of the port also includes coal, patent fuel, ores, and the import and export of oil. There is also a large ship-repairing industry. The municipal area is 24,342 acres, with a population at the census of 1931 of 164,825. Included in the borough is the health resort of Mumbles.

The principal buildings are the Norman castle (rebuilt in 1330), the Royal Institution of South Wales, founded in 1835 (containing Museum and Library), the University College at Singleton, the 17th-century Grammar School, founded by Hugh Gore, and the Guildhall, containing Brangwyn panels. Swansea was chartered by the Earl of Warwick, circa 1158-1184, and further charters were granted by King John, Henry III., Edward II., Edward III. and James II., & from Cromwell and Lord Marcher. The borough returns 2 members to Parliament.

Mayor (1945-46), W. Dewitt.
Recorder, Major Herbert Edmund Davies, K.C. (1944).
Town Clerk, T. B. Bowen, M.A.

THE ARMS OF SCOTLAND.

ARMS.—Or, a lion rampant gules, armed and langued azure, within a double-tressure flory counter-flory of the second. CREST.—An Imperial crown proper, surmounted by a lion sejant-guardant gules crowned or, holding in his dexter paw a naked sword and in the sinister a sceptre both proper. SUPPORTERS.—Two unicorns argent, armed, tufted and un-guled or, crowned with imperial and gorged with eastern crowns, chains reflexed over the backs or; the dexter supporting a banner charged with the arms of Scotland, the sinister supporting a similar banner azure, thereon a saltire argent. MOTTOES.—Over the arms, "In Defens"; under the arms "Nemo me impune lacessit."

Tourist Traffic.

The amount spent in the U.K. (1937) by incoming visitors was probably about £23,000,000, and U.K. travellers spent abroad about £37,000,000. Canada estimated her revenue (1937) from incoming visitors (mostly from U.S.) at $295,000,000 (nearly £50,000,000). In 1938 British subjects on pleasure cruises to places out of Europe numbered—Outward 22,437; Inward 21,864.

THE KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND.

Position and Extent.—The Kingdom of Scotland occupies the northern portion of the main island of Great Britain and includes the Inner and Outer Hebrides, and the Orkney, Shetland, and many other islands. The Kingdom lies between $60^{\circ} 51' 30''$ and $54^{\circ} 38'$ N. latitude and between $1^{\circ} 45' 30''$ and $6^{\circ} 14'$ W. longitude. Its southern neighbour being the Kingdom of England, with the Atlantic Ocean on the N. and W., and the North Sea on the E. The greatest length of the mainland (Cape Wrath to the Mull of Galloway) is 274 miles, and the greatest breadth (Buchan Ness to Applecross) is 154 miles. The total area of the Kingdom is 30,410 square miles. The population (at the census of 1931) was 4,842,554, a decrease of 39,943 since the census of 1921; estimated population (June 30, 1940), 5,030,000.

Land's End to John o' Groats.—The customary measurement of the Island of Great Britain is from the site of John o' Groats' house, near Duncansby Head, Caithness (at the N.E. extremity of the island) to Land's End, Cornwall (at the S.W. extremity), a total distance of 603 miles in a straight line and (approximately) 900 by road. But the site of the house of John de Groot (with its 8 doors and octagonal table, to solve the question of precedence between John and his 7 brothers) is about 4 miles S.W. of Duncansby Head, while Dunnet Head (also in Caithness) extends farther N. than Duncansby. John de Groot is believed to have obtained permission to settle in Caithness (from the Netherlands) in the reign of James IV. (1488-1513).

Relief.—There are three natural orographic divisions of Scotland. The Southern Uplands have their highest points in Merrick (2,764 feet), Ben Nevis (4,406 feet), and Cairnsmuir of Carsphairn (2,612 feet), in Kirkcudbright; Hartfell (2,651 feet) in Dumfriesshire; and Whitecomb (2,695 feet) in Peebles. The Central Lowlands include the valleys of the Tay, Forth and Clyde, and the cities of Edinburgh, the capital of the Kingdom, and Glasgow, its principal seaport. The heather-clad Northern Highlands extend almost from the extreme north of the mainland to the central lowlands, and are divided into a northern and southern system by the Great Glen; they contain, in the central Grampian Hills, Ben Nevis (4,406 feet), the highest point in the British Isles, and Ben Muich Dhui (4,296 feet). The Cheviot Hills form a natural boundary between Scotland and England, their highest point being Cheviot Hill (2,676 feet).

Hydrography.—The principal river of Scotland is the Clyde (106 miles), one of the most important rivers in the world, with the greatest commercial estuary in Scotland. The Clyde is formed by the junction of Daer and Portrail water, and flows through the city and port of Glasgow to the Firth of Clyde. During its course it passes over the picturesque Falls of Clyde, Bonnington Linn (30 feet), Corra Linn (84 feet), Dundaff Linn (20 feet), and Stonebyres Linn (80 feet), above and below Lanark. The Tweed (96 miles) has important woollen industries ("Tweeds") in its valley. The Tay, noted for its salmon, and the longest river in Scotland (177 miles), flows into the North Sea, with Dundee (the centre of the jute industry) on the estuary, which is spanned by the Tay Bridge (2 miles 73 yards), opened in 1887 to replace that destroyed by a gale (Dec. 28, 1879). The Dee (90 miles), a noted salmon river, flows through scenery of unequalled beauty to the North Sea at Aberdeen. The Spey (110 miles), the swiftest flowing river in the British Isles, and also noted for its salmon and its scenery, flows into the Moray Firth. The Forth (66 miles), navigable to Stirling, is spanned by the Forth (Railway) Bridge, constructed 1882-9 at a cost of £3,000,000, with a length of 5,330 ft. (with approaches 8,295 ft.).

The construction of a Forth (Road) Bridge (a suspension bridge $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles long with 2 main spans of 2,400 feet) close to the railway bridge, was under discussion in 1944 (approximate cost £3,260,000).

In August, 1945, the Tummel-Gary and Gairloch hydro-electric scheme was confirmed by the Secretary of State for Scotland.

The Falls of Glomach in Ross-shire, with a drop of 370 feet, are the highest in the British Isles; the Grey Mare's Tail (Dumfriesshire) is 200 feet.

The lochs are the principal hydrographic feature of the Kingdom, both on the mainland and in many of the islands. The largest in the Kingdom and in Great Britain is Loch Lomond (24 miles long), with Lochs Awe, Tay, Rannoch and Erich in the Grampian valleys; Loch Ness (24 miles long and 800 feet deep), with Lochs Oich and Lochy, in the Great Glen; and Lochs Shin (20 miles) and Mares in the northern Highlands.

Orkney.—About 6 miles N. of the Caithness coast, separated from the mainland by the Pentland Firth, is the island county of Orkney, a group of 90 islands and islets ("holms" and "skerries"), of which one-third are inhabited. The total area of the group is $375\frac{1}{2}$ square miles, with a population (1911) of 25,856. Kirkwall, in Pomona (or mainland), the largest island of the group, is the capital of the county. Many of the Orkney (and Shetland) Islands contain brochs (Pictish towers) and other Pictish and Scandinavian remains. Scapa Flow, between Pomona and Hoy, was the war station of the Grand Fleet from 1914-19 and the scene of the scuttling of the surrendered German High Seas Fleet (June 21, 1919).

Shetland.—About 50 miles N. of Orkney (with the detached Fair Isle at 25 miles N.) is the island county of Shetland, a group of about 200 islands and islets, of which 29 are inhabited. The total area of the group is 551 square miles, with a population (1911) of 27,911. Lerwick, in Mainland (the largest and principal island), is the capital of the county. Fair Isle, the southernmost of the group, is famous for hand-knitted hosiery, and Unst for the finest of the Shetland woollen work, for which the county is famous. Muckle Flugga, about 1 mile N. of Unst, is the most northerly of the group and of the British Isles ($60^{\circ} 51' 30''$ N. lat.).

Western Islands.—Off the W. coast, at varying distances, and extending from Sutherland to Argyll, are over 500 islands and islets, of which 102 are inhabited. The total area of these Western Islands is 2,812 square miles, with a population of close on 80,000, but owing to the mountainous surface of the land only about 300 square miles are under cultivation. The Hebrides.—Until the closing years of the 13th century "The Hebrides" included other Scottish islands in the Firth of Clyde, the peninsula of Kintyre (Argyllshire), the Isle of Man, and the (Irish) Isle of Rathlin. The origin of the name is stated to be the Greek Eboudai, latinized as Hebudes by Pliny, and corrupted to its present form. The Norwegian name Sudreyjar (Southern Islands) was latinized as Sodorensis, a name that survives in the Anglican bishopric of "Sodor and Man." The Inner Hebrides include the island of Skye (643 square miles—capital, Portree, famous as the refuge of Prince Charlie after his defeat at Culloden, Invernesshire, in 1746), which contains the Cuillins (Sgurr-na-Banachdich, 3,243 feet), Red Hills (Ben Caillich, 2,403 feet), and many other picturesque mountains; Mull (367 square miles), containing Ben More (3,185 feet), Ben Bui (2,354 feet), and Ben Creach (2,289 feet); Jura (160 square miles), with a chain of hills culminating in the Paps of Jura, Beinn-an-Oir (2,571 feet), and Beinn Chaolais (2,407 feet); Islay (235 square miles), and many smaller islands. The Outer Hebrides, separated from the mainland by the Minch, include Lewis-with-Harris (770 square miles), celebrated for its homespun "Tweeds," North Uist, South Uist, Barra and other islands. Thirteen miles W. of Stornoway (the largest town of Lewis and of the Hebrides) are the "Druidical" remains of Callernish, a well-preserved series of monolithic circles, cruciform in general arrangement, but generally regarded as a heathen monument of the remote Stone Age.

Climate.—The climate of Scotland is influenced by the much indented coast line and (like that of South Britain) by the Gulf Stream Drift. The climate is more bracing and less treacherous than that of England. The mean winter temperature is in the neighbourhood of 35°, and that of summer about 58° Fahrenheit.

The offices of the Scottish Travel Association are at 20, York Place, Edinburgh.

EARLY HISTORY.

Prehistoric Man.—North Britain appears to have been invaded in Palaeolithic times by a succession of races, who died out or were exterminated by other immigrants. The earliest race of which there is any record is that since known as the Picts, believed to be of non-Aryan origin, and stated to have been named Picti by the Romans on account of the tribal habit of painting the body. The Picts seem to have inhabited the whole of North Britain and to have spread over the north of Ireland. Pict's Houses are most frequent in the northern counties of Caithness and Sutherland and in the Orkney Islands, and it is generally believed that the Picts were driven northwards by later Celtic immigrants. Celtic Goidels, Brythons and Belgae arrived from Belgic Gaul during the latter part of the Bronze Age and in the early Iron Age, and except in the extreme north of the mainland and in the islands the civilization and speech of the people were definitely Celtic at the time of the Roman invasion of Britain.

The Roman Invasion.—In A.D. 80 Julius Agricola extended the Roman conquests in Britain by advancing into Caledonia as far as the "Grampian" Hills, but after a victory at Mons Graupius (since corrupted to "Grampius") he was recalled, and no further advance was made for about 60 years, when the Roman frontier was carried to the isthmus between the Forth and Clyde and marked by the Wall of Pius, towards which ran military roads from the Cheviots. The Roman occupation of Southern Caledonia was not so effective as that of South Britain, and before the close of the second century the northern limit of Roman Britain had receded to Hadrian's Wall, from the Tyne to Solway Firth.

The Scots.—During the later years of the Roman occupation the garrison was continually harassed by Pictish tribes north of the Wall, aided by Scots (the Gaelic tribe then dominant in Ireland), and when the garrison was withdrawn these Picts and Scots were the principal enemies of the Celtic Brythons, who are believed to have called in the Saxons to protect them from the invasions of their neighbours. A relic of the struggle between Pict and Brython is still to be seen in the Catraig, or Picts' Work Dyke, of Roxburgh (from Torwoodlee, near Galashiels, to Peel Fell in the Cheviots). Christianity was introduced into Southern Caledonia about 380 by missionaries from Romanized Britain, who penetrated to the northern districts and islands. After the withdrawal (or absorption) of the Roman garrison of Britain there were many years of tribal warfare between the Picts and Scots, the Brythonic Waelisc (Welsh) of Strathclyde (South-west Scotland and Cumberland), and the Anglo-Saxons of the Lothians. The Waelisc were isolated from their kinsmen in Wales by the victory of the West Saxons at Chester (632), and towards the close of the 6th century the Scots under Kenneth Macalpine became the dominant power in Caledonia. In the reign of Malcolm I. (943-954) the Brythons or Waelisc (Welsh) of Strathclyde were brought into subjection, the lowland kingdom of the English (Lothian) being conquered by Malcolm II. (1005-1034). From the close of the 11th century until the middle of the 16th there were constant wars between Scotland and England, the outstanding figures in the struggle being William Wallace, who defeated the English at Stirling Bridge (1297), and Robert Bruce, who won the victory of Bannockburn (1314). James IV. and many of his nobles fell at the disastrous battle of Flodden (1513), and in 1563 James VI., the Stuart King of Scotland and the heir to the Tudor line of England (his mother, Mary "Queen of Scots," was the great-granddaughter of Henry VII.), succeeded Queen Elizabeth on the throne, his successors reigning as Sovereigns of Great Britain. After the abdication (by flight) of James VII. and II., the crown devolved upon William III. (grandson of Charles I.) and Mary (daughter of James VII. and II.), and their issue failing, upon Anne (second daughter of James VII. and II.). Anne's children died young, and the throne devolved upon George I. (great-grandson of James VI. and I.). In 1689 Graham of Claverhouse "roused the Highlands" on behalf of James VII. and II., but died after a military success at Killicrankie. In 1715, armed risings led to the indecisive battle of Sheriffmuir, but the movement died down until 1745, when the "Young Pretender" defeated the Royalist troops under Sir John Cope at Prestonpans and advanced to Derby in England (1746). From Derby, the adherents of "James VIII. and III." (the title claimed for his father by the Young Pretender) fell back on the defensive, and the Jacobite movement was finally crushed by the Royalist troops under the Duke of Cumberland at Culloden (April 16, 1746).

The Hebrides did not become part of the Kingdom of Scotland until 1266, when they were ceded to Alexander III. by Magnus of Norway. Orkney and Shetland fell to the Scottish Crown as a pledge for the unpaid dowry of Margaret of Denmark, wife of James III., in 1468, the Danish suzerainty being formally relinquished in 1590.

Scotland is represented in the Imperial Parliament by 74 members, of whom 38 represent Counties, 33 represent Burghs and 3 represent Scottish Universities. On account of the scattered nature of the constituency, the election in Orkney and Shetland is exempted from the rule that all polls must be held on the same day.

* The Cities of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dundee, and Aberdeen are each a County of a City, and the Lord Provost of each is entitled, by virtue of his office, to be appointed Lord Lieutenant.

EDINBURGH

EDINBURGH, the Capital of the Kingdom, has a municipal area of 32,402 acres, and a population (Census of 1931) of 439,010 (over the enlarged area). The city is built on a group of hills and contains in Princes Street the most beautiful thoroughfare in the world. The principal buildings are St. Giles's Church (restored 1879-82), and St. Mary's (Scottish Episcopal) Cathedral (Sir Gilbert Scott), the Castle (which contains, in St. Margaret's Chapel, the oldest building in Scotland), the Scottish National War Memorial, Parliament House (the present seat of the judicature, containing the National and Signet Libraries), the University, the General Register House (Robert Adam), Royal Scottish Academy, National Portrait Gallery, and the Palace of Holyroodhouse (containing parts of the royal palace of James IV. and V.). The city is governed by a town council of 71 members, and sends 6 members to Parliament (including the member for Leith).

Rt. Hon. Lord Provost (Nov. 10, 1944-47), John Ireland Falconer.

Town Clerk, John Storrar, M.G., B.L., S.S.C.

City Chamberlain, John D. Imrie, C.B.E., M.A., B.COX.

GLASGOW

GLASGOW, a Royal Burgh, City and County of a City, and the principal commercial centre in Scotland, has a municipal area of 39,725 acres, and a population (1931 Census) of 1,088,462 (estimated at 1,128,473 at Midsummer 1939). The city occupies the north and south banks of the Clyde, one of the chief commercial estuaries of the world. The principal industries are iron and steel works, shipbuilding, chemicals, leather, woollens, muslin-weaving, distilling, tobacco, cotton-mills and furniture. The chief buildings are the Early English Cathedral, built early in the 13th century, and incorporating part of an earlier structure, the University (Sir Gilbert Scott), the City Chambers, the Royal Infirmary and the Western and Victoria Infirmaries, the Art Galleries and the Mitchell Library. The City is governed by a town council of 126 members, and sends 15 members to Parliament.

Rt. Hon. Lord Provost (Nov. 7, 1946-49), Hector McNeill.

Town Clerk, William Kerr, C.B.E., J.P.

City Chamberlain, G. B. Esslemont, C.A.

DUNDEE.

DUNDEE, a City, Parliamentary, Municipal and Royal Burgh, on the left bank of the River Tay, 42 miles N. of Edinburgh, has a municipal area of 9,002 acres, and a population (Census 1931) of 175,583 (an increase of 7,268 since 1921). The principal buildings are University College (St. Andrews University), the Technical Institute, High School, Albert Institute and the Caird Hall Buildings. One of the finest Public Baths is in Dundee. The harbour affords dock accommodation of nearly 38 acres. There are public parks of 646 acres and an observatory at Balgay Park. The principal industries are jute manufacture in all its branches, and various forms of linen weaving, the making of preserves, shipbuilding, engineering, dyeing, fruit, &c., canning, linoleum manufacturing, and brewing. The City is governed by a town council of 37 members and sends 2 members to Parliament. Broughty Ferry, the eastern portion of Dundee, is a noted holiday resort.

The Lord Provost (Nov. 8, 1940-46), Sir Garnet Wilson, LL.D.
Town Clerk, William Forland.
City Chamberlain, James McNeill.

ABERDEEN.

ABERDEEN, a City and a Royal, Municipal and Parliamentary Burgh, 130 miles N.E. of Edinburgh, received its charter as a Royal Burgh from William the Lion in 1179. The municipal area is 11,021 acres, with a population (Census 1931) of 167,258. The chief industries are quarrying and granite working, white fish, salmon and herring fisheries, engineering, chemicals, shipbuilding, paper-making, woollen, jute and linen manufacture. Being built of grey granite the beauty and cleanliness of the town have an irresistible appeal. From an architectural point of view, Aberdeen is truly famous, its many beautiful buildings including Marischal College, reputed to be the most imposing white granite building in the world, King's College (1794), St. Machar Cathedral (1378), the Auld Brig o' Balgownie (1320) and the Municipal Buildings. There is a sea beach promenade, which stretches for fully two and a half miles along golden sands, and at Hazlehead an open public park of 800 acres of which 200 are wooded, with one of the finest public golf courses in Scotland. The climate is bracing and healthy. The City is governed by a Town Council of 37 Members, and sends 2 Members to Parliament.

The Lord Provost (Nov. 10, 1944-47), Sir Thomas Mitchell.
Town Clerk, D. B. Gunn, M.B.E., M.A., LL.B.
City Chamberlain, D. R. Bishop, F.S.A.A.

SECRETARIES FOR SCOTLAND.

At the Union of the Crowns of Scotland and England a Secretary of State was appointed for Scotland, but the office was abolished in 1746, and from 1782 until 1885 Scottish Affairs were entrusted to the Secretary of State for Home Affairs, who acted therein under the advice of the Lord Advocate. In 1885 the office of Secretary for Scotland was revived, and in 1926 was raised to a principal Secretaryship of State.

SCOTTISH CELTIC AND TERRITORIAL TITLES.

Chiefs and landowners in Scotland are entitled to add to their surnames, patronymical or territorial, designations derived from their clan or estate. Form of signature is prescribed by 1672 cap. 47. When so used, these titles are legally regarded as part of the surname, and in address "Esq." is omitted, being inferred. Such titles are admissible in official documents and registers; are also borne by wife, heir and daughters, and when derived from actual land-ownership, or by descent, are assumable without further formality. Otherwise a Lyon Court certificate of recognition is required.

IRELAND.

Position and Extent.—Ireland lies in the Atlantic Ocean, to the West of Great Britain, and is separated from Scotland by the North Channel and from Wales by the Irish Sea and St. George's Channel. The land area of the island is 32,408 sq. miles and its geographical position between $51^{\circ} 26'$ and $55^{\circ} 21'$ N. latitude and from $5^{\circ} 25'$ to $10^{\circ} 30'$ W. longitude. The greatest length of the island, from N.E. to S.W. (Torr Head to Mizna Head), is 174 miles. On the N. coast of Adull Island (Co. Mayo) are the highest cliffs in the British Islands, 2,000 feet sheer above the sea. Ireland is occupied for the greater part of its area by the Central Plain, with an elevation of 50 to 350 ft. above mean sea level, with isolated mountain ranges near the coastline. The principal mountains, with their highest points, are the Sperrin Mountains (Sawel 2,240 ft.) of County Tyrone; the Mountains of Moine (Slieve Donard 2,795 ft.) of County Down, and the Wicklow Mountains (Lugnaquilla 3,039 ft.); the Derryveagh Mountains (Errigal 2,466 ft.) of County Donegal; the Connemara Mountains (Twelve Pins 2,695 ft.) of County Galway; Macgillicuddy's Reeks (Carratuohill 3,474 ft., the highest point in Ireland); and the Galtee Mountains (3,018 ft.) of County Tipperary, and the Knockmealdown (2,609 ft.) and Comeragh Mountains (2,470 ft.) of County Waterford. The principal river of Ireland (and the longest in the British Isles) is the Shannon (240 miles), rising in County Cavan and draining the central plain. The Shannon flows through a chain of loughs to the city of Limerick, and thence to an estuary on the western Atlantic seaboard. The Slaney flows into Wexford Harbour, the Liffey to Dublin Bay, the Boyne to Drogheda, the Lee to Cork Harbour, the Blackwater to Youghal Harbour, and the Suir, Barrow and Nore, to Waterford Harbour. As in Scotland, the principal hydrographic feature is the Loughs, of which Lough Neagh (250 sq. miles) in the north-east is the largest in Ireland and the British Isles, others being the Shannon Chain of Loughs, Boderg, Forbes, Ree and Derg, and the Erne Chain of Loughs, Oughter, Lower Erne, and Erne; Melvin, Gill, Cara and Com in the north-west; and Corrib and Mask (joined by a hidden channel) in the west. In County Kerry, to the east of Macgillicuddy's Reeks, are the famous Lakes of Killarney. The climate of Ireland is more equable than that of Great Britain, and the rainfall is more evenly distributed. The variation in mean temperature is only about 3° Fahrenheit, the summer extremes being 59° in the N. and 62° in the S.

Primitive Man.—Although little is known concerning the earliest inhabitants of Ireland, there are many traces of neolithic man throughout the island; a grave containing polished stone axehead assigned to 2,500 B.C. was found at Linkardstown, Co. Carlow, in 1944, and the use of bronze implements appears to have become known about the middle of the 17th century B.C. In the later Bronze Age a Celtic race of Goidels appear to have invaded the island, and in the early Iron Age Brythons from South Britain are believed to have effected settlements in the south-east, while Picts from North Britain established similar settlements in the north. Towards the close of the Roman occupation of Britain, the dominant tribe in the island was that of the Scoti, who afterwards established themselves in Scotland.

History.—According to Irish legends, the island of Ierne was settled by a Milesian race, who came from Scythia by way of Spain, and established the Kingdom of Tara, about 500 B.C. The supremacy of the Ardr (high king) of Tara was acknowledged by eight lesser kingdoms (Munster, Connaught, Ailech, Oriel, Ulidia, Meath, Leinster and Ossory) ruled by descendants of the eight sons of Miled. The basalt columns on the coast of Antrim, eight miles from Portrush, known as the Giant's Causeway, are connected with the legendary history of Ireland as the remnants of a bridge built in the time of Finn McCool (Fingal) to connect Antrim with Scotland (Staffa).

Hibernia was visited by Roman merchants but never by Roman legions, and little is known of the history of the country until the invasions of Northmen (Norwegians and Danes) towards the close of the 8th century A.D. The Norwegians were distinguished as Fingdall (White Strangers) and the Danes as Dubgaill (Black Strangers), names which survive in "Fingall," "MacDougall" and "MacDowell," while the name of the island itself is held to be derived from the Scandinavian Ira-land (land of the Irish), the names of the Provinces being survivals of Norse dialect forms (Ulaidstír, Laiginstír, Mumans-tír and Kunnak-tír). The outstanding events in the encounters with the Northmen are the Battle of Tara (980), at which the Hy Neill king Maelsechlainn II. defeated the Scandinavians of Dublin and the Hebrides under their king Amlaib Cuarán; and the Battle of Clontarf (1014) by which the Scandinavian power was completely broken. After Clontarf the supreme power was disputed by the O'Briens of Munster, the O'Neills of Ulster, and the O'Connors of Connaught, with varying fortunes. In 1152 Dermot MacMurrough (Diarmait MacMurchada), the deposed king of Leinster, sought assistance in his struggle with Ruaidhri O'Connor (the high king of Ireland), and visited Henry II., the Norman king of England. Henry authorised him to obtain armed support in England for the recovery of his kingdom, and Dermot enlisted the services of Richard de Clare, the Norman Earl of Pembroke, afterwards known as Strongbow, who landed at Waterford (Aug. 23, 1170) with 500 knights and 1,000 other troops for the reconquest of Leinster, where he eventually settled, after marriage with Dermot's daughter. In 1177 (Oct. 18) Henry II. himself landed in Ireland, with a force larger than Strongbow's, and obtained homage from the Irish kings, but Anglo-Norman rule underwent many fluctuations in the succeeding centuries, being confined in the early 15th century within the English "Pale" of 600 square miles. In the reign of Henry VII. English rule was greatly extended, and the administration of Irish affairs was anglicised by Robert Poyning, Lord Deputy of Ireland, who summoned the Parliament of Drogheda (Dec. 1494), at which were enacted the Statutes of Drogheda, afterwards known as Poyning's Law, making the legislature of Ireland subordinate to and dependent on that of England. A later parliament conferred on Henry VIII. the title of King of Ireland.

Christianity.—Christianity did not become general until the advent of St. Patrick. St. Patrick was born in Britain about 389, and was taken to Ireland as a slave about sixteen years later, escaping to Gaul at the age of 22. In 432 he was consecrated Bishop at Auxerre and landed in Wicklow to establish and organise the Christian religion throughout the island.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT.

Under the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, as amended by the Irish Free State (Consequential Provisions) Act, 1922, a separate Parliament and Executive Government were established for Northern Ireland, which comprises the six parliamentary counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry and Tyrone, and the Boroughs of Belfast and Londonderry. Under the Constitution of Northern Ireland certain legislative and fiscal powers are reserved to the Parliament of the United Kingdom.

The Northern Irish Parliament consists of a House of Commons of 52 elected members (who receive an allowance of £210 per annum) and a Senate of 24 ex-officio Senators and 24 Senators elected by the members of the House of Commons on the proportional representation system. Northern Ireland continues under the Act of 1920 to return 13 members to the House of Commons at Westminster.

The Executive power is vested in the Governor on behalf of His Majesty the King; he holds office for 6 years, and is advised by 8 Ministers responsible to Parliament.

EDUCATION.

On Dec. 31, 1944, there were 1,667 Public Elementary Schools with 185,621 pupils. In 1944 there were 76 Preparatory, Intermediate and Secondary Schools recognised by the Ministry of Education, with 18,854 pupils, and in 1943-44 there were 92 Centres of Technical Instruction, with 24,890 students. The Queen's University at Belfast had 27 Professors, 56 Lecturers, 50 Assistants and Demonstrators, and 2,663 students in

FINANCE.

The greater part of the taxation in Northern Ireland is imposed and collected by the Imperial Authorities; the balance after deducting the cost of collection and of certain services reserved to the control of the Imperial Parliament is paid over to Northern Ireland's Exchequer. Northern Ireland makes a contribution to the cost of the Imperial Services, i.e., Navy, Army and Air Force, National Debt, &c., which amounted to £36,000,000 for the year 1943-44 and is provisionally fixed at £35,000,000 for the year 1944-45.

	1943-44. Actual.	1944-45. Estimated.
Total revenue	£52,099,000	£54,507,000
Total expenditure (in- cluding Imperial contribution)	51,974,000	54,471,000 woollens, shirts and collars, man-made fabrics, chemical manures, soaps and candles, clothing, hosiery, pottery, roofing felts, leather, biscuits, matches, paper, cement, optical goods, &c., the production of bauxite, salt, diatomite or kieselguhr.

Herring fishing and pickling is an important industry during the summer months.

Minerals.—About 3,000 persons were engaged in the various mines and quarries in 1944, the principal output being igneous rocks (other than granite) 673,000 tons, sandstone, chalk, clay, granite, limestone.

Manufactures.—Belfast is the principal industrial centre. The manufacturing of linen gives employment to approximately 70,000 persons, the number of spindles being 875,000.

Londonderry is an old-established centre of the shirt manufacturing industry.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Seaports. Ψ —The principal seaports are Belfast, Londonderry, Newry, Larne and Coleraine.
There are regular week-day shipping services from Belfast to Liverpool, Heysham, and Glasgow, and from Larne to Stranraer.

Railways.—The principal railways are the Great Northern, L.M. & S. (Northern Counties Committee), Belfast and County Down, and Londonderry and Lough Swilly. The total railway mileage in 1944 was 672.

Airways.—Air Services are in operation between Northern Ireland and the principal cities in Great Britain.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT.

The Constitution.—The new Constitution of Ireland, approved by a plebiscite on July 1, 1937, came into operation on December 29, 1937.

The Nation.—The Constitution declares that Ireland is a sovereign independent democratic State and affirms the right of the Irish Nation to choose its own form of Government, to determine its relations with other nations, and to develop its life, political, economic and cultural, in accordance with its own genius and traditions. The national territory is declared to be the whole island of Ireland, its islands and the territorial seas. Pending the re-integration of the national territory, and without prejudice to the right of the Parliament and the Government established by the Constitution to exercise jurisdiction over the whole of the national territory, the laws enacted by that Parliament shall have the like area and extent of application as those of the Irish Free State, which did not include the six counties (Antrim, Down, Armagh, Derry, Tyrone and Fermanagh) of the province of Ulster known as Northern Ireland.

The State.—The name of the State is Eire, or, in the English language, Ireland. Ireland is declared to be a sovereign independent democratic State. The national flag is the tricolour of green, white and orange. The Irish language, being the national language, is the first official language. The English language is recognised as a second official language.

The President.—The President of Ireland—Uachtarán na h-Eireann—is elected by direct vote of the people for a period of seven years. A former or retiring President is eligible for a second term.

The President summons and dissolves Dáil Eireann on the advice of the Taoiseach (Prime Minister). He signs and promulgates laws. The supreme command of the Defence Forces is vested in him, its exercise being regulated by law. He has the power of pardon.

The President, in the exercise and performance of certain of his constitutional powers and functions, is aided and advised by a Council of State.

The National Parliament.—The Parliament—Oireachtas—consists of the President and two Houses: a House of Representatives—Dáil Eireann—and a Senate—Seanad Eireann.

Dáil Eireann is composed of 138 members elected by adult suffrage on a basis of proportional representation.

Seanad Eireann is composed of 60 members of whom 11 are nominated by the Taoiseach and 49 are elected; three by the National University of Ireland, three by the University of Dublin, and 43 from panels of candidates, established on a vocational basis.

The Government.—The Government of Ireland consists of not less than seven and not more than 15 members.

The executive authority of the State is exercised by the Government subject to the Constitution. The Government is responsible to Dáil Eireann. The Government meets and acts as a collective authority, and is collectively responsible for the Departments of State administered by the Ministers.

The Taoiseach is appointed by the President on the nomination of Dáil Eireann. The other members of the Government are appointed by the President on the nomination of the Taoiseach with the previous approval of Dáil Eireann. The Taoiseach appoints a member of the Government to be the Tánaiste who acts for all purposes in the place of the Taoiseach in the event of the death, permanent incapacitation, or temporary absence of the Taoiseach. The Taoiseach, the Tánaiste and the Minister for Finance must be members of Dáil Eireann. The other members of the Government must be members of Dáil Eireann or Seanad Eireann, but not more than two may be members of Seanad Eireann.

International Relations.—The executive power of the State in or in connexion with its external relations is exercised by or on the authority of the Government.

The Judiciary.—The Judiciary consists of Courts of First Instance and a Court of Final Appeal called the Supreme Court—Cúirt Uachtarach. The Courts of First Instance include a High Court—Ará-Chúirt—invested with full original jurisdiction in and power to determine all matters and questions whether of law or fact, civil or criminal, and also Courts of local and limited jurisdiction, with a right of appeal as determined by law. The High Court alone has original jurisdiction to entertain the question of the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of the Constitution. The Supreme Court has appellate jurisdiction from all decisions of the High Court, subject to exceptions and regulations prescribed by law. No law may, however, be enacted excepting the question of the validity of any law from the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.

The National Registration population in 1939 was 50,829 (24,475 males, 26,354 females). In 1944 the births numbered 883 and the deaths 820. The cultivated area (1942) was 76,217 acres, and the live stock included 12,038 horses, 20,513 cattle, 72,876 sheep, and 4,351 pigs. The Island's main industry is catering for holiday-makers (numbering about 500,000 in the year) from all parts of the British Isles.

The land is rich in minerals, lead, iron, blende and slate, and exports large quantities of agricultural produce. Forty-seven miles of railway have been constructed, and about 25 miles of electric tram road.

Government, etc.—Man is governed by a Legislature, called the Tynwald, consisting of two branches—the Governor and Council and the House of Keys. The Council consists of the Governor, the Bishop of Sodor and Man, the two Deemsters, the Attorney-General, 2 members appointed by the Governor, and 4 members appointed by the House of Keys. The House of Keys (possibly from the Scandinavian keise = chosen) is one of the most ancient legislative assemblies in the world. It consists of 24 members, elected by the adult male and female population, 16 from the six headings, 5 from Douglas, and 1 each from Castletown, Peel and Ramsey. Bills after having passed both Houses are signed by the members, and then sent for the Royal Assent. After receiving the Royal Assent, a Bill does not become law unless promulgated within the ensuing twelve months, and on the first "Tynwald Day" (July 5) following it is announced in the English and Manx languages on the Tynwald Hill. On the promulgation taking place a certificate thereof is signed by the Governor and the Speaker of the House of Keys. The King and Queen visited the island in 1945. His Majesty presiding over Tynwald on Tynwald Day. An annual contribution of £200,000 is made to the Imperial Government. In 1921 Tynwald accepted liability for the redemption of £250,000 War Stock, and in 1927 liability for a further sum of £500,000 of War Stock was accepted in final settlement of all responsibility to the Imperial Government in respect of the cost of the War (1914–18). In the financial year 1933–34 the Government of the Isle of Man discharged this war liability to H.M. Government from the proceeds of a loan (£530,000) raised for that purpose, as well as for the purpose of financing in part the cost of extending the Red Pier, Douglas. In 1938 the Isle of Man Government undertook to make a contribution of £100,000 spread over a period of 5 years towards the cost of National rearmament. The Isle of Man has made, in all, free gifts of £1,250,000 to the British Government and has lent an equivalent amount, free of interest. The chief source of revenue is found in the customs duties, the only direct taxation being sur-tax and income tax, which ranges from 3s. for incomes under £500, to 5s. 3d. for incomes over £5,000. There are 32 elementary and 2 secondary schools in addition to King William's College and the Buchan School for Girls; the gross expenditure of the Education Authority on elementary education in 1943–44 was £79,450, and on higher education £30,518.

The Indian Empire

THE INDIAN EMPIRE extends over a territory larger than the Continent of Europe without Russia. Legally, "British India" means all territories for the time being comprised within the Governors' Provinces and the Chief Commissioners' Provinces; while "India" means British India, together with all territories of any Indian Ruler under the suzerainty of His Majesty, all territories under the suzerainty of such an Indian Ruler, the tribal areas, and any other territories which His Majesty in Council may, from time to time, declare to be part of India. There are tracts of tribal territory on the N.W. and N.E. frontiers under the political influence, though not yet under the administrative rule, of the Indian Government.

Boundaries.—The political boundary of India marches with Persia and Afghanistan from the Gulf of Oman to Poval Schveikovski on the Taghdumbash Pamir. From this point the frontier—in many parts not yet clearly defined—touches the Chinese Empire and Nepal, till the limits of Burma are reached. Continental India, including Baluchistan, reaches from 8° to 37° N. latitude, and from 61° to 97° E. longitude. Delhi, the capital, lies in 77° E. long.

Area and Population.—The total area of India proper in 1941 was 1,581,410 square miles, with a population of nearly 389 millions (about three-fourths of the population of the British Empire). The British provinces, as distinguished from the Indian States, comprised 55 per cent. of the area and about 76 per cent. of the population. The details of the census are as given on pages 706-7.

Physical Features.—The country may be broadly divided into three sections, viz., the Himalayan region, the northern river-plains, and the southern table-land.

The Himalayas.—The Himalayas (which lie partly beyond the frontier), with their southern offshoots, form the natural northern boundary of India. The Himalayan range runs for 1,500 miles from N.W. to S.E., with a varying breadth of 150 to 200 miles, and attains a general height of 20,000 feet above the plain, culminating in the loftiest peaks yet measured on the globe—Mount Everest, 29,141 feet, Kunchinjunga 28,146 feet, and Dhaulagiri, 26,826 feet, near the centre of the range; and Mount Godwin Austen, 28,250 feet, near its junction with the Hindu Kush. The line of perpetual snow is at about 16,000 feet. The Himalayas collect and store up water for the plains below. The slopes afford a representation of the tropical zone (especially on the southern slopes to the E.), the temperate zone (particularly to the S.W. of the range), and the arctic zone as the upward journey is taken from the plains. In the Himalayas are several sanatoria, including Murree, Simla, Mussoorie, Naini Tal, and Darjiling. Himalayan vegetation includes such varied species as the tree-fern, ilex, pine, oak, fir, deodar (cedar), rhododendron, barley, oats, millet, and many domestic vegetables. The fauna are as varied as the flora, and include the bison, musk-deer, yak, wild sheep and goat, bear, elephant, monkey, and tiger, with eagles, partridges, and pheasants. Between the Himalayas and the plains to the S.E. is the great fever-haunted Tarai or Duar jungle, densely forest-covered and full of big game.

The Great Plain.—The northern river-plains, lying at the foot of the Himalayas, comprise the rich alluvial plains watered by the Indus, the Ganges, the Lower Brahmaputra, and their tributaries. At no great distance from one another, four rivers take their rise in the Himalayas. The sources of two are on the north side—the Indus, which flows westward for 1,800 miles, and the Tsan-po or Brahmaputra, which flows eastward for nearly 1,500 miles. The other two, on the southern slope, are the Sutlej, which, after flowing W. and S.W. for 900 miles and collecting various other streams, joins the Indus, and the Ganges, which, during a journey S.E. and E. of about 1,550 miles, drains almost all the Bengal plain. The Brahmaputra, after flowing along the northern side as far as the eastern extremity of the Himalayas, turns sharply to the S., then to the W., and finally joins the Ganges, 75 miles from where their combined streams enter the Bay of Bengal. Thus the Himalayas supply India with the water gathered on both slopes. The Indus and Ganges, with their tributaries, are the source of an extensive system of irrigation by canals. The richest, most populous, and most historically famous part of India lies in the basins of these great rivers. Formerly the Ganges was the only great highway of Bengal; it is still the fertiliser and the water-carrier. But a close network of railways is increasingly used for transport. The richness of the Indo-Gangetic plain, with its ample rainfall, enables it to support a dense population, almost wholly agricultural. The density of the population rises in some districts to 900 per square mile. On the other hand, in Baluchistan there are only 6 persons to the square mile. The population has increased most in the densest areas, and pressure on the soil is severe in parts of Bihar and the United Provinces. In Northern India there are two harvests, rabi (spring) crops being reaped in March and April, kharif (autumn) crops in October to December. In the north we find wheat, pulse, maize, millet, barley, and tea; while in the south, indigo, cotton, sugarcane, jute, oilseeds, tobacco, opium, and spices are produced. Among the fauna are monkeys, panthers, tigers, leopards, hyenas, jackals, squirrels, elephants, deer, crocodiles, and snakes. Salt, mica, and coal are the chief minerals. The Ganges delta yields rice, bamboos, and a large variety of palms. The Aravalli range, the primeval chain of India, divides Rajputana from the Central India States. To the N.W. of the peninsula lies the mountainous, barren, and thinly populated region of Baluchistan.

The Deccan.—Just as the Himalayas on the N. and the Hindu Kush and Sulaiman Mountains on the N.W. form natural barriers of defence for Hindustan, so do the Vindhya Mountains, running almost due E. from the head of the Gulf of Cambay, north of the Nerbudda River, form a firm southern boundary to the river-plains of Northern India. Southern India, or the Deccan, is a plateau of triangular shape and very old geological formation, bounded on two sides by the Malabar and Coromandel coasts, which converge at Cape Comorin, and on the third by the Vindhyas. The Eastern and Western Ghats all but complete this environing triangle of mountain ranges. In the extreme N.W., south of the Vindhyas, and parallel to them, but north of the Western Ghats, we find the Nerbudda and the Tapi flowing westwards, their basins being sharply defined by the Satpura Mountains, which lie midway between them. As the Western Ghats lie close to the coast, and afford no exit for rivers, there are no streams on the Malabar coast south of the Tapi; all the rivers flow eastwards, through defiles in the Eastern Ghats, into the Bay of Bengal. The four chief rivers are the Mahanuddy, in the extreme N.E. (520 m.), the Godavary (900 m.), the Kistna (800 m.), and the Canvery (472 m.), at intervals further to the south. The physical geography of Southern India has shaped its history: the S.W. coast, shut in by mountains, is very primitive and moves slowly; the S.E., open and easy of access by sea and towards the interior, has made great progress. The mountain slopes of this region, especially those of the Western Ghats, which rise to 8,000 feet in the Nilgiris, are still covered with the splendid vegetation of primeval forests. Teak, ebony, satinwood, sandalwood, palm, and bamboo abound. The jungles in the E. are very deadly. The tiger, bison, leopard, deer, and various smaller game afford sport. Snakes are found everywhere. In the valleys and on the higher plains many valuable crops are raised, chiefly rice, millet, cotton, oilseeds, coffee, tea, indigo, tobacco, and chinchona. The black cotton soil is very fertile. There is irrigation by dams, wells, tanks, and canals. The southern tableland has furnished considerable supplies of minerals. At present the minerals principally worked are coal, manganese ore, mica, monazite, and gold.

Climate.—About half of India is within the tropics, but the greatest extremes of heat and cold are in the N.W. In the Himalayas the climate is moist and cold. In Northern India it is dry, and the winters are rather cold. In tropical Southern India the climate is more equable. Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras all have an equable climate, owing to proximity to the sea. India depends for its fertility upon the monsoon rains. The S.W. monsoon brings moisture from the ocean south of the Equator, and reaches the west coast early in June and the northern provinces late in June. The mountains arrest these currents and precipitate rainfall, which averages 60 inches in the sub-Himalayan region, 39 inches in the Indo-Gangetic plain, and 30 inches in the Deccan, but is small in Sind and Rajputana. Madras benefits by the N.E. monsoon in the autumn.

Population.—The seventh general census of India was taken on 1st March, 1941. The returns gave a population of 388,997,955 (excluding Burma and Aden which ceased to be parts of the Indian Empire in 1937) as compared with 338,119,154 in 1931 (for details, see pp. 706–7), an increase in the ten years of 15 per cent. The increase between 1921 and 1931 was 10.6 per cent. The increase (1931–1941) in the British Provinces was slightly larger (by nearly 1 per cent.) than in the States and Agencies. Baluchistan was the only census area to show a decrease in population. The largest percentage increases in the Provinces were—Delhi (44.3), North West Frontier Prov. (25.3), Punjab (20.5), Bengal (20.3). The census total of 1941 is divisible into 295,808,722 (or about 76 per cent.) for British India, and 93,189,233 (or about 24 per cent.) for Indian States. India is not overpopulated for two-thirds of the people live on one-quarter of the area. In Assam and elsewhere a much larger population might subsist.

Caste, Tribe, Race or Nationality.—Owing to the operation of the caste system India is broken up into a large number of mutually exclusive aggregates, the members of which are forbidden by an inexorable social law to marry outside the group to which they themselves belong. A caste may be defined as a collection of families, or groups of families, bearing a common name, which usually denotes or is associated with a specific occupation. The boundary of a caste may be said to be fixed by the rule restricting intermarriage, but its social status depends on the occupation of its members and their habits in respect of diet. The chief castes and races are (Census 1931)—Brahman (15,207,277), Chamar (12,195,156), Ahir, etc. (14,170,032), Rajput (10,743,091), Jat (8,377,819), Maratha (6,113,061). According to the Census Returns of 1931 the population included 306,529 persons of European and allied races (including Armenians), viz., 155,555 British subjects, 12,579 persons of other European races, and 138,395 Anglo-Indians. Similar returns for 1941 are not yet available. The description of an Anglo-Indian for Census purposes was a person whose father, grandfather or other progenitor in the male line was an European.

Religions.—Classification of the results of the 1941 census has been confined to distribution by communities. All previous tables were based on the returns to the question "religion," but the results were interpreted as if the question had been community. The population by communities in 1941 includes 254,930,506 Hindus (65 per cent. of the total), 92,058,096 Muhammedans (24 per cent.), leaving about 11 per cent. for all other religions, including 6,316,549 Christians (about half of whom are in Madras, Travancore and Cochin), 5,691,447 Sikhs, 1,449,286 Jains, 114,890 Parsees, 22,480 Jews, and 25,441,489 described as "Tribes." Of the "Tribes" 7,630,000 may be described as "Tribal," who believe in magic and strive to propitiate impersonal forces. Unspecified communities 409,877. The Muhammedans, who are increasing faster than the Hindus, are influenced by the caste system and other Hindu characteristics. The number of Indian Christians has increased 238 per cent. since 1881.

Occupations.—Over 66 per cent. of the population was in 1931 dependent on agricultural and pastoral pursuits. Industry occupies 10 per cent. of India's workers. The most important industrial occupations are those connected with textiles, mainly hand-weaving.

Sex.—Marriage is almost universal owing to religious obligations. The movement against infant marriage and enforced widowhood is gaining ground. There were in 1931 over 26,248,000 widows in India. Of the total population in 1941, 201,025,726 were males and 187,972,229 females, increases of 15.3 per cent., and 14.8 per cent. respectively. The ratio between males and females remains virtually unchanged at 51.68 per cent. males as against 51.55 per cent. in 1931.

Languages.—India has 225 languages, exclusive of dialects, spoken in the Indian Empire. The languages spoken by 349,883,022 persons in 1931 (excluding 2,308,221 persons for whom details by language are not available) are grouped in eight families. The principal languages are Western Hindi (spoken by 71,547,000 persons) Bengali (53,469,000) Bihari (27,927,000) Telugu (26,374,000) Marathi (20,890,000), Tamil (20,412,000), Punjabi (18,839,000), Rajasthani (13,898,000), after which come Kanarese, Oriya, Gujarati, and Malayalam. Hindustani, a dialect of Hindi, containing a large number of Persian and Arabic words, is the lingua franca of India. Hindustani and Hindi have become the chief literary languages of Hindustan. English is understood by many.

A BRIEF SKETCH OF INDIAN HISTORY.

ALEXANDER's invasion of India (326 B.C.) is the first landmark of Indian history. A dim outline of earlier events can be traced from the evidences of race and language, from the traditions contained in ancient Indian literature, from accounts by later Greek and Chinese writers, and from coins and inscriptions. The oldest Indian books are supposed to date from about 1500 B.C.; they are written in Sanskrit, a language akin to Persian and to the principal European languages. The writers of these books were Aryans, a race which, as their traditions indicate, came into India from north of the Hindu Kush. They found in India, and conquered, a population of yellow-skinned type in the Himalayan districts, and a short, dark-skinned race, of low civilisation, in the rest of India. Of both these types there are still survivals. The religion and metaphysics of the Aryans are to be found in the Vedas and Upanishads; their epics, the Mahabharata and Ramayana, extol their mythical heroes; while in the Code of Manu we find a picture of Indian society, rather as the priestly caste of the day wished it to exist, than as it actually existed. The ascendancy of the Brahman priesthood over the soldier class of Kshetriyas is represented as fully established. The system of caste, originating in the attitude of the Aryas (kinsmen) to the dark and servile aborigines, generally prevails, and the people are organised in village communities. In the sixth century B.C. a new religion arose, called Buddhism. Its founder was Gautama, a prince of the Kshetriya caste, who took the name of Buddha, the "awakened," and died about 487 B.C. His supposed remains were discovered near Peshawar in 1909. His tenets are contained in the Tripiṭaka, the Buddhist gospel. Buddhism was, in India itself, mainly a social reform, a revolt against the pride of caste and the exclusiveness of the Brahman priesthood. It prevailed widely from 250 B.C. to 350 A.D., but was never quite general, and existed side by side with Brahmanism, which it never succeeded in ousting. At length it lost ground, less through persecution than through a change in popular feeling; and before the twelfth century it had become practically extinct in India itself, though it still flourishes not only in Siam, China, and Japan, but also in Nepal, Burma, and Ceylon. Its decline in India was accompanied by a revival of Brahmanism, much modified.

According to Herodotus the twentieth satrapy of Persia at one time included part of the north-west of India. Alexander (326 B.C.) did not penetrate beyond the tributaries of the Indus, though he sailed down the river. At his death his Indian possessions fell to Seleucus, whose ambassador, Megasthenes (306 B.C.), has left an account of the country under the rule of Chandragupta, the Greek Sandracottus. Megasthenes describes the democratic village communities of the Punjab, speaks of the people as brave and truthful and adverse to litigation, and notes the absence of slavery. Asoka (272-231 B.C.), the grandson of Chandragupta, whose edicts on stone pillars throw light upon this period, was a convert to Buddhism, which became the State religion. Our last contributors to a knowledge of India before the period of continuous authentic history are the Buddhist pilgrims from China who visited the country between 399 and 605 A.D.

The influence of the Greek conquest was swept away by the Scythians, who poured in many waves, between about 165 B.C. and 320 A.D., over Northern India. Their inroads left a lasting influence on the character of the population, and profoundly modified the religious beliefs and domestic institutions of the Hindus. The sixth century was a period of confusion. The emperor Harsha (606-648), after many years of fighting, made himself master of Northern India, and ended his reign in piety and peace. From about 650 to 950 anarchy prevailed.

The Arab conquest of Persia, towards the middle of the seventh century, brought the successors of Muhammad to the Indus, and in N.W. India they made some temporary acquisitions; but three centuries were to pass before the foundations of a durable Muhammadan empire were laid. It was in 990 that Mahmud of Ghazni (in Afghanistan) began a long series of incursions into India, no fewer than fifteen expeditions taking place between 999 and 1027, one of which carried him beyond the Jumna, while another ended in the capture of Somnath, in Kathiavar. The succeeding dynasties of Afghan kings held power in India for 500 years; but their advance was gradual, for it was not till 1206 that Delhi was taken and the greater part of Hindustan annexed by Kutb-ud-din, whose memory is perpetuated by the Kutb Minar, near Delhi. The first Muhammadan invasion of the Deccan took place in 1294.

THE MOGUL EMPIRE.—The Muhammadan Mongols, or Moguls, after overrunning Central and Western Asia, arrived in 1219, under Genghis Khan, on the frontiers of India, but did not cross the Indus. During the reign of the last monarch of the Taghlak line, the famous Tamerlane (or Timur) burst into India at the head of a mighty host, captured and sacked Delhi in 1398, and laid waste a great part of Hindustan. A period of weak dynasties followed; frequent invasions from without, and general misrule and anarchy within, paved the way for larger conquests by the Mogul Emperors. In 1526 Babar, a direct descendant of Timur, overthrew the last of the Afghan kings at Panipat, and founded the MOGUL EMPIRE, which at his death extended from the Oxus river in Central Asia to the borders of the Gangetic delta. His son, Humayun (1530-56), lost the whole of the territory conquered by Babar, but recovered a portion of it (including Delhi) shortly before his death. His victor was Sher Shah Sur, who reigned from 1540-1545. Akbar the Great, Humayun's son (1556-1605), spent a long reign in firmly establishing the empire; at his death his dominions extended over Kabul, Kandahar, and all India north of the Nerbudda. Moreover, of the Muhammadan kingdoms of the Deccan, Ahmednagar, Berar and Bidar were absorbed, and Bijapur and Golconda forced to pay tribute. Akbar followed up his conquests by important financial reforms. He was tolerant in religion, and just to all classes of his subjects. Among the great men of his time were the Hindu, Todar Mall, his able finance minister; Abul Fazl, the historian of his reign; and Faiz, the poet. Jahangir (1605-27) received in 1616 Sir Thomas Roe, the ambassador of James I. Under Shah Jahan (1627-1658) the Mogul Empire reached the zenith of its glory. Many stately buildings, including the Taj Mahal at Agra, testify to his magnificence and taste. The close of Shah Jahan's reign was embittered by the rivalries of his four sons. Aurangzeb (1658-1707) defeated and killed his brothers and kept his father a prisoner till death (1666). Aurangzeb had great ability and courage, but religious intolerance, distrust and dissimulation characterised his chequered career. His reign, in some respects splendid, ended in failure. He brought the Mogul Empire to its greatest extent by conquering and incorporating all India as far south as Tanjore. But from this time the decline of the empire began. Four sons disputed the right of succession, and Bahadur Shah (1707-12) secured the crown. After four short-lived emperors Muhammad Shah (1719-48), grandson of Bahadur, came to the throne. His viceroys became rebellious, and so contributed to the success of the Marhattas, who subdued the Deccan. About 1724 part of the Deccan became practically independent under Nizam-ul-Mulk (ancestor of the present Nizam). In 1738, to avenge an alleged insult, Nadir Shah of Persia invaded India, captured Delhi, gave orders for a general slaughter of the inhabitants, and carried off enormous plunder. All the country west of the Indus was lost to the empire. On the death of Muhammad, the phantom rulers, Ahmad Shah (1748-1754) and Alamgir II. (1754-1759), occupied the throne, and were succeeded by Shah Alam (1759-1806), who came to terms with the British.

THE MAHRATTAS.—As the Moguls declined, the power of the Mahrattas increased. They were Hindus, and their country was in the Western Ghats, to the east of Bombay. The founder of their power was Sivaji (1627-1680), a chieftain of the family of Bhonsla, who became famous by his raids in the Deccan, and aimed at founding a Hindu kingdom. Balaji Vishwanath (1712-1720) Peishwa, or Prime Minister, succeeded in making that office of paramount importance and hereditary in his family. Sivaji's descendants thenceforth holding a merely nominal position. Under the Peishwas, aided by Scindia, Holkar, and the Gackwar, who formed independent States about this time, the Mahrattas rapidly extended their territory and influence, conquering Gujarat, Malwa, Berar, and Orissa. Although they were severely defeated at Panipat in 1761 by Ahmad Shah, the Afghan invader, they remained for some time the first power in India, and were the most dangerous opponents of the English. Too often their rule degenerated into a system of organised plunder. With the Pindaris, a horde of freebooters who followed in their train, they became a scourge to the country. It was not until both Pindaris and Mahrattas were finally overthrown in 1818 that India enjoyed the blessings of internal peace. The Mahratta empire, containing within itself the seeds of disintegration, was fated to bend before the superior sway of Europeans, who had gradually extended their power in India.

THE SIKHS.—The Punjab lay beyond the reach of the Mahrattas. There the decay of the Mogul empire gave the opportunity, not to a nation, but to a religious sect, united by military discipline, to establish territorial dominion. The founder of the Sikh religion was Nanak Shah, a Hindu reformer, born near Lahore in 1469. He preached the one God, purity of life, and abolition of caste. He had ten successors, named gurus or apostles, ending with Govind Singh (1708). The sect, though cruelly persecuted, survived, and gradually adopted a political organisation. It became a power under Ranjit Singh (1780-1839), who, revolting against the Afghan Amir, by whom he had been appointed Governor of Lahore, founded the kingdom of the Punjab. The powerful army he had organised brought on the collision with the British, and after two wars the Sikh kingdom was annexed, and became the province of the Punjab (1849).

EUROPEAN ADVENTURE.—From time immemorial the lucrative trade of Europe with India and the farther East has enormously enriched in turn each nation that has held it. In the 15th century it was mainly possessed by the Venetians on the European side, and by the Arabs on the Eastern side. The chief trading centres of the Arabs were Calicut, Ormuz, Aden, and Malacca. Seeing the large profits to be derived from this trade, the rising nations of Europe in the 15th century sought to obtain a share. Hence the ardour of the navigators who set out to discover an ocean route to India. The sea route round the Cape of Good Hope was discovered by Vasco da Gama, who anchored before Calicut in May, 1498. From that time until they lost their naval supremacy, a century later, the Portuguese enjoyed practically a monopoly of Indian trade. The first Portuguese viceroy, Francis of Almeida (1505-1509), established numerous factories and fortresses; while his successor, Alfonso de Albuquerque, captured Goa (1510), and extended the Portuguese dominion, notably on the Malabar coast. This dominion for 60 years from 1524 was tantamount to an entire regulation of the Asiatic coast trade with Europe from the Persian Gulf to Japan. It was stained by great cruelty. Up to the union of the crowns of Spain and Portugal in 1580 under Philip II., the Portuguese brought Indian products to Lisbon, whence the Dutch carried them to other parts of Europe. But when Philip II., on account of the Dutch revolt, shut Lisbon against them, the Dutch were driven to trade directly with the East. In 1602, by amalgamating existing trading companies, they formed "The Dutch East India Company," and the principal Portuguese settlements in the East were gradually captured. By 1661 the Portuguese held only those remnants of their Indian possessions which they still hold. The Dutch, who had some small trading factories, were in turn forced by the British to relax their hold on India. French and Danish East India Companies were established in 1601 and 1616 respectively. The latter achieved little, but, as will be seen directly, the French had a brief but brilliant period of influence in the middle of the 18th century.

ENGLISH DOMINION.—At the close of the 16th century the English became eager to share in the profits of Indian commerce. After some smaller ventures, the London East India Company was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth by royal charter on 31st December, 1600. There were 217 subscribers of the capital of £68,373, and the official title was "The Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading to the East Indies." A second charter in 1609 made the Company's privileges perpetual. The Portuguese resisted the new competitors, who nevertheless obtained a permanent footing at Surat after several stubborn engagements off Swally in 1612. In 1615 the British ambassador, Sir Thomas Roe, supported by the Emperor Jahangir, greatly improved the position of the Company. In 1639 the English acquired a strip of land on the east coast, built a factory there, fortified it, and named it Fort St. George; in 1653 this settlement of Madras became a Presidency. In Charles I.'s reign rival enterprises led to confusion and piratical excesses, but in 1657 co-operation and discipline were secured by the charter granted by Cromwell to a single company comprising the whole body of merchants. The charter was renewed by Charles II., in whose reign the Company enjoyed great prosperity. When in 1662, Charles II. married Katharine of Braganza, a part of her dowry from Portugal was the Island of Bombay; in 1668 he transferred all his rights over it to the Company for an annual payment of £10. In 1687 Bombay replaced Surat as the seat of the western Presidency. Although in 1633 the Company had obtained certain treaty rights in Bengal from the Mogul, and in 1651 a factory had been established at Hooghly, yet in that part of India they held no territory as in Bombay and Madras. In 1688 the Muhammadan rulers forced them to abandon their settlement, but being invited to return, they laid, in 1690, amid swamp and jungle, the foundations of the Presidency of Fort William, which was destined to develop into the city of Calcutta. In 1693 a new charter was granted to the company. In 1698 a charter was granted to a rival company called "The English East India Company," to distinguish it from the old "London Company." After a brief period of conflict and trade losses, the rival companies came to terms in 1702; and in 1708 they were amalgamated under the title of "The United Company of Merchants of England trading to the East Indies."

When Great Britain engaged in war with France in 1744, the rival Companies of England and France came into collision, with the result that Madras was captured in 1746. Had Dupleix been well supported from home, he might have founded a French empire in India. The first reverses of the English were retrieved by Clive, whose gallant defence of Arcot (1751) was followed up by a series of brilliant movements, culminating in the utter defeat of the French army by Coote at Wandiwash in 1760, and in the capture of Pondicherry in 1761, which completed the ruin of the French Company. Since then the territory retained by the French in India has been insignificant; and in it they are forbidden by treaty to hold any considerable military force. The tragedy of the Black Hole of Calcutta (1756) summoned Clive from Madras, and his victory at Plassey over the Nawab of Bengal in 1757 made British influence predominant.

Clive was appointed first Governor of Bengal in 1758. In 1760 he returned home, and in 1763 the English were again embroiled in Bengal, but completely defeated their opponents at Buvar (1764). In 1765 Clive (now Lord Clive) returned to Bengal as Governor, and before he left finally in 1767 he succeeded in reforming the services, in which great abuses existed. Owing to Clive's efforts, the Company in 1765 received from the Emperor at Delhi the diwani or fiscal administration of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, with the Northern Circars (Madras), and 25,000,000 people came under their government. Thus were laid the foundations of England's territorial dominion in India.

After an interval of misrule Warren Hastings (1772-85) was appointed Governor of Bengal, and in 1774 Governor-General, on the creation of that office under the Regulating Act of 1773. He vigorously reformed the revenue system and judicial procedure. Hastings was the first great administrative organiser of the British possessions. He greatly increased the power and territory of the Company, notwithstanding the opposition of his Council. Mysore in 1760 had been seized by Hyder Ali, a Mussulman adventurer, and a powerful and inveterate enemy of the English. By repelling Hyder Ali's memorable invasion of the Carnatic (1780), and defeating the triple alliance of the Nizam, the Marhattas, and Hyder Ali, Hastings probably saved British India. On his return to England he was impeached on a number of charges, but acquitted.

The first administration of Lord Cornwallis (1786-93) was marked by a thorough reform of the Company's Civil Service, by the introduction of a permanent settlement of the land revenue, by a reform of the judicial system, and by the third Mysore War, in which he defeated Tippoo, the son and successor of Hyder Ali. The rule of Sir John Shore (1793-98) was uneventful.

The administration of the Marquess Wellesley (1798-1805) was distinguished by many important events. Tippoo, as hostile to the English as Hyder, was in 1798 in secret correspondence with the French, who were then dominant in the military councils of the Nizam and of Scindia, were established in Mauritius, and under Napoleon, then engaged in his Egyptian campaign, were aiming at a great Eastern Empire. Lord Wellesley saw the necessity of crushing this dangerous Power, and the Fourth Mysore War ended in the capture of Seringapatam (1799), the death of Tippoo, and the conquest and restoration of Mysore to a representative of the family of Hindu Rajas whom Hyder Ali had dethroned. The Treaty of Bassecin (1802) broke up the Marhatta confederacy, but led to the Second and Third Marhatta Wars, which curtailed the power of Scindia and Holkar, and increased the strength and extent of the Company's dominions. Lastly, Lord Wellesley developed, if he did not initiate, a system of subsidiary alliances with Native States, which aimed at making the British the one paramount Power, while giving greater security than the balance of power attempted by his predecessors. Wellesley doubled the territories of the Company, and transformed a mercantile body into a political power with a preponderating influence throughout India. During the brief second administration of Lord Cornwallis (1805), and that of Sh. G. Barlow (1805-7), Wellesley's policy of subsidiary alliances was reversed.

Lord Minto (1807-13) established peaceful relations with the Punjab, Afghanistan, and Persia, through the mediation of Mercalfe, Elphinstone, and Malcolm respectively. On the renewal of the Company's charter in 1813 the monopoly of Indian trade was abolished.

Under the Marquess of Hastings (1814-23) a severe struggle with Nepal ended with the Treaty of Sagouli (1816), which still regulates India's relations with that State. The annexation in 1818 of the territory of the Marhatta Peishwa enlarged Bombay Presidency to its present dimensions. Lord Hastings in the same year crushed the marauding Pindaris of Central India, who had devastated the country in all directions. Reviving Lord Wellesley's policy of alliances, he settled on their existing basis the relations of the Supreme Power with the feudatory States of Rajputana and Central India. He encouraged education. Lord Amherst (1823-8) succeeded Lord Hastings. Encroachments on British districts by the King of Ava and his insolent refusal of all redress led to the first Burmese War, which cost 20,000 lives and nearly £14,000,000, but gave to India the provinces of Aracan and Tenasserim, and, practically, Assam.

While Lord William Bentinck was Governor-General (1828-35), steam communication with India was introduced, suttee (or widow-burning) was abolished, educated natives were admitted more freely into the service of the Company, and various reforms were passed affecting education, the liberty of the Press, finance, and justice. The new charter of the East India Company in 1833 abolished the remaining monopoly of Chinese trade, introduced reforms in the constitution of the Indian Government, made the North-West Provinces a separate administration, and abolished the restrictions on the residence of British subjects in India. The resolution of Lord Auckland (1835-42) to support Shah Shuja against Dost Muhammad brought on the first Afghan War (1839-42), and the serious disaster attendant on the fatal retreat from Cabul. The administration of Lord Ellenborough (1842-44) saw the conquest of Sind by Sir Charles Napier and its annexation (1843). Lord Hardinge (1844-48) conducted in person the first Sikh War, and fought a series of severely contested battles, ending with Sobraon (1846).

Lord Dalhousie's administration (1848-56) was fruitful in events. The Second Sikh War resulted, after severe fighting, in the submission of the Sikhs and the annexation of the Punjab (1849). The second Burmese War (1852), deprived the King of Burma of Pegu. Lord Dalhousie promoted the introduction of railways and the telegraph. He established cheap postage, promoted steam navigation with England via the Red Sea, and opened the Ganges Canal. His annexation policy was much criticised at home. It proceeded on the principle that British rule was preferable to Indian rule, gross misrule or a break in the natural succession justified, in the interest of the subject populations, the transfer of a native State to the British Government. In 1849 this "doctrine of lapse" was applied to Satara, and in 1853 Jhansi similarly became British territory; while on the death of the last of the Marhatta Princes of Nagpur, his territory was annexed, and became the Central Provinces in 1853. In 1856, after repeated warning, to the tyrannical ruler of Oudh, that kingdom was also annexed, without bloodshed or fighting.

Lord Canning (1857-62), who succeeded Lord Dalhousie, left England pledged to pursue a policy of peace, but he was destined to face the greatest crisis that has threatened British rule in India. A mutiny of sepoy broke out on the 10th May, 1857, at Meerut, and spread through the whole Bengal Army. Delhi was for some months in the possession of the rebels, and many chiefs joined the revolt. The siege of Delhi, the massacre at Cawnpore, the relief of Lucknow, and the Central India campaign stand out among the stirring events of that momentous time. Although the control of Indian affairs was vested in the Cabinet through the Board of Control, the great mutiny was laid to the charge of the East India Company, whose eventful annals were brought to a close by the transfer of the entire administration of India to the Crown.

INDIA UNDER THE CROWN.—The "Act for the Better Government of India" established the authority of the Crown; and a Proclamation to the Princes, Chiefs, and People of India, dated the 1st Nov., 1858, announced the resolution of Her Majesty to assume the government of the territories in India "heretofore administered in trust by the Honourable East India Company." Legislative Councils were established. Lord Canning was succeeded in 1862 by Lord Elgin, who, however, died in Nov., 1863.

Sir John (Lord) Lawrence (1861-69) reformed the finances, which had been seriously burdened by the heavy military expenditure necessitated by the Mutiny. His administration was marked by the Bhutan War (1864) and by the terrible Orissa Famine of 1866. He encouraged irrigation.

Lord Mayo (1869-72) effected many administrative reforms, instituted State railways, promoted the construction of roads and canals, and inaugurated the system of provincial finance, which has since been extended.

During the tenure of office of Lord Northbrook (1872-76) the late King Edward VII., then Prince of Wales, visited India. The Viceroy devoted attention to finance and to famine relief. In 1875 the reigning Gaekwar of Baroda was deposed for misrule and disloyalty.

Lord Lytton's administration (1876-80) was made eventful by a terrible famine in Southern India and by the Second Afghan War. In 1877 the Queen assumed the title of EMPRESS OF INDIA.

The peaceful term of the Marquess of Ripon (1880-84) was marked by the extension of local self-government, and by fiscal, judicial, educational, and other reforms.

His successor was the Marquess of Dufferin (1884-88). In 1885-6 occurred the Third Burmese War, by which Upper Burma with the Shan States was annexed. The N.W. frontier of Afghanistan was delimited, the frontier of India strengthened, and the army increased. The first Indian National Congress met in 1885.

The Marquess of Lansdowne (1888-94) continued his predecessor's policy of strengthening the army and consolidating British influence on the frontier. The Indo-Afghan boundary was defined, and a serious outbreak in Manipur was suppressed. He took the first step in currency reform by closing the Indian mints to the free coinage of silver. He reconstituted the Legislative Councils in 1892 by introducing a more popular element, and conferring a limited right of interpellation and criticism in financial matters.

The viceroyalty of Lord Elgin (1894-99) was full of events. In 1895 an outbreak in Chitral made necessary a large military expedition to relieve the garrison. Plague broke out in 1896, and raged more or less severely for many years. In 1896-7 an area of 307,000 sq. ms., with a population of 70 millions, was visited by a grievous famine. In 1897 the border tribes from Chitral to Baluchistan rose against the British garrisons. In the Tirah campaign that followed over 40,000 troops were employed. Several boundaries were settled under Lord Elgin, notably those with Russia on the Pamirs and with France on the Mekong. The frontiers of Afghanistan, Persia, and China were also defined. The general Customs tariff, abolished in 1882, was reimposed in 1894.

Lord Curzon (1899-1904 and 1904-5) succeeded Lord Elgin. In 1899 the pound sterling was made legal tender in India concurrently with the rupee, at the exchange of Rs. 15 to £1. In 1899-1900 occurred one of the worst famines on record, the tracts affected covering 475,000 sq. ms. with a population of 60 millions. Lord Curzon's term of office was a period of reform and reconstruction. He appointed Commissions of Inquiry on irrigation, railways, universities, agricultural banks, excise, and police, all of which suggested important reforms. He instituted agricultural banks and departments, and initiated legislation to free the cultivators from the money-lenders. The famine codes were amended. A new province, under the direct control of the Governor-General in Council, was created, called the North-West Frontier Province (1901). The Aden and the Perso-Afghan boundaries were delimited. An Imperial Cadet Corps of native princes and nobles was inaugurated. Educational policy was reviewed and reforms introduced. A much-needed reform of the police was undertaken. Lord Curzon also secured a perpetual lease of Berar from the Nizam. In 1904 a mission with a military escort proceeded to Tibet, and secured a favourable treaty. During Lord Curzon's absence in England for a few months in 1904 Lord Amphilhil occupied the post of Viceroy. Lord Curzon was reappointed in Dec., 1904. In 1905 the treaty with Afghanistan was renewed. The Viceroy reduced the dimensions of Bengal, and constituted a new province, called Eastern Bengal and Assam, by combining parts of Bengal with Assam. He carried out great reforms in the Army in conjunction with Lord Kitchener (appointed Commander-in-Chief in 1902), but, differing from certain proposals made by the latter, and finding that he lacked the support of the Home Government, he resigned (Aug., 1905).

Lord Minto succeeded in Nov., 1905. The Prince of Wales (afterwards H.M. King George V.) made a tour in India during the winter of 1905-6. For some years after 1905 there was agitation among Bengalis owing to the partition of Bengal, and a Seditious Meetings Act was passed in Nov., 1907. In his Budget speech in 1907 the Secretary of State, Viscount Morley, foreshadowed important reforms in Indian administration, designed to associate the people more closely with the Government. He nominated two Indian members to his own Council, and an Indian member to the Governor-General's Council. He appointed Commissions to inquire into railways, into the possibilities of financial and administrative decentralisation, and into the conditions of factory labour, and action was taken on their reports. In 1908 the unrest in Bengal assumed an anarchical character. To mark the fiftieth anniversary of the transfer of India to the Crown a royal proclamation was issued in Nov., 1908, promising extended self-government. Owing to the continued unrest in 1909 and 1910, a Press Act, to control printing presses, was passed.

Lord Hardinge succeeded in Nov., 1910. The Indian Legislative Council in June, 1911, prohibited indentured emigration from India to Natal after 1 July, 1912, and a new Seditious Meetings Act was passed. A great Durbar was held at Delhi on 12 December, 1911, by H.M. King George V., to announce his Coronation. On this occasion the King-Emperor also made announcements of new and far-reaching steps in Indian policy, viz., the transfer of the seat of Government from Calcutta to Delhi, and the creation of a Governorship for the presidency of Bengal, of a Lieut.-Governorship for Bihar, Chota-Nagpur, and Orissa, and of a Chief Commissionership for Assam. Delhi was chosen as the capital on geographical, historical, and political grounds. The provincial changes involved a partial rescission of the partition of Bengal and the abolition of the province of Eastern Bengal and Assam, created in 1905. Bengal as reconstituted is a compact Bengali-speaking province. A new province, Bihar and Orissa, was formed, including Chota-Nagpur and the Sambalpur district. Assam again became a separate province, under a Chief Commissioner. The reconstituted provinces came into existence on 1 April, 1912. In pursuance of recommendations by the Decentralisation Commission, enhanced powers in respect of appointments and expenditure were granted to local governments having a quasi-permanent provincial settlement. Moreover, greater permanency was arranged for in financial settlements with the provinces, the control of the Government of India being relaxed. In Dec., 1912, the Viceroy took formal possession of the new headquarters at Delhi. The State entry was marred by an attempt on the life of the Viceroy. The outbreak of The Great War in August, 1914, was the signal for an outburst of loyalty and devotion to the King-Emperor on the part of the princes and peoples of India. Practically all the ruling chiefs placed their military forces and the resources of their states at the disposal of the Government.

Following the outbreak of war in 1914 there were serious disturbances in the Punjab and elsewhere by emigrants returning from Canada and the United States imbued with revolutionary ideas. Order was restored as a result of measures taken under the Defence of India Act, which was passed in March, 1915. Lord Hardinge's term of office as Viceroy was extended from November, 1915, to March, 1916. The Viceroy announced in March, 1916, that it had been decided eventually to abolish the system of indentured emigration from India. Lord Hardinge put forward proposals for post-war constitutional reforms.

Lord Chelmsford succeeded in April, 1916. The year 1917 was marked by certain symptoms of unrest and the development of an agitation for constitutional changes towards self-government, or, in its extreme form, "Home Rule for India."

The Public Services Commission, appointed during Lord Hardinge's administration, reported.

Towards the end of 1917 the Secretary of State visited India in connexion with a development of constitutional progress. The Bombay Government took the first steps towards obligatory primary education; a policy of more complete local self-government was decided on by the Government of India. The influenza epidemic spread to India, and it was estimated that over 12 million deaths in British India and Indian States resulted. The Industrial Commission, appointed in 1916, issued a report. In 1919 a bill was introduced into Parliament embodying the proposals of the "Montagu-Chelmsford Joint Report," and eventually passed. During the year considerable distress occurred in consequence of the partial failure of the 1918 autumn crops throughout Northern India and the Peninsula, and relief measures were undertaken. Serious disturbances in the Punjab and Delhi, resulting in many deaths, followed on a "passive resistance" movement, inaugurated by Mr. Gandhi against the "Rowlatt" Bills, introduced by the Government of India, on the recommendation of the "Rowlatt" Committee, for renewing some of the powers with which the Government had armed themselves during the War to deal with sedition. The murder of the Amir and the subsequent events in Afghanistan were followed by an inroad of Afghans and some frontier tribes into India, necessitating prompt military action by the Government of India. The "Sadler" Commission on the Calcutta University reported during the year, and made drastic proposals for recasting the Indian secondary and university educational system. The Home Parliament, by rules, laid down the details of the constitution of the new Central and Provincial Governments. The Amir's representatives visited India and discussed with officers of the Indian Government the possibility of a resumption of more friendly relations. Fighting with the Mahsuds on the North-West frontier continued throughout the year, in consequence of which the Viceroy announced Government's intention to occupy Central Waziristan, and to continue the railway from Jamrud towards the Khyber. Further steps towards employing more largely Indians in the various Government services and for the improvement of conditions of service and pay of both European and Indian members of the same were taken. The recommendation of the Exchange and Currency Committee for the linking of the rupee to gold and the adoption of an exchange rate equivalent to one-tenth of the gold contents of the sovereign, i.e., an exchange rate of Rs. 10 to the £, was adopted. A High Commissioner for India in London, with a separate establishment, responsible to the Government of India for certain agency work, previously performed by the India Office, was appointed. The Army in India and the Medical Services Committees respectively reported. The Army in India Committee attempted to determine the part to be played by the Army in India in a scheme of Imperial Defence and to analyse the steps to be taken to make the Army, both in its administration and its personnel, more efficient and more attractive to the right type of soldiers.

In January, 1921, the new Indian Legislature, Provincial Councils, and the Chamber of Princes, were inaugurated by the Duke of Connaught.

Lord Reading succeeded in April, 1921. The battle between constitutionalism and revolution continued. A conflict between Sikhs at Nankana resulted in many deaths. Mr. Gandhi, the A.I. brothers, and their associates, continued to advocate non-co-operation with the Government and boycott of the reforms. The utterances of the A.I. brothers forced Government to order their arrest. The Moplahs (Muhammadan fanatics of Malabar) resisted the ordinary processes of law, and a widespread outbreak of violence ensued which forced the authorities to take strong military measures for its suppression. Frontier disturbances and fighting continued. Special missions were sent to Afghanistan and Tibet. The Railway Committee reported and recommended drastic changes, including the termination of the system of management of railways by Government companies domiciled in England. In November the Prince of Wales (now Duke of Windsor) visited India. In 1922 the Government arrested Mr. Gandhi, who was sentenced to six years' imprisonment. The Government found it necessary to give to Ruling Princes some measure of protection against attacks in the Press. The Fiscal Commission (appointed in 1927) reported and advised the adoption of a policy of protection.

In 1923 Burma was constituted a Governor's Province. The "Inchcape" Retrenchment Committee, appointed in 1922, reported and recommended a total reduction in the Budget of Rs. 19½ crores. The Government accepted the principle of Protection, but declared that it should be applied with discrimination; hitherto the Indian tariff had been a revenue tariff. A trade Convention was concluded with Afghanistan. A Bill was passed providing for the removal of existing racial distinctions in the criminal procedure applicable to Indians and non-Indians. The new frontier policy was further developed by the completion of various roads for mechanical transport within Waziristan and along the Derajat border. The Bengal Government were given special powers to deal with violent crime. The Punjab was greatly disturbed by the Sikh invasion of the Nabha State. The Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services, appointed in 1923, reported and recommended financial improvements for the Indian Civil and other Services. Further Indianisation of the Services was recommended. During the year a Legislative Council was set up in Coorg.

Early in 1925, the Swarajist leader, Mr. Das, repudiated the policy of violence, but asked in return for the cessation of "repressive" measures. A committee was appointed to enquire into the difficulties arising from or inherent in the working of the Constitution, and recommended many alterations, particularly that the control of the Secretary of State should be relaxed in purely Indian matters. The terms of reference did not, however, extend to the larger question of a complete revision of the Constitution, contemplated in the Montagu-Chelmsford scheme of 1918. The Viceroy came home to confer with the Home Government, and on his return to India announced the decision that the moment for such an enquiry had not arrived. The Government extended the policy of protection by granting a bounty on steel manufactured in India.

In 1926 the Cotton Excise duty was abolished. It was decided to reconstruct the Royal Indian Marine as a combatant force so that India may ultimately undertake her own naval defence. The Government of India decided to prohibit the export of opium for medical purposes, thus taking the lead in initiating the measures for which the Geneva Protocol provides.

Lord Irwin (now Earl of Halifax) succeeded Lord Reading as Viceroy in April, 1926. The Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance recommended that the gold value of the rupee should be fixed at 15. 6d., that the currency authority should be put under a statutory obligation to buy and sell gold or gold exchange at appropriate prices to maintain the ratio, that a central bank should be created apart from the Imperial Bank and that measures should be taken to establish a gold standard for India. Government announced their intention to adopt the ratio of 15. 6d. and to pass the necessary legislation to put the matter on a statutory basis.

Following the success of the Government mission for the suppression of slave trading in the Kachin valley an expedition was sent to the Kachin tribal chiefs in Burma with the object of endeavouring to persuade the chiefs to agree to the abolition of the system of tribal slavery in the area lying between the head waters of the Irrawaddy. In Nepal the slave liberation scheme, formulated by the Prime Minister of that State, was completed at a cost of £275,000.

Important changes in the administration of the State of Hyderabad were made by H.H. the Nizam following representations by the Supreme Government. During the year there was a recrudescence of communal and religious strife between Moslems and Hindus. In 1927 an Act for the registration of trade unions came into force. The rupee was stabilised, by legislation, at 15. 6d. A settlement was reached with the Government of South Africa on the question of the position of Indians in the Union. A Public Services Commission was formally constituted. The new Council House at New Delhi was opened. His Highness the Maharajah of Patiala sanctioned a scheme of compulsory education in his State. Slavery was abolished in the State of Kalat (Baluchistan). In the Home Parliament the Indian Navy Bill and the Indian Church Bill were passed. The latter provided that the Church in India shall be an autonomous body. In November the Home Government announced its intention to set up a Statutory Commission, with Sir John (Viscount) Simon as Chairman, to report to what extent it was desirable to establish the principles of responsible government in India, or to extend, modify or restrict the degree of responsible government.

In 1928 the Commission visited India, but was unfavourably received by many who were dissatisfied with the terms of reference. Towards the end of the year the Commission succeeded in securing the offer of the co-operation of most of the political parties and groups previously hostile. A Committee was appointed, with Sir Harcourt Butler as Chairman, to consider the relations between the Paramount Power and the Indian States, with special reference to the financial and economic relations between British India and the States.

The Royal Commission on Agriculture in India (appointed in 1926) issued its Report.

In 1929, power was given by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act to appoint Indian judges, &c., as additional members of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council for the hearing of appeals from India. The Statutory Commission continued its labours, but met with a considerable amount of opposition organised by some of the political groups in India. A Bill was introduced in the Assembly providing for the removal from India of non-Indian communist agents and a few days later an attempt was made by communists to destroy members of the Assembly by throwing bombs at the Government benches. The Bill was passed later as an Ordinance owing to the refusal of the President of the Assembly to allow its discussion on the ground that some of its provisions were sub judice in view of a trial of some conspirators then proceeding. An Act was passed providing for the investigation and settlement of trade disputes. A Royal Commission was appointed to report on the existing conditions of labour in industrial undertakings in British India. An Act was passed providing that the age of marriage shall not be less than 14 and the age of consent not less than 16. The Indian States Committee presented its Report. It recommended that the Viceroy not the Governor-General in Council, should in future be the Agent of the Crown and that important matters of dispute between the states themselves, between the states and the Paramount Power and between the states and British India should be referred to independent Committees for advice. The Committee dealt with the relationship between the Paramount Power and the financial relations between British India and the states, particularly the claim of the states for a share in the maritime customs.

In 1930 the outstanding event was the issue of the Report of the Statutory (Simon) Commission. The Commission's Recommendations (Cmd. 3,569) foreshadowed many changes. Broadly these may be summarised as the grant of the greatest possible measure of independence to Local Governments within their own sphere, and the substitution of a Federal system in place of the existing arrangements. The Commission's Report, published in June, was received with a storm of disapprobation in Indian political circles, and was the signal for a recrudescence of the non-co-operation movement in an acute form. In September the Round Table Conference was convened in London, as the next stage in the process of settling the future constitution.

In 1931 the various Committees of the Round Table Conference presented their Reports, one of the most important being that of the Federal Relations Sub-Committee outlining the constitution of a Federal Government of India. The representatives of the Indian States had expressed their willingness to consider their entry into a Federal system. The Conference adjourned in January. Later, there was considerable disorder in India, but eventually negotiations resulted in an agreement for the cessation of civil disobedience and of the boycott of English goods.

New Delhi was inaugurated in February. The Earl (Marquess) of Willingdon succeeded as Viceroy in April. The Royal Commission ("Whitley") on Labour, appointed in 1929, submitted their Report and recommendations. The Round Table Conference re-assembled in London in October, and discussed the composition and functions of the proposed Federal Legislature, the Federal Court, the representation of minorities, the States' places in the Legislature, &c. At the conclusion of the Session of the Conference in December the Prime Minister stated that, in view of the differences of opinion revealed during the discussions, the Government proposed to appoint three Committees to work in India to investigate more fully the questions of franchise, federal finance, and relations with certain Indian States.

In 1932 measures were taken to counteract the civil disobedience movement and Mr. Gandhi, who attended the Conference, was arrested on his return to India. The various communities having failed to agree in regard to their representation in the Provincial Legislatures, the Home Government decided on certain provisions to give effect to a scheme for the representation of the communities, to be laid before Parliament in due course. Later, it was announced that another (small) Round Table Conference would be convened in November with a view to reach an agreement consistent with the declared policy of His Majesty's Government on the important constitutional questions still remaining to be decided. The North-West Frontier Province was constituted a Governor's Province. An initial balance of Rs. 20 lakhs (£75,000) was placed at the disposition of the Province. Aden was constituted a Province, under a Chief Commissioner under the direct control of the Government of India.

In March, 1933, after further inquiries and discussions, including a third session of the Round Table Conference, His Majesty's Government announced their proposals for constitutional reforms (Cmd. 4268—White Paper). A Joint Select Committee of both Houses of Parliament was set up to consider and report on them in consultation with Indian representatives.

In January, 1934, one of the greatest earthquakes in history caused widespread devastation throughout North Bihar and Nepal. The damage, in a less intense form, extended east into Bengal and Assam and west into the United Provinces. The Indian States (Protection) Bill, of which the object is to protect the Indian States from subversive activities of all kinds conducted from British India, was passed in April. In July a Commercial Agreement was concluded with Japan, regulating, among other matters, the totals of Japanese purchases of Indian raw cotton and Japanese exports of cotton textiles. Under the Agreement the two countries enjoyed most-favoured-nation treatment. A settlement was reached of the controversy between the Government of India and the State of Nawanagar in regard to Customs receipts. An Act constituting a Reserve Bank of India was passed, regulating the issue of Bank notes and the keeping of reserves with a view to securing monetary stability in British India and generally to operate the currency and credit system of the country to its advantage. In August, 1935, the Government of India Act, 1935, was passed (see p. 720).

The Marquess of Linlithgow succeeded in April, 1936. Orissa and Sind were constituted Governors' Provinces. In January and February, 1937, the first general elections under the Government of India Act, 1935, were held to fill the seats in the new Provincial Legislative Assemblies (1,585) and Legislative Councils (186). The Congress Party obtained a majority over the other parties in six of the eleven assemblies (Bombay, Madras, Orissa, the Central Provinces, the United Provinces, and Bihar). The leaders, however, declined to form Ministries unless the Governors agreed not to use their special powers in certain circumstances, whereupon the leaders of other parties were invited by the Governors to form alternative Governments. Coalition Ministries were formed in Madras, Bombay, the Central Provinces, Bihar, and Orissa. Coalition Ministries that expected to command majorities were formed in Bengal, the Punjab, Sind, Assam, and the North-West Frontier Province. On April 1, the provisions of the Government of India Act, 1935, with the exception of those dealing with Federation, came into force. In July, the leaders of the Congress Party agreed that Congressmen should be permitted to accept office, and new Ministries were formed by them in Bombay, Madras, the Central Provinces, the United Provinces, Orissa, and Bihar. During the year the Princes or Ministers of all the Indian States met to examine the question of Federation. Punitive measures were taken against certain of the tribes on the North-West Frontier. Discussions were in progress in London for a new trade agreement with India to replace the Ottawa Pact of 1932.

As from April 1, 1938, the Home Government agreed to forego the annual contribution of £100,000 towards the cost of the Naval Defence of India, on condition that the Government of India maintains a seagoing fleet.

In September the annual grant by Parliament of £1,500,000 towards the cost of India's defence was increased to £2,000,000, and a grant up to £5,000,000 for the re-equipment of certain British and Indian Army units in India, and the provision of aircraft, was authorised. An expert Committee under the chairmanship of Lord Chatfield was appointed to examine and report on defence expenditure.

POLITICS AND EVENTS IN INDIA SINCE SEPTEMBER, 1939.

At the outbreak of war offers of service from all parts of India were received in great numbers.

Early in September, 1939, the Governor-General announced that with the coming of the war, His Majesty's Government had decided to suspend work on the Federal scheme, embodied in the Government of India Act, 1935. In October, following private conversations with the leaders of Indian parties, organizations, interests, and the Chancellor of the Chamber of Princes, he stated that His Majesty's Government would be willing, at the end of the war, to consult with representatives of all parties and interests in India, and with the Indian Princes with a view to securing their aid and co-operation in the framing of such modifications of the Federal scheme, as may then seem desirable in the light of Indian views (Parliamentary Paper, Cmd. 6121).

In November the Ministries of the Provinces having Congress Governments* resigned on the ground that the British Government had failed to make an acceptable statement of its war aims. After the failure to form alternative Ministries, except in Assam, the Governors assumed legislative and administrative powers. On January 10, 1940, the Viceroy, speaking at the Orient Club, gave a survey of his attempts to bring about an agreement and emphasised the following points: (1) H.M.G. have made it clear that their objective in India is full Dominion Status in accordance with the Statute of Westminster. (2) That "justice must be done as between the various parties in India, and H.M.G. are determined to see that it is done." (3) The concern of the Viceroy is to reduce to the minimum the interval between the existing state of affairs and Dominion Status. Mr. Gandhi professed to see in the speech "the germ of a possible settlement" and asked for an interview. No agreement was reached at the interview and Mr. Gandhi subsequently issued a statement to the effect that while the Viceroy contemplated the final determination of India's destination by H.M.G., Congress contemplated just the contrary. In March, 1940, the Moslem League (leader, Mr. M. A. Jinnah) at a meeting of the working committee of the League held at Lahore passed a resolution condemning the 1935 Act as quite unacceptable to Moslem India and adopting the Pakistan (lit.—land of the pure) idea as the official objective of the Moslem League. The resolution demanded the reconsideration of the whole constitutional plan afresh stating that no plan would be acceptable to Moslems unless embracing the principle "that geographically contiguous units are demarcated into regions, which should be so constituted with such territorial adjustments as may be necessary, that the areas in which the Moslems are numerically in a majority, as in the North Western and Eastern zones of India, should be grouped to constitute "independent" States in which the constituent units shall be autonomous and sovereign." This resolution was later confirmed by the League at Madras.

In August, 1940, in an important statement by the Viceroy, the British Government once again defined Dominion status as the accepted goal for India, and made it clear that they wished India to enjoy that position under a constitution framed primarily by Indians in accordance with Indian conceptions, and while this undertaking could not be carried out in the middle of the war, they were ready to welcome any steps made by Indians to come to a provisional agreement, and they invited the immediate inclusion of Indian political leaders as Heads of Departments in the Viceroy's Executive Council (Parliamentary Paper Cmd. 6219). The response of both the Congress Party and the Moslem League was unfavourable.

On October 15, 1940, Mr. Gandhi launched a modified civil disobedience campaign in which individuals selected by himself should offer up satyagrah (civil disobedience) by repeating in public anti-war slogans. The movement never gripped the country and expired during 1941.

Meanwhile the intensification of the war in 1940 and the fall of France brought an increasingly heavy burden on the Viceroy and his Executive Council, and in July, 1941, he announced the expansion of his Council to twelve, giving 8 portfolios to Indians as against the previous proportion of 3 Indians out of 7 members. There was also set up a National Defence Council consisting of about 30 persons including "representatives of the Indian States as well as of the Provinces and of other elements in the national life of British India in its relation to the war effort" (Parliamentary Paper, Cmd. 6293). Although neither the Executive Council nor the Defence Council is representative of Indian political parties, as such both are composed of Indians eminent in different spheres of public life in India.

Ministerial Government was resumed in Orissa in November. In December the Assam ministry resigned.

In spite of the overrunning of Burma by the Japanese, the presence of a Japanese fleet in the Bay of Bengal and the occupation of the Andamans, the political deadlock remained. On March 11, 1942, the Prime Minister announced that the War Cabinet had decided that a member—Sir Stafford Cripps—should visit India with His Majesty's Government's proposals for a settlement of the Indian problem. The draft declaration opened with these words: "His Majesty's Government, having considered the anxieties expressed in this country and in India as to the fulfilment of the promises made in regard to the future of India, have decided to lay down in precise and clear terms the steps which they propose shall be taken for the earliest possible realisation of self-government in India. The object is the creation of a new Indian Union which shall constitute a Dominion, associated with the United Kingdom and the other Dominions by a common allegiance to the Crown, but equal to them in every respect, in no way subordinate in any aspect of its domestic or external affairs." The proposals suggested that immediately upon the cessation of hostilities, an elected body, representative of British India and the Indian States, should be set up, with the task of framing a new constitution for India. The British Government undertook to accept any constitution so framed, subject to the right of dissenting provinces to form separate unions. Meanwhile they reserved responsibility for the defence of India for the period of the war, but they invited the immediate participation of Indian party leaders in the councils of their country (Parliamentary Paper, Cmd. 6350, April 1942). The Chamber of Princes expressed the willingness of the States to co-operate in every reasonable manner compatible with their sovereignty and integrity in framing a new constitution; but after negotiations lasting nearly a fortnight the proposals were accepted by none of the party leaders, and the deadlock continued.

In a speech on the result of the Cripps Mission on April 28 (1942) the Secretary of State for India said: "The Mission and the unanimous policy for which Sir Stafford Cripps endeavoured to secure acceptance were not a sudden improvisation to meet a critical external situation, the death-bed repentance of an unregenerate Imperialism. They were the natural, and indeed inevitable culmination of a steady development, during these last few years, of thought and feeling about India, and Indian political aspirations." Moreover, as he repeatedly declared during the War of 1939-45, "We have invited Indians to frame their own constitution in accordance with their own ideas and to suit their own needs. This is a task of great complexity, which cannot be carried out in the middle of a life and death struggle like the present, even if there were yet agreement among Indians upon even the main principle. Meanwhile, however, we are ready to welcome and promote any steps representative Indians may take to come together and prepare the ground. Britain has pledged herself to complete democratic self-government for India, in the full belief that this is as high a measure of independence and security as any country can enjoy. The offer remains open. Both the form of India's future constitution and the time-table of her progress are in Indian hands."

The ever growing momentum of the war effort with its consequent complexity of administration necessitated yet a further expansion of the Governor General's Executive Council, and in July the new Council numbered 14 besides the Viceroy and the Commander in Chief. Of the 14 members eleven were Indians, and for the first time a Sikh and a member of the Depressed Classes were included.

The Congress Party whose prestige had much diminished after its rejection of the Cripps proposal, at a meeting of the All India Working Committee on July 14th, and later confirmed by Congress at Bombay on August 8th, resolved inter alia to "sanction the starting of a mass struggle on non-violent lines on the widest possible scale," if its demands for immediate handing over of power were not granted. On the same day Mr. Gandhi, Maulana Azad, Pandit Nehru and members of the Working Committee of the Congress Party were arrested and the All India Congress Committee and the provincial committees declared illegal. In the disorders which followed the arrest of the leaders, over 600 people were killed during August and September. The situation nowhere became out of hand, and by December conditions were almost normal.

Ministerial government was resumed in Assam in August.

On December 17, the Viceroy, addressing the annual meeting of the Associated Chamber of Commerce in Calcutta, spoke of the conservation of the essential unity of India, with full justice for the rights and legitimate claims of the minorities, and stated that political opinion must discover a middle road along which all men of goodwill may march. He refuted the suggestion that troubles in India were due to Britain's refusal to part with power, since agreement cannot be reached between the conflicting interests as to who is to take over the responsibilities which Britain is only too ready to transfer to Indian hands.

The Congress disturbances subsided by the end of 1942, except for sporadic incidents. About 20,000 persons were in jail for partaking in the rebellion. On February 10, Mr. Gandhi commenced a fast "unto capacity" to last three weeks, its avowed object being his unconditional release. Published letters between Mr. Gandhi and the Viceroy made it clear that Government held Congress and its leaders responsible for the deplorable acts of sabotage and terrorism which had occurred since the Congress revolution of August, 1942. Three members of the Executive Council resigned of the ground that they were unable to bear responsibility for Government's refusal to allow Mr. Gandhi's unconditional release. The fast ended on March 3, and Mr. Gandhi's detention continued. A statement was published by the Government of India on the Congress Party's responsibility for the disturbances in India during 1942-43, and presented as a Command Paper (Cmd. 6430).

On February 27 the Finance Minister stated that "some £300 millions of sterling debt had been repatriated since the war. India has completed the transition from a debtor to a creditor country and extinguished within the brief space of three years accumulations over decades of its public indebtedness to the United Kingdom."

The "pegging" legislation enacted in South Africa in April to check the penetration of Indians in European residential areas in Durban and the Transvaal aroused bitter feeling in India and a demand for retaliatory measures.

A ministry was formed in the North-West Frontier Province on May 25, thus leaving only five out of eleven Provinces in which responsible self-government was temporarily suspended.

The appointment of Field-Marshal Lord Wavell to succeed Lord Linlithgow was announced in October.

In September famine conditions prevailed in parts of Bengal. According to a White Paper (Cmd. 6479), presented in October, the total number of cases of disease directly or indirectly due to or aggravated by malnutrition admitted to hospitals in Calcutta alone between August 25 and October 25, were 9,448, of which 2,757 persons died. About twice this number were accounted for in the same period outside the hospitals. Delivery of food grains to Calcutta increased from 1,000 tons per diem in July and August to over 3,700 tons per diem in September and October. Relief centres were opened and rice controlled at Rs. 20 per maund (about 3½ lb. per lb.). An All India Food Conference was held at New Delhi in October, its main recommendations included a central food grains monopoly, statutory price control for major food grains and rationing for towns exceeding 100,000 persons.

Explaining the food situation on November 4, the Secretary of State for India said that while Britain has a constitutional responsibility towards India, agriculture and food were in Provincial hands. The annual production of rice per head in Bengal had declined over the last 30 years from 384 lb. to 283 lb., yet the increase of population was over 1,000,000 a year in the last decade. In some districts the density of population was over 2,000 per square mile. 5,500 free kitchens were distributing, and over 2,000,000 persons were daily receiving free issues of food. A further 300,000 tons of rice and other food grains, sufficient to see Bengal through the next three months to the main rice harvest, would seem to be assured, but the acute problem of distribution remained. The official figures showed a mortality excess over the normal of 688,000, due in part to famine, and, in larger proportion, to the epidemics of disease that followed in the wake of famine.

Lord Wavell addressed the Central Legislature at a joint session of the Chambers on February 17, 1944. He defined his first task as "to assist the South East Asia Command to drive the enemy from the gates of India." He stressed the importance of the post-war problems that would confront them and said "our great aim must be to plan for economic and social development so as to take our full share of living." The Viceroy re-stated the Government's offer of March, 1942, and said the offer was still open; but that demands for the release of Congress detainees were barren until they showed signs of willingness to co-operate.

Mr. Gandhi died February 22, aged 74 years. On April 24 serious explosions occurred in Bombay Dock, some 500 persons were killed and 2,000 injured. Mr. Gandhi was unconditionally released on medical grounds from detention on May 6 and in June the Government of India published the correspondence which passed between Lord Linlithgow, Lord Wavell, Government and Gandhi.

The Orissa Ministry resigned on June 30 thus making six out of eleven Provinces in which responsible self-government was temporarily suspended.

Acceptance of a formula regarding the principles of "Pakistan" (p. 716) presented by Mr. Rajagopalachari, a former Congressman, led in September to meetings between Gandhi and the Muslim leader Jinnah, their first since November, 1939. The leaders failed to reach agreement and negotiations broke down on September 27.

At the 5th All India Food Conference held at Delhi in January, 1945, it was stated that in 1943-44 the area under grain crops exceeded the average of the three years before the war by 22 million acres with an additional yield of 4 million tons of food grains. The extension of rationing with a basic ration of one pound of cereals per diem for each adult was among the recommendations.

A statement of Indian casualties in the war up to March 1945 gave the total in all theatres as 251,856. The Finance Member presenting the 6th War Budget stated the revenue deficit at the end of 1943-44 was £142 million, and explained the deficit was largely due to the fact that the fighting against the Japanese which took place mainly inside India's frontiers was chargeable to India in accordance with the 1940 financial settlement between India and the U.K. U.S.A. lease lend supplies and services to India up to the end of 1944-45 were estimated at £386 million, and reciprocal aid in the same period to approximately £93 million. Total sterling holdings in India up to March 31, 1945, stood at £1,030 million.

At the San Francisco Conference India was represented by a delegation consisting of Sir R. Mudaliar and Sir Firoz Khan Noon (British India) and Sir V. T. Krishnamachari (Indian States).

The Moslem League ministry in Bengal (a coalition including non-Congress Caste Hindus and representatives of Scheduled Castes) was defeated in March, having held office under Sir Kwaja Nazimuddin since April, 1943. There was no prospect of a ministry enjoying reasonable stability and the Governor assumed legislative control. Thus, in April, 1945, there were 4* out of 11 Provinces enjoying responsible self-government.

In May the Government of India issued a communique on post-war industrial policy, its main recommendation being that State assistance should aid private enterprise where necessary, basic industries only to be nationalised if the public interest required it.

A White Paper (Cmd. 6652) published on June 14, stating the desire of H.M.G. to make any practical contribution to the breaking of the political deadlock, set among its main points that the working out of India's new constitutional system was a task which could only be carried through by Indians. That at a time when H.M.G.'s policy was the withdrawal from all control in British Indian affairs, there was no intention of imposing self-governing institutions on an unwilling India. That the offer of March, 1942 (page 716) still stood in its entirety and hope was held that Indian political leaders might come to an agreement as to the procedure whereby India's permanent future form of government could be determined. Meanwhile it was proposed that the Viceroy's Executive Council should be reconstituted and that the Viceroy should in future recommend the appointment to his Council of persons selected by him from amongst leaders of Indian political life in proportions which would give a balanced representation of the main communities, including equal proportions of Moslems and Caste Hindus. Members of the Executive would be Indians with the exception of the Viceroy and the Commander in Chief.

Lord Wavell, who had returned from the U.K. following consultations with H.M.G., broadcasting on June 14 announced a political conference to be held at Simla on June 25 to which would be invited 22 political leaders including Gandhi and Jinnah. The purpose of the conference, the Viceroy stated, was to take counsel with him with a view to the formation of a new executive council more representative of organised political opinion. He made it clear that the formation of this interim government would not prejudice, and should make easier, the final constitutional settlement. Orders were issued for the release of the members of the Congress Working Committee remaining in detention in connection with the 1942 disturbances.

The Conference opened on June 25 and agreed without dissent to the proposal that the Executive Council should be reconstituted, but failed to reach agreement on the question of how the Council should be constituted in terms of parties and communities, and was dissolved on July 14.

It was announced in August that elections were to be held for the Central and Provincial legislatures during the winter, and the Viceroy again visited London for consultations. Broadcasting on Sept. 19 on his return to India Lord Wavell announced the intention of H.M.G. to convene as soon as possible a constitution-making body and stated that as a preliminary step he had been authorised immediately after the elections to undertake discussions with representatives of Provincial Legislative Assemblies to ascertain whether the proposals in the 1942 Declaration were acceptable, he had also been authorised to take steps after the elections were over to bring into being the Executive Council which would have the support of the main Indian parties.

INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

Founded in 1885 by the late Mr. A. O. Hume, at its first session in December laid down three fundamental principles dealing with the fusion of all elements of the population, the regeneration of the nation and the consolidation of union between England and India. The Congress which split in 1907 on the principles laid down by its founder reunited in 1916 and came under the complete domination of Mr. Gandhi in 1920. Congress in 1927 demanded independence as the goal of India but this was modified later. Mr. Gandhi retired from the Congress and politics in 1934 but in actual practice he is the virtual dictator of Congress policy.

* Punjab, Assam, N.W.F. Prov., and Sind.

MUSLIM LEAGUE.

Formed in 1906. Entered into a pact with the Indian National Congress in 1916. A split in 1928 resulted in the formation of the All Parties Muslim Conference, but in 1934 certain differences with the parent body were overcome and the Muslim representative institution, under the leadership of Mr. M. A. Jinnah, now functions as an active All India organisation. The principle of "Pakistan" (p. 716) was adopted at a league meeting held at Lahore in March 1940.

THE HINDU MAHASABHA.

Founded in 1920 by Hindus specially to represent Hindus. The realistic attitude of the Mahasabha towards the war, its desire to see India with a strong Army and modern industries, and its opposition to Gandhi's pacifism has secured its official recognition as an important political body.

IMPERIAL LEGISLATION.—Legislation for India in England is chiefly of a constitutional or financial character. The Regulating Act (1773), which created the first Governor-General, a Council of five members, and a supreme court with a chief judge, was the first statute that recognised the East India Company as a ruling body. Pitt's India Act (1784) left the business and most of the patronage to the Court of Directors, but gave the supreme civil and military authority to a Board of Control, whose president represented India in the House of Commons. In 1793 the Company's charter was renewed; in 1823, on a further renewal of the charter, the trade of India was thrown open; while on the next renewal in 1833 the Company's monopoly of the China trade was abolished, and they became a non-commercial governing body. In 1853 the Company's charter was renewed for the last time, and the Indian Civil Service was thrown open to competition. By "An Act for the Better Government of India" (1858), all the territories governed by the East India Company were transferred to the Crown, and all the powers exercised by the Company and the Board of Control were vested in the Secretary of State for India, assisted by a Council. In 1877 (under the Royal Titles Act) Queen Victoria assumed the title of Empress of India. By the Indian Councils Act (1909) the imperial and provincial Legislative Councils were enlarged, their powers of interpellation and criticism enhanced, and the elective element extended, special provision being made for the representation of landholders, the professional classes, Muhammadans, and European and Indian traders and planters. The executive councils of Madras and Bombay were increased in size, and power was given to constitute executive councils in provinces under Lieut.-Governors. The Indian High Courts Act (1921) empowered the Government of India to increase the number of High Court judges from 15 to 20, to establish new High Courts, and to appoint temporary judges. The Government of India Act (1922) created a Governor of Bengal, established an Executive Council for Bihar and Orissa, and authorised the creation of legislative councils in provinces under Chief Commissioners. An Act to consolidate the Imperial Legislation relating to the Government of India was passed in 1925. The Government of India Act, 1919, conferred on provinces a larger measure of independence of the Government of India; it distinguished the functions of local governments and local legislatures from the functions of the Governor-General in Council and the Indian Legislature; it provided for the devolution of authority in respect of provincial subjects to local governments, for the allocation of revenues to those governments and for the use under the authority of the Governor-General in Council of the agency of local governments in relation to central subjects; it provided for the transfer of some provincial subjects to the administration of the Governor acting with Ministers. It gave borrowing powers to local governments. It laid down that the major provinces should be governed, in relation to reserved subjects, by a Governor in Council, and in relation to transferred subjects by a Governor acting with Ministers, appointed from among the elected Members of the local legislative Council. It conferred extended powers on local legislatures. For the Supreme or Central Government, it provided that the Legislature should consist of the Governor-General and two Chambers, viz., the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly. It provided for the appointment of an Auditor-General and a Public Services Commission.

The Government of India Act, 1935, provides for the establishment of an All-India Federation, consisting of the Governor's Provinces:—Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bihar, the Central Provinces and Berar, Assam, the North-West Frontier Province, Orissa and Sind; the Chief Commissioners' Provinces—British Baluchistan, Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg, the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, the area known as Panth Piploda, and such other Chief Commissioners' Provinces as may be created under the Act; and the Indian States which accede to the Federation and for Provincial Autonomy (see p. 725), and responsibility with safeguards. The establishment of the Federation is dependent upon the accession of Rulers of States representing not less than half the aggregate population of the States and entitled to not less than half the seats to be allotted to the States in the Federal Upper Chamber (Council of State). The Federal Legislature will consist of His Majesty, represented by the Governor-General, and two chambers—the Council of State and the House of Assembly. The former will consist of 256 representatives of British India, the great majority of whom will be elected on a franchise of some 100,000 persons, and not more than 104 representatives of Indian States, appointed by the Rulers of the States concerned. The House of Assembly will consist of 250 representatives of British India, chosen by the Provincial Legislatures, and not more than 125 representatives of the Indian States, the allocation of the seats to each State or group of States to be in proportion to their population. The executive authority of the Federation will be exercised on behalf of His Majesty by the Governor-General, who will have certain special responsibilities. The Governor-General will have a Council of Ministers, responsible to the Legislature, to aid and advise him. The Governor-General and Governors will be responsible to the Secretary of State for the exercise of their special powers or when acting in their discretion. The Chief Commissioners' Provinces will be administered by the Governor-General acting, to such extent as he thinks fit, through a Chief Commissioner to be appointed by him in his discretion. The Act makes no change in the internal régime of the States or in the relationship between their Rulers and the Crown outside the Federal area.

INDIAN LAW.—The law administered in the Indian courts consists mainly of: (1) The enactments of the Indian Legislative Councils (imperial and provincial) and of the bodies that preceded them; (2) statutes of the British Parliament applicable to India; (3) the Hindu and Muhammadan laws of inheritance and domestic law; (4) the customary law affecting particular castes and races.

The Government of India.

EMPEROR OF INDIA—H.M. GEORGE VI.

Secretary of State—The Rt. Hon. Lord Pethick-Lawrence, P.C.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA is the Crown's responsible agent for the exercise of all authority vested in the Crown in relation to the affairs of India. The Governor-General and the Governors are responsible to him for the exercise of their special powers or when acting in their discretion. Indian Government business in England is transacted at the India Office and at the office of the High Commissioner for India.

The King-Emperor appoints the Governor-General, the Governors of the major Provinces (Bengal, Madras, Bombay, the United Provinces, Bihar, the Punjab, the Central Provinces, Assam, the North-West Frontier Province, Orissa, and Sind), the Commander-in-Chief, the Members of the Executive Council of the Governor-General, and the Judges of the High and Chief Courts. The term (except for judgeships) is usually 5 years.

Where the Governor-General is empowered by the Government of India Act, 1935, to act in his discretion, and in all other matters during the transitional period (i.e. until Part II of the Act relating to the Federation is brought into force) he is subject to direction by the Secretary of State. Up till 1941 the Executive Council consisted of 7 members, including the Commander-in-Chief. The Council now consists of 15 members as well as the Governor-General. Ordinarily, the opinion of the majority prevails, but the Governor-General is empowered in special circumstances to overrule the majority. In accordance with the Government of India Act, 1935, and rules thereunder, the Indian Legislature consists of the Governor-General and two Chambers, viz., the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly (see p. 729 as to their constitution). Except as otherwise provided by or under the Act, a Bill is not deemed to have been passed unless agreed to by both Chambers. The Act confers powers on the Governor-General of securing essential legislation in emergencies, subject to disallowance by His Majesty in Council; of returning Bills for reconsideration, and of vetoing proposed legislation affecting the safety or tranquillity of British India. The Indian Budget is submitted to both Chambers, and is voted on by the Legislative Assembly except in regard to certain specified heads, but the Governor-General in Council can act, notwithstanding a refusal or reduction of grants, where essential to the discharge of his responsibilities, and he may authorise expenditure necessary for the safety and tranquillity of British India or any part thereof. Differences of opinion between the two Chambers may be referred for decision by the Governor-General to a joint meeting of members of both Chambers appointed for the purpose. Although the Government does not command a majority in the Indian Legislature, it is necessarily given the power to reject adverse votes, since its responsibility is not to the Indian Legislature, but to Parliament. The seat of the Supreme Government is at New Delhi, the summer headquarters being still at Simla.

Business is conducted by 17 Departments—Finance; External Affairs; Home; Legislative; Commerce; Labour; Education, Health and Lands; Defence; Railway; Supply; Commonwealth Relations; Information and Broadcasting; War, War Transport, Posts and Air, Industries and Civil Supplies and Planning and Development. Each Department is in the charge of a Secretary to Government, and is under the care of a member of the Viceroy's Executive Council, who has authority to deal with affairs of minor importance, and to select what is worthy of the consideration of the Governor-General and his Council. The Governor-General himself superintends the External Affairs Department. The Finance Department deals with public accounts, loans, taxation, opium, currency, banking, mints, &c. The External Affairs Department conducts relations with Foreign States. The Home Department deals with the internal politics, civil service, judicial affairs, prisons, police, &c. The Legal Member of Council takes charge of Government Bills in connexion with the Legislative Department. The department of Commerce deals with trade and shipping, industries, stores, industrial research, exhibitions, &c. The Department of Industries and Civil Supplies formed in 1943 works under the Commerce Member and is responsible for industrial development especially in the post-war reconstruction, and for industrial research and statistics. Civil Supplies include price control other than foodstuffs. The department of Labour deals with labour, public works, irrigation, mines, technical education, &c. The Army is under the War Department, of which the Commander-in-Chief has charge in Council; in 1941 he set up a Defence Advisory Committee to assist in prosecuting India's war effort to the utmost. Ecclesiastical affairs are dealt with in the War Department. The Education, Health and Lands Department has the control of education, local government, sanitation, land revenue and surveys, agriculture, famine, meteorology, forests, foodstuffs, &c. Railway administration is entrusted to a Railway Department, which is in the charge of the War Transport member. The Posts and Air Department deals with posts and telegraphs, civil aviation, motor vehicles legislation and the Central Road Fund. All questions of supplies for India's war effort fall to the Supply Department. The Commonwealth Relations Department which conducts relations between India and the Dominions has the care of some millions of Indians scattered over the world and deals also with the regulation of emigration, and pilgrimages. The Department of Information and Broadcasting controls the Bureau of Public Information, film publicity, All India Radio, &c. The War Transport Department is responsible for the utilisation and development of transport by road and water, including Railway Board, ports and petrol rationing. The object of the new Planning and Development Department is to raise the post-war standard of living for Indians by the exploitation to the full of India's economic and scientific resources. The approval of H.M.G. has been given to the establishment of a National Defence Council of about 30 members, including representatives of Indian States, of Provinces, and of other elements in the national life of British India in its relation to the war effort.

On April 1, 1937, the Office of the Crown Representative was set up. It is known as the Political Department, and is not a Department of the Government of India. It conducts relations with Indian States. British India is divided into 17 Local Governments and Administrations, viz. :—Under Governors, Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bihar, the Central Provinces and Berar, Assam, the North-West Frontier Province, Orissa, and Sind; under Chief Commissioners, who are under the immediate authority of the Governor-General, British Baluchistan, Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg, the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, and the area known as Panth Piploa.

The unit of administration throughout British India is the District, the executive head of which is the District Officer, called Collector-Magistrate or District-Commissioner, as the case may be. There are 230 Districts in British India.

There are separate High Courts for both civil and criminal cases in Madras, Bengal, Bombay, Bihar, the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Punjab, and in the Central Provinces, and Chief Courts in Oudh and Sind. Appeals may be carried to the English Privy Council. The North-West Frontier Province, British Baluchistan, Ajmer-Merwara, and Coorg have each a Judicial Commissioner's Court. The High Court of Bihar is the High Court for the whole of Orissa. A Federal Court was established on October 1, 1937, for the determination of disputes between the units of constituent the Federation.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.*

The new provincial Governments and Legislatures came into being on April 1, 1937. For every Governor's Province (Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bihar, the Central Provinces and Bihar, Assam, the North-West Frontier Province, Orissa, and Sind) there is a Provincial Legislature (Legislative Assembly) and in the Provinces of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the United Provinces, Bihar, and Assam, two Chambers (the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly). The executive authority of a Province, which extends to the matters with respect to which the Legislature of the Province has power to make laws, is exercised, on behalf of His Majesty, by the Governor, either directly or through officers subordinate to him. The Governor has a Council of Ministers to aid and advise him in the exercise of his functions, except in so far as he is by or under the Government of India Act, 1935, required to exercise them in his discretion, but is not prevented from exercising his individual judgment in any case where by or under the Act he is required so to do. The validity of anything done by him cannot be called in question on the ground that he ought or ought not to have acted in his discretion or ought or ought not to have exercised his individual judgment. He selects his Ministers in consultation with the person who in his judgment is most likely to command a stable majority in the Legislature, those persons (including so far as practicable members of important minority communities) who will best be in a position collectively to command the confidence of the Legislature. The Governor has special responsibilities, namely:—(a) The prevention of menace to the peace or tranquillity of his Province or any part thereof; (b) the safeguarding of the legitimate interests of minorities; (c) the securing and safeguarding of the rights of civil servants past and present and their dependants; (d) the securing in the executive sphere of protection against discrimination; (e) the securing of the peace and good government of areas declared to be partially excluded areas; (f) the protection of the rights of any Indian State and the rights and dignity of the Ruler thereof; and (g) the securing of the execution of orders or directions lawfully issued to him under Part VI of the Act (Administrative Relations) by the Governor-General in his discretion. In so far as the Governor is by the Act required to act in his discretion or to exercise his individual judgment he is under the general control of, and must comply with such particular directions given to him by the Governor-General in his discretion. The Act provides that before giving such directions the Governor-General shall satisfy himself that they contain nothing requiring the Governor to act in any manner inconsistent with any Instrument of Instructions issued to the Governor by His Majesty. The composition of the Chambers is as shown on p. 719. The Legislative Assemblies, unless sooner dissolved, continue for five years. By the India and Burma (Postponement of Elections) Act, 1941, dissolution of the existing Legislative Assemblies may be postponed until twelve months after the end of the war. The Legislative Councils are permanent bodies not subject to dissolution, but as near as may be one-third of the members retire in every third year in accordance with the provisions of the Act. The Governor has powers of assenting to, or withholding assent from, of returning for consideration, or of reserving Bills for the consideration of the Governor-General. The Governor-General has powers of assenting to, or of withholding assent from, or of reserving for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure Bills reserved for his consideration.

Provincial Budgets show separately—(1) the sums required to meet expenditure described by the Act as expenditure charged upon the revenues of the Province (salaries, &c. of the Governor, Ministers, Advocate-General, High Court Judges, debt charges for which the Province is liable, expenditure connected with excluded areas, sums required to satisfy judgments, &c., of any court or arbitral tribunal, &c.); and (2) the sums required to meet other expenditure proposed to be made from the revenues of the Province. Estimates falling under category (1) are not submitted to the vote of the Legislative Assembly, but such estimates, other than those relating to the salary and allowances of the Governor and the expenditure relating to his Offices, can be discussed. Other estimates of expenditure are submitted, in the form of demands for grants, to the Legislative Assembly, which has powers of assenting to, or of withholding assent to, or of assenting to a demand subject to a reduction. No demand for a grant can be made except on the recommendation of the Governor.

Persons over 21 years of age are eligible for the franchise. The electorates in each Province are arranged for the most part on a basis designed to give separate representation to the various races, communities, and special interests into which the diverse interests of the Indian population naturally range themselves, and the franchise rules have given the vote to 30,137,914 of the adult population, including 4,254,704 women. The qualifications for electors, as also for candidates, vary in detail from province to province, but generally speaking, both in rural and urban areas the franchise is based on a property qualification as measured by the payment of a prescribed minimum of land revenue, income tax or municipal taxes. In all Provinces retired, pensioned or discharged officers and men of the regular army are entitled to the vote irrespective of the amount of their income and property. The franchise extends to all women who (1) possess a property qualification in their own right; (2) are the wives or widows of men with property qualifications; (3) are the wives of men with auxiliary service qualification for the vote; (4) are the pensioned widows and mothers of Indian officers, non-commissioned officers and soldiers or members of the Regular forces or of any British police force; (5) have an educational qualification,

* The areas and populations of the separate provinces are for British territory only according to the Census of 1941.

Provinces of India.

MADRAS.

(1) MADRAS (area, 126,166 sq. miles; pop., 9,341,810, was not only the oldest, but the most important of the three original Presidencies before Clive's conquest of Bengal, though it was small in extent until the annexation of the Carnatic in 1801. The province has no good natural harbour, but an artificial harbour has been constructed at Madras at great expense. The province is not naturally fertile, though irrigation systems in the river deltas have enormously increased the produce of the soil, and have yielded a large profit to the State. Rice, millet, and other food-grains, oilseeds, cotton, indigo, spices, tobacco, tea, &c., are cultivated. Manganese ore is mined and exported. Madras is served by the South Indian and by the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railways, the latter connecting it with Bengal on the north and Bombay on the west. About 88 per cent. of the people are Hindus. There are 2,047,000 native Christians, mainly Roman Catholics. Many natives of the Presidency emigrate to Burma and Ceylon, some only temporarily. The languages principally spoken are Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam and Kanarese. Madura (182,018) and Trichinopoly (142,843), famous for their Hindu temples, are the chief cities after the capital.

BOMBAY.

(2) BOMBAY.—The island of BOMBAY was part of the dowry of the Infanta of Portugal (1662), and was made over by Charles II. to the East India Company in 1668. The greater part of the present territory was obtained by annexations from the Mahrattas, and by the lapse of the Satara State. The province contains 76,443 square miles, with a population of 20,849,840. About 76 per cent. of the people of the Presidency are Hindus, and 20 per cent. Muhammadans. The Parsis (89,544), who are very prominent in trade, are mainly found in Bombay. Marathi, Gujarati, Kanarese and Western Hindi are the principal languages. Millet and other food-grains and oil seeds are cultivated. Cotton is largely produced for export and for manufacture in the constantly extending cotton-mills of Bombay and Ahmedabad. The chief railway systems are the Bombay, Baroda and Central India with the lines worked by it to the north, and the Great Indian Peninsula (with the Indian Midland) eastwards; south-eastwards is the Madras and Southern Mahratta system; Ahmedabad (591,267), Poona (258,197), Sholapur (213,000), and Surat are the most important cities.

BENGAL.

(3) BENGAL (area of newly-constituted province, 77,442 sq. miles, with population of 60,306,525) was placed under a Lieutenant-Governor in 1854. The old Bengal Presidency included practically all Northern and Central India, but subsequently the province consisted of part of Bengal proper with Bihar, Orissa, and Chota-Nagpur. Fifteen districts of Eastern Bengal were detached in 1905 and combined with Assam, while one district from the Central Provinces was added to Bengal. This partition was revoked in 1911, and Bengal now includes five Bengali-speaking divisions. About 55 per cent. of the population are Muhammadans and 43 per cent. Hindus. The principal languages are Bengali and Hindustani. For the most part the province is a great alluvial plain, very populous and productive. The chief products are rice, jute, oilseeds, sugar, tobacco, silk, tea, and coal. The East Indian Railway is the great artery of the Ganges Valley. The Eastern Bengal Railway, running north, and the Bengal Nagpur, south, from Calcutta, are also important. Other important cities are Dacca (213,218), now the second capital, and Howrah (379,292), a great jute-manufacturing centre adjoining Calcutta.

UNITED PROVINCES.

(4) THE UNITED PROVINCES OF AGRA AND OUDH, called "North-Western Provinces and Oudh" until 1902 (area, 106,247 sq. miles; pop. 55,020,167), forms the upper part of the great Ganges plain to the W. of Bengal, lying between the Himalayas and the hilly border of the central plateau. Originally (excluding Oudh) it formed part of the Bengal Presidency, but in 1835 a separate administration was formed under a Lieutenant-Governor. OUDH was annexed in 1856 and placed under a Chief Commissioner. After 1877 the two administrations were combined. The chief products are wheat, rice, barley, pulse, tobacco, millet, cotton, sugar, and oilseeds. About 85 per cent. of the population are Hindus and nearly 15 per cent. Muhammadans. Western Hindi is the chief language. The province is served by the East Indian, Oudh and Rohilkhand, and Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railways. Among the important cities may be named the ancient city of Agra (284,149), containing the Taj Mahal and other great works of architecture, the sacred Hindu city of Benares (263,100), the great manufacturing centre, Cawnpore (487,324), Lucknow (387,177), Bareilly (192,688), and Allahabad (260,630).

THE PUNJAB.

(5) THE PUNJAB (area, 99,089 sq. miles; pop. 28,418,820) occupies the N.W. angle of the great northern plain of India, and derives its name from the "Five Rivers" which, descending from the Himalayas, traverse the plain and unite in the Indus. It was annexed in 1849. Up to 1853 it was under a Board of Administration, who were then superseded by a Chief Commissioner, who was made Lieutenant-Governor in 1859, when also the Delhi Division was transferred to the Punjab from the North-West Provinces. The Punjab is mainly agricultural, and, owing to the scanty rainfall, depends largely for its harvests on vast irrigation canals, which are still being greatly extended, and are highly remunerative. The principal crops are wheat, millet, barley, maize, pulse, oilseeds, sugar, and cotton. The Punjab possesses rich deposits of rock-salt, which, with wheat and other grains and cotton, form the principal exports. Timber is scarce, 57% of the population are Muhammadans, and 27% are Hindus. The Sikhs number about 4,072,000 in the Punjab and Punjab States, to which they are mainly confined. Panjabi, Western Panjabi and Western Hindi are the chief languages. The various branches of the North-Western and Southern Punjab Railways serve the province. Amritsar, the sacred city of the Sikhs, has 391,010 people.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.

(7) The CENTRAL PROVINCES and BERAR (area, Central Provinces alone, 80,766 sq. miles; pop. 23,208,718). The Central Provinces were formed in 1861 out of territory taken from the North-West Provinces and Madras, but originally belonging to the Mahratta Kingdom of Nagpur. A small part of the Province was transferred to the new Province of Orissa on April 1, 1936. The country, hilly and forest-clad, contains a large population of aboriginal tribes. The people are mostly Hindus, and they speak mainly Western Hindi and Marathi. The province, which is served by the Indian Midland, Great Indian Peninsula, and the Bengal-Nagpur Railways, possesses coal and manganese ore, and produces rice, wheat, millet, pulse, oilseeds and cotton. There are cotton mills at Nagpur.

Since October 1, 1902, BERAR has been amalgamated with the Central Provinces. Berar (area, 17,809 sq. miles; pop. 3,604,866), which lies to the north of Hyderabad, was placed in British hands by the Nizam in 1853, in payment of arrears, and its revenues were charged with the future cost of the Hyderabad Contingent (which was in 1903 incorporated in the Indian Army). In 1902 Berar was leased in perpetuity to the Government of India on payment of £167,000 a year to the Nizam. Berar is purely agricultural. It is very fertile, and yields cotton, millet, oilseeds, &c. The chief language is Marathi, and most of the people are Hindus.

(8) ASSAM (area, 54,951 sq. miles; pop. 10,204,733) was constituted a separate administration in 1874 out of certain Bengal districts, most of which had been ceded by Burma in 1825. It was combined in 1905 with part of Bengal to form a new province, Eastern Bengal and Assam, but again became a separate administration in 1912. A range of mountains divides Assam into the Surma and Brahmaputra valleys, of which the chief towns are Sylhet and Gauhati respectively. The people are mainly Hindus and Muhammadans, and the chief languages are Bengali and Assamese. The Assam-Bengal railway serves the province. Tea and rice are the principal products. Assam contains nearly 900,000 immigrants from other parts of India, chiefly coolies for tea-gardens. Seat of Government, Shillong (pop. 21,300).

SIND.

(11) SIND (area, 48,136 sq. miles; pop. 4,535,008) was constituted a Governor's Province on April 1, 1936, by the transfer of the Sind Division from the Presidency of Bombay. It was annexed in 1843, and for a brief period was administered as a separate entity before it was absorbed in the Presidency of Bombay. From earliest days Sind has been a Moslem territory; 73 per cent. of the people are Moslems. The chief language is Sindhi. About 59 per cent. of the population are engaged in agriculture and husbandry. The Lloyd Barrage and Canals project secures perennial irrigation to areas which hitherto have received indifferent supply from inundation canals. Karachi is the port for the extensive North-Western Railway system.

(14) BRITISH BALUCHISTAN (area, 54,456 sq. miles; pop. 501,631) was constituted a separate administration in 1888, under the Governor-General's Agent in Baluchistan, who also controls the affairs of the native States of Baluchistan up to the Persian frontier. The districts it comprises (Sibi, Quetta, Pishin, Thal-Chotiali, Nushki, Zhob, Chagai, Nasirabad and the Bolan) were acquired partly from Afghanistan by the treaty of Gundamak (1879), partly from the Khan of Kalat by arrangement. Baluchistan consists largely of mountains and sandy deserts, and is sparsely populated. A large part of the people lead a pastoral, nomad life.
In religion they are Sunni Muhammadans, and Pashto is the chief language. The Afghan-Baluch frontier was demarcated in 1896-7. To Chaman, in this frontier, a railway runs via Quetta and is continued to Mirjawa. The Khan of Kalat, the head of a loose confederacy, receives about £19,000 per annum for quit-rents, subsidy, &c. British troops occupy Quetta, commanding the Bolan Pass, and have the treaty right to occupy any other position.

(15) DELHI.—This province (area 574 sq. miles;
pop. 917,939) was constituted on October 1, 1912, out of the Punjab division of Delhi, in pursuance of the policy announced by H.M. the King-Emperor at the Delhi Durbar in December, 1911, to move the Capital of India and its seat of Government from Calcutta to Delhi. (Pop. 521,849).

(16) THE ANDAMANS and NICOBARS (area 3,143 sq. miles; pop. 33,768) form a chain of islands in the eastern part of the Bay of Bengal. Port Blair, in South Andaman, has been used as an Indian penal settlement since 1858; but its use as such was discontinued in 1945. Much valuable timber, worked by convict labour was obtained. The Nicobar Islands, almost due south of the Andamans, were first occupied by the British in 1869. They comprise 21 (area 535 sq. miles) islands. The principal products are coco-nuts. Japanese occupation of the Islands lasted from March 23, 1942, to August, 1945.

The Laccadive Islands comprise 14 islands (nine inhabited), distant 200 miles from the Maabar coast of the Madras Presidency, in which they are included. (Pop. 18,393 in 1941.)

(17) PANTH PIPLODA (area 25 29 sq. miles; pop.
about 5,300) consists of the ten and a half villages of Panth Piploa Chapakhira, Kachalia, Karondi, Kharua, Kotri, Kesapura, half Sabdi, Gurbhehi, Chapaner and Sakatkheri, grouped in four small pieces of British territory, situated in the neighbourhood of Lat. 23° 27' N. and Long. 75° 25' E.
The four groups of villages are surrounded by the territory of the States of Dewas, Gwalior and Jaora.
Kharua is the seat of the administration. The Resident at Indore is ex officio Chief Commissioner.

Chief Commissioner, C. G. Herbert, C.S.I., C.I.E.

AGENCIES.

BALUCHISTAN.—This Agency includes two States—Kalat (area 80,410 sq. miles; pop. 356,204 (1941), and Las Bela (area 7,132 sq. miles; pop.
63,008). The Kalat State, which was formerly a semi-independent State under the suzerainty of Kabul, is a confederacy of partially independent chiefs, of whom the Khan of Kalat is the head.

Agent to the Governor-General and Resident (who is also Chief Commissioner, Baluchistan), Lt.-Col.

BARODA AND THE STATES OF WESTERN INDIA AND GUJARAT.—(Area excluding Baroda 43,547 sq. miles; population 6,050,530). Up to 1943 the Agency styled Baroda and the Gujarat States consisted of states in the northern portion of the Bombay Presidency which until April, 1933, were in relations with the Government of Bombay.
In 1943 under an extensive scheme for improvement of administration the Western India, Baroda and Gujarat Agencies were re-grouped, under the charge of the resident at Baroda. The most important states are Cutch, Junagarh, Nawanagar, Bhavnagar, Rajpipla, Dhrangadhra, Radnagar, Gondal, Dharampur, Chota Udepur and Baria.
Included in this agency are 337 non salute states and estates with an area of 12,254 sq. miles and a population of 1,448,388.

As regards Baroda, see p. 745.

CENTRAL INDIA (area 52,047 sq. miles; pop.
7,506,427) includes 28 Salute States and 30 Non-Salute States. They lie to the north of the Narbada and to the south and east of Rajputana. The Agency is divided by a strip of British territory into two main portions: Bundelkhand and Baghel-khand on the east, and Central India proper on the west. The most important States are Indore, Bhopal and Rewa, which include between them one-half of the total area.

Resident, C. G. Herbert, C.S.I., C.I.E. Rs.4,000

DECCAN AND KOLHAPUR STATES (area, 10,870 sq. miles; pop. 2,785,428). This Agency was formed in April, 1933, of the States in the southern portion of the Bombay Presidency which were formerly in political relations with the Government of Bombay. The leading State is Kolhapur, the ruling family of which is descended from Shivaji, the founder of the Marhatta Empire. Other important States are Janjira, Sawantwadi, Mudhol, Sangli and Bhor.

Resident, Lt.-Col. C. W. L. Harvey, C.I.E. Rs.3,000

EASTERN STATES (area, 65,210 sq. miles; pop.
8,087,563, of whom aboriginal tribes form a considerable proportion). The most important States are Cochin Behar, Tripura, Mayurbhanj, Patna, Bastar and Kalahandi.

Resident, H. J. Todd, C.I.E. Rs.3,000

MADRAS STATES (area, 10,757 sq. miles; pop. 7,991,647). The Malayalam States of Travancore (area, 7,662 sq. miles; pop. 6,070,018) and Cochin (area, 1,493 sq. miles; pop. 1,422,875) lying together in S. W. India, representing ancient Hindu dynasties, are the two most important States included in the Agency. Banganapalle and Sandur are under the charge of the Resident in Mysore. The configuration of the sea-board with numerous creeks and inland waterways is most favourable to coastal trade.

Resident, Lt.-Col. C. G. N. Edwards, C.I.E.Rs. 3,000

NORTH-WEST FRONTIER (area, 9,061 sq. miles; pop. 538,644). The Indian States of the North-West Frontier Province are five in number; Chitral (area, 4,000 sq. miles; pop. 80,000) and four non-salute States (area, 5,061 sq. miles; pop. 508,644).

Agent to the Governor-General (who is also Governor of the North-West Frontier Province), Sir George Cunningham, K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., O.B.E.

PUNJAB STATES (area, 49,521 sq. miles; pop. 6,594,198). The Sikh State of Patiala and the Moslem State of Bahawalpur are the leading States. Other prominent States besides Khairpur, are Jind, Nabha and Kapurthala.

Resident, Sir Conrad L. Corfield, K.C.I.E., C.S.L., M.C. Rs. 4,000

RAJPUTANA (area, 132,559 sq. miles; pop. 13,670,208). Rajputana is the name of a great territorial area lying on the north-west of Central India, between Sind and the United Provinces. It extends some 460 miles from north to south, and is 530 miles in length. About half of the area is desert. The Agency contains 23 States. Two (Tonk and Palanpur) are under Moslem Rulers, two (Bharatpur and Dholpur) are under Jat Rulers, and the ruling families of the remaining States are Rajput. The most important States are Jodhpur (Marwar), Udaipur (Mewar), Jaipur and Bikaner. The Rajput dynasties are the most ancient in India, and go back before the Mughal Empire and resemble feudal monarchies.

Resident (who is also Chief Commissioner of Ajmer-Merwara), Lt.-Col. Sir George V. B. Gillan, K.C.I.E. Rs. 4,000

APPOINTMENTS IN INDIA AND BURMA SERVICES.

On June 1, 1945, a scheme was announced for the recruitment of candidates with approved "war service" to fill vacancies that had accrued by that date, and vacancies accruing up to the end of the war with Japan, in the following Services:—

- Indian Civil Service.
- Indian Political Service.
- Indian Police.
- Burma Civil Service (Class I).
- Burma Police (Class I).
- Burma Frontier Service.

Candidates must have attained the age of 21 (or 19 in the case of the Indian Police or the Burma Police (Class I)) and must have been born on or after August 2, 1919 (or August 2, 1917, in the case of the Indian Police or the Burma Police (Class I)). European candidates (i.e. candidates of European descent and non-Asiatic domicile) must have received a good general education and:—

- (a) if candidates for the Indian Civil Service, the Burma Civil Service (Class I) or the Burma Frontier Service, must produce evidence that they reached a standard which qualified them for admission to a University (e.g. Matriculation or the School Certificate with the necessary credits);
- (b) if candidates for the Indian Police or the Burma Police (Class I), must have passed the School Certificate or equivalent examination.

The Recruitment Regulations require candidates qualified on June 1, 1945, to despatch their applications in time to reach the prescribed address within six months of that date and candidates becoming qualified subsequent to that date in time to reach the prescribed address not later than six months after the date on which they become qualified.

The Recruitment Regulations in full, together with information on numbers of vacancies, method of selection, conditions of service, etc., are contained in a descriptive leaflet (B.S.1). This leaflet and the application form (B.S.2) may be obtained on application to the Secretary, India and Burma Recruitment, India Office, Whitehall, S.W.1.

The Indian Army.—Copies of a pamphlet giving full information regarding appointments, promotion, pay, &c., may be obtained, on application, from the Military Department of the India Office. The following is a summary of the principal points. Candidates competing for commissions in the Indian Army are required to pass the Army Entrance Examination held by the Civil Service Commissioners. They must be between 18 and 19 years of age (in the case of Indian candidates the age limits are 18 and 20 years) at a date specified in the notice of examination. Of the cadetships for the Indian Army offered, some are allotted to King's India Cadets nominated by the Secretary of State for India, and one or two to King's Cadets nominated by the Army Council; the balance being allotted by open competition. A limited number of entrance scholarships are awarded by the War Office at each Army Entrance examination to candidates (other than King's Cadets and King's India Cadets) in order of merit in the examination who obtain not less than 60 per cent. of the maximum marks. At the end of the period of training at Sandhurst, cadets recommended for commissions are gazetted to the Unattached List for the Indian Army. The conditions of service stated above have been modified for holders of temporary commissions granted during the war.

Royal Indian Navy.—Information regarding the conditions of appointment to, and service in, the Royal Indian Navy may be obtained from the Secretary, Military Department, India Office.

Indian Medical Service.—Appointments to the Indian Medical Service are made by nomination by the Secretary of State. Applications from candidates of pure European descent who are under 32 years of age should be addressed to the Secretary, Military Department, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.1. Other applications should be addressed to the Director-General, Indian Medical Service, Delhi (or Simla), India, from whom further information can be obtained.

Indian Ecclesiastical Establishment.—Appointments of Chaplains of the Church of England and the Church of Scotland to the Indian Ecclesiastical establishments are made, on the occurrence of vacancies, by the Secretary of State for India from amongst candidates recommended by the India Chaplains Board of the Church of England and the Colonial and Continental Committee of the Church of Scotland, Edinburgh, respectively. Church of England candidates must be priests who have been for at least 3 years in Holy Orders and should ordinarily be between 27 and 34 years of age, and Church of Scotland candidates must have been licensed for three years and, ordinarily, they should be under 34 years of age. A memorandum giving the conditions of service together with forms of application may be obtained from the Secretary, Services and General Department, India Office, Whitehall, S.W.1.

Indian State Railways.—Appointments are made by the Federal Railway Authority in India and any recruitment in England is normally conducted by the High Commissioner for India.

Agricultural, Educational, Forest, Engineering and Veterinary Services.—These Services are under the control of the Government of India and the Provincial Governments. Any recruitment in respect of them that may be undertaken in England is normally conducted by the High Commissioner for India.

Geological Survey, Indian Customs Service, Indian Audit and Accounts Service, Indian Railway Accounts Service, and Military Accounts Department.—Appointments are made by the Government of India. Except in the case of the Geological Survey, appointments to which are made on the advice of a Selection Committee, the normal method of appointment to these Services is by means of a competitive examination open to British subjects of Asiatic domicile. Enquiries may be addressed to the High Commissioner for India, India House, Aldwych, London, W.C.2.

THE FINANCES OF INDIA (CENTRAL GOVERNMENT AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS) FOR THE YEAR ENDED MARCH 31, 1944.

SEPARATION OF CENTRAL AND PROVINCIAL FINANCES.

Under the system of decentralization of finance, begun by Lord Mayo in 1870 and subsequently developed by successive stages, the Government of India assigned to the Provincial Governments a fixed share of the revenue collected by them under certain heads. From the revenue so assigned the Provincial Governments were required to meet the whole of the expenditure within their respective provinces under certain heads, and a portion of the expenditure under other heads. Under the Montagu-Chelmsford reforms, however, there was from April 1, 1919, an almost complete separation between the finances of the Central Government and those of the Provinces, the latter retaining the whole income from land revenue, irrigation, stamps, excise, forests, &c., whilst the whole income from customs, railways, posts and telegraphs and income tax (subject to a small deduction) went to the former.

On April 1, 1937, when provincial autonomy was introduced, the balances of the Provincial Governments were separated from those of the Central Government. From that date the Provinces have received a definite share of the proceeds of income tax, distributed among them in a prescribed manner, and a prescribed share of the net proceeds of the excise duty on jute or jute products is allocated to the jute-growing provinces. A certain category of taxes are levied and collected by the Central Government, the net proceeds being distributed to the Provinces, subject to the right of the Central Government to levy a surcharge for its own purposes. Certain of the Provincial Governments receive annual grants from the Central Government, and a share of the additional duty on imported foreign salt.

The Central Government defrays all expenditure on defence and on the various services allotted to it, and the Provinces similarly are wholly responsible for the charges of their own services and also for expenditure on famine. The Provincial Governments frame their own budgets, and have certain powers of raising loans, and of imposing additional taxation within the area of their jurisdiction.

INDIAN SYSTEM OF NOTATION.—The Indian numerical notation system differs from the European. Large numbers are punctuated as crores and lakhs and not in hundreds, thousands and millions. A lakh is one hundred thousand (written Rs.1,00,000), and a crore is one hundred lakhs or ten millions (1,00,00,000). Thus, 1,68,00,000 is read as 1 crore 68 lakhs. A lakh of rupees (Rs.1,00,000), may be read as equal to £7,500 at 13½ rupees—the statutory rate adopted for conversion in this article. The rupee is divided into 16 annas and, at 13½ rupees to £1, the anna is equivalent to 1½d. The anna is subdivided into 12 pice (1½d. approximate value).

NET REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF THE CENTRAL AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS.

The figures of Gross Revenue given above include the net receipts of railways and other commercial undertakings without any deduction on account of interest charges; the receipts from the sale of opium take no account of the cost of cultivation and manufacture; and the total receipts under tax revenue do not eliminate the cost of collection. Customs revenue includes the portion of the import and excise duties on motor spirit payable to the Central Road Development Fund for expenditure by Provincial Governments, &c. On the expenditure side, Defence expenditure is shown gross, the Defence receipts being included under revenue, and the appropriation to the Road Development Fund is included under Civil Works. This method of compilation may cause the revenue available for administrative purposes and the expenditure on such purposes to appear greater than they really are. A statement of the net revenue and expenditure of the Central and Provincial Governments for 1943-44 is therefore given in the table below, which presents a picture of the revenue available for administrative purposes and the expenditure of the Central and Provincial Governments on such purposes.

BURDEN OF TAXATION.—The net revenue for the whole of British India from the principal sources of ordinary revenue, without allowing for certain portions of Salt, Excise, and Customs duties which fall on persons in the Indian States, was estimated in 1944 at about Rs. 8.0 per head, or, if land revenue (which is akin to rent) be added, Rs. 9.0 per head.

DEBT AND ASSETS.—On March 31, 1944, the public debt of the Central Government amounted to Rs. 122.29 crores (£84.7 million) in India and £50.6 million in England. The public debt of the Provincial Governments amounted to Rs. 171.73 crores (£128.80 million), including loans amounting to Rs. 104.1 crores (£78 million) from the Central Government.

LAND REVENUE.—This is the oldest and the most important source of revenue. The State is the paramount landlord in India, and the land revenue is the State's share in the rent of the soil. In most of Bengal and Bihar and Orissa, about one-fourth of Madras, and part of Assam, the land revenue has been permanently fixed; elsewhere generally the assessments, or settlements, are revised periodically (usually once in 20 or 30 years). The nature of the settlements varies in different provinces. In parts of Bengal and Bombay, the greater part of the United Provinces, the Punjab, the N. W. Frontier Province, and the Central Provinces the settlement is with large proprietors or proprietary village communities (zamindari), and the estate is assessed as a whole. Elsewhere (especially in Berar, Bombay and Sind, Assam, and most of Madras) the raiyatwari tenure prevails, and each raiyat, or peasant proprietor, holds direct from the State. In temporarily settled zamindari districts the land revenue usually amounts to about 50 per cent. of the rental paid to the landlord by the cultivating-tenant, while in temporarily settled raiyat districts the revenue varies from 20 per cent. of the gross produce down to much smaller proportions, averaging about 8 per cent. Private improvements are exempt from assessment. The gross land revenue paid to the State (Central and Provincial Governments) in 1943-44 amounted to Rs.3,053.11 lakhs (£22,898,325).

THE OPIUM REVENUE.—Opium is produced under Government special supervision in the United Provinces and under special arrangements in the Central India, Rajputana and Gwalior States, and is bought in its crude condition from the cultivators in the United Provinces and from the Durbars of the States concerned by Government at fixed rates. It is disposed of by Government in the following ways:—(a) by issue to the Excise Department in India for local consumption under revenue regulations and by export to Burma, and in small quantities to Aden, French and Portuguese settlements in India, Nepal, Zanzibar and Pemba; (b) by supply to the Medical Department in India for medical purposes and by export to the United Kingdom for sale to chemists. The gross revenue from opium, including the value of opium sold to the Excise Department for consumption in India, was Rs.80.23 lakhs (£601,725) in 1943-44. The expenses of production, &c., were Rs.81.74 lakhs (£613,050). The Government of India decided in 1907 to reduce progressively the amount of Indian opium exported to China, and as from March 31, 1917, export of Indian opium to China was prohibited. In 1926 the Government of India announced its intention to restrict the export of opium except for medicinal purposes. Exports of provision opium to foreign countries ceased at the end of 1935.

EXCISE.—The duties on motor spirit, kerosene, sugar, matches, and steel ingots, less refunds and drawbacks, amounted to Rs.2,493.61 lakhs (£18,702,075) in 1943-44 (Central Excise Duties). The duties on drugs and intoxicants produced in the country yielded Rs.2835.66 lakhs (£21,267,450) in 1943-44.

CUSTOMS.—The net receipts amounted to Rs.2,795.02 lakhs (£20,962,650) in 1943-44. (For tariff, see p. 741.) The export duty on jute produced 225.38 lakhs (£1,690,350). The protective duties on iron, steel, cotton piece goods, &c., yielded 33.43 lakhs (£250,725) for 1943-44.

INCOME TAX and Super-tax for 1945-46 is levied at the following rates, which include the surcharge imposed by the Indian Finance Act, 1945.

PART I.

Rate in the

- (3) On the next Rs. 5,000 ... 2 annas 1 pie.
- (4) On the next Rs.5,000 ... 3 annas 6 pies.
- (5) On the balance of total income... 4 annas 9 pies.

Provided that—

- (1) no income-tax shall be payable on an income which, before deduction of the allowance, if any, for earned income, does not exceed Rs.2,000;

- (ii) the income-tax payable shall in no case exceed half the amount by which the total income (before deduction of the said allowance, if any, for earned income) exceeds Rs.2,000;

- (iii) the income-tax payable on the income as reduced by the allowance for earned income shall not exceed either—

(a) a sum bearing to half the amount by which the total income (before deduction of the allowance for earned income) exceeds Rs.2,000 the same proportion as such reduced total income bears to the unreduced total income, or

- (b) the income-tax payable on the income so reduced at the rates specified above, whichever is less.

B. In the case of every company and local authority, and in every case in which, under the provisions of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, income-tax is to be charged at the maximum rate:—

On the whole of total income. 4 annas 9 pies.

PART II.

Rates of Super-tax.

A. In the case of every individual, Hindu undivided family, unregistered firm and other association of persons, not being a case to which paragraphs B and C of this part apply—

- (2) On the balance of total income... 2 annas.

D. In the case of every company:—

On the whole of total income... 3 annas.

† 1 pie = 1/4 d. in the £; 1 anna = 1 s. 3 d. in the £. 12 pies = 1 anna; 16 annas = 1 rupee; 13½ rupees = £1 (statutory rate).

Excess Profits Tax is levied at the rate of 66½ per cent. After payment of income tax and super tax on the balance, the remainder must be deposited with Govt. Rs.7862.76 lakhs (₹58,970,700) were received from taxes on income in 1943-44, and Rs.5127.75 (₹38,458,125) from super-tax so far as that super-tax is payable by Companies (Corporation Tax).

STAMPS.—Stamps yielded Rs.1534.69 lakhs gross (₹11,510,175) in 1943-44. About two-thirds of the revenue is from court fees and one-third from commercial stamps.

SALT.—The salt duty was reduced from Rs.2½ to Rs.2 a maund (82½ lb.) in 1903, to Rs.1½ in 1905, and to Rs.1 in 1907. It was increased to Rs.1½ on March 1, 1916, to Rs.2½ from March 1, 1923, reduced to Rs.1½ from March 1, 1924, raised to Rs.1 As.9 in 1931. Rs.833.98 lakhs (₹6,004,850) were received from salt in 1943-44.

FORESTS.—About 98,000 square miles of forests are reserved and scientifically worked by the State, while about 159,000 square miles besides are under State control. The revenue from forests amounted to Rs.1021.55 lakhs (₹7,661,625) in 1943-44.

POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.—The Post Office in 1940-41 handled over 1,215 million of letters, post-cards, newspapers, &c., and issued 43 million of money orders. At the end of 1940-41 the Posts and Telegraph Department was maintaining 102,100 miles of line carrying 528,200 miles of wire and 1,500 miles of cable containing 120,400 miles of conductors. The number of paid messages sent in 1940-41 was 18.5 million. The capital outlay amounted to Rs.2319.03 lakhs (₹17,392,725) at the end of 1943-44. The Indian Postal and Telegraph services were amalgamated on April 1, 1914. The combined services showed for the year a profit of Rs.902.57 lakhs (₹6,769,275).

BROADCASTING.—All India Radio is a Department of the Government of India which controls broadcasting in India. There are 9 stations and 15 transmitters at present in operation. Seven receiving stations are also in operation at Bombay, Delhi, Peshawar, Calcutta, Madras, Trichy and Dacca.

RAILWAYS.—Nearly all the railways in India are owned by the State and administered by a Railway Board, though many are leased to and worked by companies. The mileage open for traffic on March 31, 1944, was 40,556. Of the mileage open about 50 per cent. was on the standard gauge (5½ ft.), and about 42 per cent. on the metre gauge. On March 31, 1944, the total capital at charge was Rs.858.48 crores (₹643,860,000). The net earnings of the railways in 1943-44 amounted to 8493.44 lakhs (₹63,700,800), showing a percentage of 9.89 on total capital at charge. The number of passengers "originating" was 789.3 million, and the goods traffic amounted to 95.9 million tons. Rates are very low, third-class passengers travelling on the average about four miles for a penny. The contribution paid from railways to general revenues during 1943-44 was Rs.3763.64 lakhs (₹28,227,300).

IRRIGATION.—The development of irrigation by British engineers commenced over 100 years ago. During the last 20 years the Sarda Canal (United Provinces), the Lloyd Barrage and canals (Sind), the Sutlej Valley and Haveli schemes (Punjab), and the Mettur Dam (Madras) projects have been put in hand and successfully completed, while a sixth, the Thal Canal, is under construction. The Sarda Canal, which takes off from the borders of Nepal and passes through Oudh and Rohilkand, is the longest canal in the world, having 4,177 miles of main canal distributaries and irrigating 1½ million acres. Surveys in connexion with a project for the economic development of the Damodar river valley in Bihar and Bengal were sanctioned in August 1945. The scheme is estimated to cost ₹41 million and to take 10 years to complete. The Damodar valley contains the greater part of the coal resources of India and is particularly suitable for industrial development. The project envisages an increase in irrigated areas of 560,000 acres. The total capital outlay on State irrigation works up to March 31, 1944, was Rs.144,56.53 lakhs (₹108,423,975), which, apart from the advantages to cultivators and protection against famine, yielded revenue to the State, after payment of interest charges, of Rs.556.96 lakhs (₹4,177,200). The area irrigated by Government irrigation works, excluding the Indian States, in 1939-40 amounted to 35 million acres.

CURRENCY.—The principal coin in use is the silver rupee, pre-war content—165 grains of fine silver and 15 grains of alloy, weight in all 180 grains troy or 1 tola. Up to 1893 the Indian Mints were open by law for the unrestricted coinage of silver into rupees. Owing, however, to the almost continuous fall in the value of the rupee from 1871 to 1893, legislation in the latter year closed the mints to the public, with a view to eventually fixing the exchange. For a time the rupee continued to fall, but subsequently it rose, and between 1898 and 1916 was practically stable at 1s. 4d. The Act of 1899 made the British sovereign legal tender in India at the ratio of 15 rupees to the sovereign, the rupee, however, remaining also legal tender to any amount, but the ratio was altered to 10 rupees in 1920, and to 13½ rupees in 1927. The Gold Standard Reserve was built up out of the profit from the coinage of rupees. The principal objects for which it was maintained were (1) to provide funds from which the Secretary of State could finance his requirements when remittance of funds from India through the usual market channels could not conveniently be arranged, and (2) to furnish resources against which sterling drafts might, if necessity arose, be sold by the Government of India to remitters in India. On April 1, 1935, the Reserve Bank of India took over the management of the currency and the duties of selling Treasury Bills on behalf of Government and of supplying the Secretary of State for India with his sterling requirements. On the same date certain assets were handed over to it by Government, including £32,500,000 from the Gold Standard Reserve. The balance of £7,500,000 of the Gold Standard Reserve in the form of sterling securities and cash was retained by Government in the newly created Silver Redemption Reserve, which is held to meet the liability imposed by Section 36 (1) of the Reserve Bank Act, under which Government are obliged to pay full value for surplus rupees which may be transferred by the Bank up to a maximum of Rs. 5 crores a year. India has a paper currency. Government received 749.81 lakhs (£5,623,575) as its share of the profits of the Reserve Bank of India in 1943-44. The 1, 2½, 5, 10, 50, and 100 rupee notes are legal tender everywhere in India, but other notes only within their circles of issue.

ARMY.—The Army in India consists of the regular British troops, about 57,000, the regular Indian troops, 157,000, the Auxiliary Force, 24,000, the Indian Territorial Force, 19,000, the Indian Army Reserve, 35,400, and the Indian State Forces, 40,000, when these are placed at the disposal of the Indian Government. In June, 1940, it was announced that India's Defence Forces were to be expanded by the recruitment of 100,000 men. The net military expenditure (including navy) has risen from about £20,000,000 in 1922-23 to £3,68,00,82 lakhs (£276,006,075) in 1943-44. The estimated net expenditure for 1945-46 is £4,76,77,29 lakhs (£372,579,675). A contribution of £1,500,000 a year is paid by the Imperial Government towards the cost of India's defence.

THE ROYAL INDIAN NAVY, reorganised on a combatant basis in 1928, flies the white ensign. It is under the command of a Flag Officer of the Royal Navy. The fleet consists of five escort vessels, one surveying ship, one patrol-boat, eleven other vessels, and one trawler.

EDUCATION.—Elementary education is based, so far as possible, on an adaptation of indigenous institutions and traditions. Higher education is an imported product. It is popular, and has undoubtedly been attended with beneficial results. As is natural with an imported product, its development is marked by some crudities, and its influence, has to some extent been unsettling, see p. 741. In 1941-42 there were 15 Universities in British India and 2 in Indian States, viz., Agra, Andhra, Annamalais, Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Benares, (Hindu), Patna, Dacca, Aligarh (Muhammadan), Lahore, Hyderabad (Osmania), Mysore, Lucknow, Nagpur and Delhi. In State institutions education is secular. The institutions numbered 232,789, and the scholars 15,993,187, including 3,588,348 females. Of the institutions, about 86 per cent. are maintained by the State or aided by grants, the rest being private and unaided. Of the total expenditure on education in 1941-42, Rs. 3,086 lakhs (£23,145,000), £6,409,350 came from fees, and £13,536,000 from Government revenues or local and municipal funds. The census of 1931 showed that only 156 males and 29 females per thousand are literate, in the sense of being able to read and write any language. The census of 1941 shows a striking increase of literates during the decade 1931-41. Preliminary tabulations show the percentage of literates as 12.2, compared with under 7 per cent. in 1931.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT, municipal and rural, in its present form, is a product of British rule. The municipalities at the end of 1938-39 numbered 756, with a total population of 21.94 million, and receiving an income of Rs. 1,344 lakhs (£10,830,000) from rates and taxes (octroi, taxes on houses and lands, water, lighting, and conservancy rates, &c.) and Rs. 2,713 lakhs (£20,347,500 from other sources. Out of 12,616 members of municipal bodies 412 were official and 12,204 non-official. In almost all districts in British India there are local district boards, partly representative. Of their total expenditure of about Rs. 1,594 lakhs (£12,705,000) in 1938-39 over 25 per cent. was devoted to civil works, over 38 per cent. to education, and the remainder largely to sanitation and hospitals.

JUSTICE, POLICE, AND PRISONS.—In 1939 there were 7,375 officers and 22,328 honorary judges and magistrates exercising civil and criminal jurisdiction. Many of the superior and the great majority of the inferior officers are Indians. In 1939, 1,866,532 civil suits were instituted; 3,118,983 persons were tried, and 1,710,483 convicted, in criminal cases, of whom 718 were sentenced to death and 567 executed, 1998, to transportation, and 186,068 to imprisonment. The strength of the police in 1939 was 12,565 officers and 176,366 men. There were 1,339 prisons, with a daily average of 130,266 prisoners. The convict settlement of Port Blair (Andamans) was closed in August, 1945.

VITAL STATISTICS.—The reporting of vital occurrences is still defective. The recorded death rate for British India in the decennium ended 1913 ranged between 38.21 per 1,000 in 1908 and 28.72 in 1913; it was 35.9 per 1,000 in 1919 and 22.2 in 1939. There were over 12 million deaths from influenza during 1918-19. Fevers of various kinds are by far the commonest cause of death, cholera, dysentery and diarrhoea, smallpox, and (since 1896) plague being other chief causes. The reported deaths from plague up to the end of 1933 were about 12,470,000 in India as a whole. The ratio of births per 1,000 of the population was 33.6 in 1939. In 5,650 hospitals and dispensaries, maintained mostly from public funds, 79,057,465 patients were treated in 1939. According to the census of 1931 there were 147,911 lepers.

TRADE IN INDIA.—The table on p. 739 exhibits the leading figures of Indian trade for the last five years in thousands of pounds sterling (Rupees being converted at the rate of 13½ to the £).

During the year 1943-44 as compared with 1941-42 the value of the imports (excluding Government stores and treasure) increased by approx. Rs. 733.50 (£5½ mill.), or approx. 7 per cent., while the total exports (including re-exports but excluding treasure and Government stores) increased by Rs. 1502.83 lakhs (£11,271,000), or approx. 6 per cent.

PORTS.—The chief seaports are Bombay, Calcutta, Karachi, and Madras; lesser ports are Port Blair (Andamans), Calicut and Trivandrum (Madras), and Surat (Bombay).

AGRICULTURE is by far the most important occupation of the people of India. In British territory in 1939-40, 244,574,857 acres were sown, or 200,950,786 acres excluding crops sown more than once. Food crops occupied 196 million acres of the total area sown (including areas sown more than once) and non-food crops 48 million acres. Rice represented 29 per cent. of the total area sown, millets about 15 per cent., wheat 12 per cent., oil-seeds 7 per cent., gram and cotton 6 per cent. each, barley 3 per cent., maize 2 per cent., and jute and sugar-cane 1 per cent. each. Tea and tobacco are other important crops. The total area under irrigation (government and private) was about 58 million acres, including area irrigated at both harvests.

Live-stock.—According to the Census of live-stock held in British India (exclusive of United Provinces and Orissa), 1940, there were oxen, 87,674,765; buffaloes, 22,415,493; sheep, 25,183,062; goats, 30,212,044; horses and ponies, 1,000,965; mules, 40,270; donkeys, 1,157,459; camels, 428,563; pigs, 1,955,000; poultry, 61,128,000.

BANKS.—In addition to the Imperial Bank of India (see pp. 556 and 740) which is associated with the Government, there were (1939) 51 Indian joint-stock banks with head offices in India, 19 exchange banks with head offices outside India, and 41 Indian co-operative banks with capital and reserve of 5 lakhs or over.

MINERALS.—The output of coal in India in 1938 was 28,342,906 tons. Nine-tenths of the total comes from Bengal and Bihar and Orissa. The production of crude petroleum in India (including Burma) has increased from 19 million gallons in 1897 to 349 million in 1938. The production of salt was 1,539,663 tons in 1938. The production of manganese ore was about 667,929 tons, and of saltpetre 7,441 tons (export figures). The yield of gold (nearly all from Mysore) was about 321,138 oz. Monazite and tungsten ore have taken an important place in the list of minerals of economic value produced in India. The output of the former was 5,221 tons, and of the latter 5,343 tons (including Burma).

MANUFACTURES.—In India the ancient village handicrafts still survive. Cotton-weaving is by far the most important hand industry. There were 10,408 factories in 1939 subject to the Indian Factories Act, employing 1,751,137 persons, including 239,414 women and 9,403 children (12 to 15 years of age); the percentage of factories maintaining a week of 48 hours or less for men is 30 (perennial), the corresponding percentage for women was 29. No child can be employed for more than 30 hours in a week. There were 420 cotton mills at work in British India and Indian States in 1939-40, mostly in Bombay and Ahmedabad. In 1939-40, the production was 1,235 million lb. of yarn (mostly of low counts) and 878 million lb. of woven goods. The 120 jute mills, mostly situated in or near Calcutta, contained 1,369,821 spindles and 68,528 looms in 1939-40. There were, in 1939, 41 woollen and 16 paper mills, 6 breweries, and various other factories.

BRITISH INFLUENCE ON INDIAN EDUCATION.—The British connexion with India has throughout been marked by progressive efforts to plan and apply an educational policy. Notwithstanding the traditions and achievements of ancient learning education in India at the beginning of the nineteenth century was at a very low ebb. The influence of men like Wilberforce induced Parliament in 1813 to direct the Governor-General to set apart a sum not less than 1 lakh of rupees per year "for the encouragement of education in British India." The amount was little enough, but at that date no Government had as yet undertaken the promotion of education in England by grants from public funds. It is commonly (but erroneously) supposed that Macaulay's Minute of 1835 was the sole cause to take the decision that Western culture was to be made available through the teaching of English. Other forces were already at work, represented by the Indian reformer Ram Mohan Roy, David Hare and missionaries such as Alexander Duff. Higher education was definitely linked with the English language, and it is said that the main contribution of Britain to Indian education was the high school in which English is taught. Sir Charles Wood's Education Despatch of 1854 determined the whole subsequent course of Indian educational development by imposing on the Government of India the duty of creating a properly articulated system of education from the primary School to the University.

It is not in higher but in primary education that India is backward. The problem of mass education in British India is a rural one. Only 12.9 per cent. of the population live in towns as compared with 79 per cent. in England and Wales and 51 per cent. in the U.S.A. Some 179 million people live in villages with less than 2,000 inhabitants. Over 360,000 villages have a population of under 500. Many provinces have a population density of less than 150 persons to the square mile. In such areas, school units are usually small, adequate staffing is expensive and conditions of life not attractive to teachers. Women teachers cannot as a rule live in villages unless circumstances are exceptionally favourable. Wastage among pupils is enormous. The latest available Quinquennial report of the Education Commissioner of India covering the year 1932-37 points out that in the whole of British India 72 per cent. of those who enter primary schools fail to reach Class IV, the earliest stage at which they may be assumed to attain literacy. Among the causes of wastage are premature withdrawal from schools of children, especially from the labouring and agricultural elements, inadequate supply of teachers, ineffective teaching and supervision, irregular attendance and faulty administration by local bodies. In Bombay only 36 per cent. of the 1,100,000 children in primary schools progress further than the infants class. Primary education is controlled by local authorities. The European official element in the administration of education has almost disappeared. In the early days the Indian Educational Service was largely responsible for educational development. This was mainly a European Service, recruited in Britain, but as Indians were trained up to take the place of Europeans, this Service lost its original character and recruitment ceased in 1924. Only a few members of the Service remain, and they will all reach their limit of service within the next few years. The British Government has seen the fulfilment of its aim not only in the complete transfer of educational control to Indian ministers, but also the Indianisation of the services which carry out their policy.

INDIAN CUSTOMS AND PREJUDICES.—Many of the archaic customs and superstitions of India, legacies from India's long-distant past, do much to hamper progress. The Hindu veneration for the cow imposes a barrier to the exploitation of the most valuable animal known to man and hinders the growth of profitable animal husbandry. India possesses about one-third of the world's total cattle population and the resultant loss is therefore great. It has been estimated that the animal loss caused by the maintenance of superfluous cattle is four times the total paid in land revenue.

In other directions the religious feelings of the people militate against the economic use of potential wealth. Pigs, bones and eggs—articles of great importance cannot be used to the full in India. In many parts of the country religion prevents the use of animal manure and bonemeal. The practice of burning cow-dung as household fuel instead of allowing it to enrich the soil involves enormous loss to Indian agriculture. As animal life is sanctified by Indian religion the cultivator is handicapped in protecting his crops against such pests as monkeys, flying foxes, jackals, porcupines and rats.

STATES OF THE RULING PRINCES AND CHIEFS OF INDIA.

THE Indian States, in number about 570, occupy in area approximately two-fifths of the entire Indian peninsula and contain over one-fifth of the whole population of the country. They display a very wide diversity in size, population and resources. They are not British territory, and their inhabitants are not British subjects, but British protected persons. The States are governed by hereditary Rulers, under the suzerainty of the Crown. They have no relations with foreign powers. Over the internal affairs of the States the Rulers exercise varying degrees of control, but their authority is in all cases limited by their relationship to the Paramount Power, which is determined by treaties, supplemented by usage and suzerainty. A common characteristic of all Indian States, important or insignificant, is that in their territory British Indian law does not run. For them the Indian Legislature or the Provincial Legislature cannot legislate; and over them the High Courts or Chief Courts of the Provinces have no jurisdiction.

The Assigned Districts of Mysore (Bangalore), Kalat (Quetta), and Berar are still technically Indian States territory. Excluding these territories, the Indian States have a combined area of 715,064 square miles, and a population of 93,189,233. They maintain in the aggregate a considerable body of troops of inferior military organisation in addition to their Indian State forces. Many treaties provide that States shall furnish troops on the requisition of the Supreme Government, and troops of Indian States served in almost every Indian campaign of the 19th century. Lord Curzon inaugurated an Imperial Cadet Corps of Indian princes and nobles. The States vary greatly in size and importance. Hyderabad is nearly as large as Great Britain, and the Nizam enjoys a very large revenue. On the other hand, in Kathiawar and elsewhere, where family custom has led to minute sub-division, there are many chiefs of single villages. In these petty estates the nominal chief may have some very limited magisterial powers, but the administration is regulated and carried on by the Supreme Government in its executive capacity. The rulers of Indian States have not necessarily any religious or tribal connexion with the majority of their subjects. Thus the Nizam of Hyderabad is a Muhammadan, but most of his people are Hindus. The majority represent the scattered military chiefships which sprang from the ruins of the Moghul Empire in the 18th century. The rulers of Gwalior, Indore, and Baroda are all descendants of successful generals who then rose to power. Most of these States are of more recent origin than the British power in India. A unique step was taken in 1920, when a new Indian State was created out of the family domains of the Maharaja of Benares.

The salutes enjoyed by the Indian princes indicate their relative importance. Those with eleven guns or more are addressed as His Highness. On pages 743, 744 are the names of 88 ruling chiefs who have salutes of eleven guns or more, with some particulars of their States. Some well-known Indians of title, such as H.H. the Aga Khan, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.V.O., are not ruling chiefs. The late Maharajah of Burdwan, who died in 1941, was not a ruling chief.

The Chamber of Princes was inaugurated in February, 1921, as a permanent consultative body. It meets periodically for the discussion of matters affecting the Indian States generally or of common concern to the States and to British India or the Empire at large. It consists at present of 109 Rulers of States who are members in their own right, together with 12 Rulers elected as representatives by 127 other States. The Chancellor, Pro-Chancellor and Standing Committee are elected annually by the Chamber from among its members.

In pursuance of the general policy advocated in paragraph 320 of the Mountbatten-Chelmsford Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms the great majority of the States, many of which were until recently in political relations with local governments and administrations, are now in direct relations with the Government of India.

In recent years the policy of promoting co-operation in matters such as justice, police, public health, etc., among the smaller States has made progress, and in April, 1943, announcement was made of an extensive scheme for improving the administration of some hundreds of petty States in Western India by attaching them to large neighbouring States such as Baroda and Nawanagar.

The Indian States may be thus classified:—
1. Hyderabad, the premier State in India (capital, Hyderabad, pop. 739,159—the fourth city in India). This State is in the centre of the Deccan or central plateau of Southern India. The ruling dynasty is of Turkoman origin, and is descended from Asaf Jah, who became Viceroy of the Deccan in 1712, and then independent of the Mogul Emperor. Telugu and Marathi are the chief languages. Wheat, rice, and cotton are produced. The Nizam's Guaranteed Railway is the principal line. 2. Mysore. This State, situated on a plateau in Southern India, was administered by the Indian Government from 1831 to 1881, when it was restored to native rule, under a somewhat strictly framed instrument of transfer. In Dec., 1913, the instrument was replaced by a new Treaty putting the relations between the British Government and the State on a footing more in consonance with the actual position of the Maharaja among the Feudatory Chiefs of India. Kannarese and Telugu are the chief languages. There is a Mysore State Railway. Millets, pulses, and rice are the principal crops. Mysore has important goldfields. 3. Baroda, situated in Western India in Gujarat and Kathiawar and much interlaced with British districts. 4. The Himalayan Hill States, west of Nepal, including Jammu and Kashmir. The important frontier State of Jammu and Kashmir (capital, Srinagar, pop. 473,572) was granted to Chhotla Singh by Lord Hardinge, after the First Tunaib War (1866). It comprises Jammu, Kashmir, Ladakh, Gilgit, and Baltistan. A force stationed at Gilgit watches the northern passes and controls the feudatory chiefships of Hunza and Nagar; while on the west the subordinate chiefship of Chitral is occupied by British troops, depending for their support on the Peshawar border. 5. Gwalior, the largest State in Central India. 6. Sikkim, a frontier State situated on the borders of Tibet, between Nepal and Bhutan, acknowledged the British protectorate in 1817, when also the boundaries of Tibet were defined by the Sikkim-Tibet Convention. 7. The Sikh States, in the Sirhind plain, south of the Sutlej. The most important of these is Patiala. 8. Rajputana, comprising the ancient sovereignties lying between Sind and the United Provinces (see Rajputana Agency, p. 733). 9. The States of Central India, lying to the north of the Narbada and to the south and east of Rajputana (see Central India Agency, p. 732). 10. The Malayalam States of Travancore and Cochin, lying together in S.W. India (see Madras States, p. 733). 11. The three northern Muhammadan States of Khairpur (Sind), Bahawalpur, and Rampur. Khairpur (Sind) and Bahawalpur are included in the Punjab States Agency (see p. 733), and Rampur is included in the Eastern States Agency (see p. 732). 12. Kalat (including Mekran and Kharan) and Las Bela, with tribal areas in the possession of the Marri and Bugti tribes (see Baluchistan Agency, p. 732). 13. Cutch and the numerous petty chiefdoms of Kathiawar (see Western India and Gujarat Agency, p. 732). 14. The Southern Mahratta States. 15. The numerous Afghan and Baluch tribes of the N.W. frontier, inhabiting the mountains from the north of Peshawar to the base of the Suleiman range, a distance of 800 miles. The names of some of these tribes, Waziris, Orakzais, Afridis, &c., have become familiar owing to the many expeditions against them. 16. The aboriginal Gond and Kol tribes, under petty princes of aboriginal or Rajput blood, in Chota-Nagpur, Orissa, and the Central Provinces. 17. The Indo-Chinese group of States, and the numerous hill tribes of the N.E. frontier.

Burma.

BURMA constitutes the western portion of Indo-China. It lies between 9° 58' and approximately 28° N. latitudes, 92° 11' E. to 101° 9' E. longitudes, the extreme length being about 1,200 miles, and the extreme width 575 miles.

In the north the frontier with Tibet and China is undemarcated. The north western frontier touches Assam, Manipur and the Chittagong Hills Tracts. The Bay of Bengal forms the western frontier. On the north-east and east Burma marches with Yunnan, French Indo-China and Thailand. Lower Burma falls into three natural divisions: Arakan, the Irrawaddy basin and the old province of Tenasserim. The delta country of Lower Burma is flat, but above Prome there is upland hilly country.

The chief sea ports are Rangoon, Moulmein, Akyab and Bassein.

It has a total area of 261,610 sq. miles. The area covered by the census operations of 1937 was 233,492 sq. miles, with a population of 14,667,146. The indigenous inhabitants who entered Burma from the north are all of the same racial type and all speak Mongolian languages. The three important non-indigenous elements, of whom there were about 2 million Indians (1939), Chinese about 150,000 (1931) and Europeans, Anglo Indians and Anglo Burmans play an important part in the economic life of the country. Tenasserim and Arakan were annexed after the first Burmese war in 1826, Pegu after the second war in 1852, and Upper Burma and the Shan States after the third war in 1885. In 1882 the Upper and Lower Provinces of Burma were amalgamated under a Chief Commissioner. In 1897 the charge was changed to a Lieut.-Governorship. In 1923 Burma was constituted a Governor's Province, and was separated from India on April 1, 1937. Burmese and Shan are the chief languages. Buddhism is the religion of 85 per cent. of the people. The literary rate is high compared with other Asiatic countries, there is no caste system and women engage freely in social intercourse and play an important part in agriculture. The chief agricultural products are rice, sesamum, maize, jowar, cotton, beans, wheat and grain. Rice cultivation is the mainstay of Burma's economy, before the war Burma was the world's largest exporter of rice, her total production of some 6 million tons a year being raised from 12 million acres or 70 per cent. of the country's total cropped area. The net area sown in 1938-39 was 17,387,242 acres, two-thirds of the population being dependent on agriculture for their livelihood. Reserved forests covered 19,913,930 acres. 1,470,333 acres were irrigated. The principal export after rice is teak, of which some 200,000 tons were exported annually. Burma is fairly rich in minerals, especially petroleum, rubies, jadeite, and wolfram. Of these petroleum is the most important. In the decade ending 1939 the production was over 250 million gallons a year valued with by-products for export at £10 million a year. The Irrawaddy and its chief tributaries, the Chindwin, the Shweli, and the Myittha, form important waterways. The main stream is navigable beyond Bhamo, 900 miles from its mouth, and carries much traffic. There are considerable exports by land to Western China. The Burma Railways have reached Myittha, on the Upper Irrawaddy, while a branch has been built to the Shan States. The executive authority is exercised by the Governor, representing His Majesty. Prior to the invasion of Burma in December 1942, and the over-throwing of the of the country in May 1942, the Legislature consisted of two Chambers, known respectively as the Senate (Upper House) and the House of Representatives. The former consisted of 36 members, 18 of whom were elected by the members of the House of Representatives in accordance with the system of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote, and 18 were chosen by the Governor. The House of Representatives consisted of 132 elected members, roughly 20 per cent. of the population was enfranchised.

In December, 1942, the Governor by a proclamation under Sec. 139 of the Government of Burma Act took over full executive and legislative powers. Military administration of the areas liberated prior to the surrender of the Japanese ceased in October, 1945, when full civil government was resumed.

In May, 1945, H.M.G. reiterated their considered policy of promoting full self-government in Burma and their pledge of assisting her political government until she attains a status equal to that of the Dominions and of the United Kingdom. (Parliamentary Paper Cmd. 6635.) Meanwhile, until a general election can be held and stable conditions prevail, Parliament approved the continuance until Dec., 1948, of the Proclamation issued in 1942 under Sec. 139 of the Government of Burma Act whereby administration is carried on by the Governor in direct responsibility to H.M.G.

The Shan States form a minor administration distinct from that of Burma though under the same Executive Government and not subject to the jurisdiction of the Burma Legislature. Prior to the overrunning of the country by the Japanese they were administered by their Chiefs under the supervision of the Commissioner of the Federated Shan States. The three Karenni States, of Kantarawaddy, Bawlake and Kyetbogyi that lie to the south of the Southern Shan States (area, 4,280 sq. miles; pop., 58,761) are a group of Feudatory States, but are not part of British Burma. They were administered by their own Chiefs under the advice of the Commissioner, Federated Shan States, through an Assistant Political Officer.

Nepal (area, about 54,000 sq. miles; pop. 5,600,000) lies between British India and Tibet on the S. slopes of the Himalayas, and includes Mt. Everest (29,141 ft.). Amid the sterile mountains lie many fertile valleys. The lower hills are covered with jungle, in which wild animals abound. Rice, wheat, &c., are grown. Nepal is divided into four provinces. Its exports to British India are estimated to amount to about £4,000,000, and its imports to £2,000,000 a year. The chief trade route is that between Katmandu and the Bihar and Omissa frontier (77 miles). Nepal exports rice and other grains, hides, oilseeds, ghee, cattle, jute, large quantities of timber, &c., and imports cotton goods and yarn, sugar, salt, spices, metals, &c. The revenue, realised chiefly from land rent, forests, customs, &c., is over £7,000,000. The aborigines are Mongolian in type, and their religions are Buddhism and Hinduism. The aboriginal stock is Mongolian with a considerable admixture of Hindu blood from India. They were originally divided into numerous hill clans and petty principalities, one of which, Gorkha or Gurkha, became predominant in about 1769 and has since given its name to all. The ruling family are Hindu Rajputs. Their frequent aggressions led to a war with the British in 1814-6. Relations have now long been friendly. The policy of seclusion is, however, consistently followed by the Nepal rulers. The real political power rests with the Prime Minister. This office is always held by a member of his family, the succession being determined by special rules. The army numbers about 45,000. By arrangement with Nepal, India obtains many fine recruits for its Gurkha regiments. During the Great War, and in the subsequent Afghan war, the Nepal Government rendered unstinted and unconditional assistance to the British Government in men, money and material. A new Treaty was concluded in December, 1923, between the British and Nepalese Governments, by which inter alia the internal and external independence of the State was recognised.

BHUTAN.

Bhutan (area, about 18,000 sq. miles; pop. about 300,000, mainly Buddhists) also lies on the S.E. of the Himalayas, and its products resemble those of Nepal. In 1863, owing to outrages on British subjects, portions of it were annexed to India, and annual allowance being paid by the Indian Government as compensation. By a treaty in 1910 this allowance was fixed at £6,667, and Bhutan agreed to be guided in its external relations by the advice of the British, who, however, will not interfere in its internal affairs. The former dual government of a spiritual chief and a temporal chief came to an end when the Tongsa Penlop, the chief councillor and virtual ruler, the late Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, K.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., was chosen hereditary Maharaja in 1907. He has a salute of 15 guns in British territory. The estimated annual revenue is £30,000. Bhutan's total trade with India is estimated at over £65,000 a year. There is no British Resident.

CAPITAL, Punakha.

THE PERSIAN GULF.

For three centuries England has taken the lead in the Gulf trade. She has suppressed piracy, slavery, and inter-tribal warfare on land and sea, made surveys, and laid down buoys and cables. Vigorous measures have been taken against gun-running. England and India still have the lion's share of the trade, the bulk of which is conducted by Indians, who make Bombay their entrepôt. The Arabian shores are low-lying deserts, the Iranian coasts mountainous; at the head of the Gulf are great alluvial plains. The heat is intense in summer. Natural harbours are few.

The ruler of Bahrain (capital, Manama) has been in treaty relations since 1820 with the Government of India, who have a Political Agent at Bahrain. In 1880 he engaged not to make treaties with any other state.

The Sultan of Oman (Muscat) is in treaty relations with the Government of India, who have a Political Agent and Consul at his Court. The independent tribes of the Trucial Oman coast (Pirate Coast) from Ras-al-Khaima to Oulaid are bound under treaties with the Indian Government (dating from 1820, and confirmed in 1853 by a Treaty of Perpetual Peace) to maintain a maritime truce for the prevention of piracy and slavery, and for the cessation of hostilities at sea. Hence their chiefs are sometimes called the "Trucial" chiefs. The British Political Resident in the Persian Gulf is the recognised arbiter and adviser of these tribes, and peace is maintained by the British flag. In 1892 these tribes agreed not to enter into relations with, or cede territory to, any other Power than the British. The trade of the Arab coast ports largely consists in exports of pearls to India via Bahrain.

Important caravan routes converge at Kuwait, which has an excellent harbour. The Sheikh is under treaty obligations with the Indian Government.

Senior Naval Officer, Persian Gulf, Commodore C. F. Hammill, C.I.E., R.N.

PERSIA (q.v.) borders on Baluchistan and Afghanistan. The demarcation of the Perso-Baluch frontier, partially carried out in 1872 and 1895, was completed in 1905.

ASIATIC RUSSIA.—A portion of what was once the Russian Empire is continuous with Iran and Afghanistan. The Trans-Caspian Railway runs, via Merv, to Samarkand and Andijan, with a branch to Tashkent. The Murghab Valley branch from Merv to Kuskh on the Afghan frontier, opened in 1898, brings the Russian railways within 70 miles of Herat, and within 450 miles of the Chaman terminus of the Indian railways. Another important strategic line connects Tashkent directly with Orenburg. The Amu-Darya, or Oxus, which separates Bokhara from Afghanistan for 330 miles, is navigated by Russian steamers.

CHINA.—India is in contact with two dependencies of China, Chinese Turkestan and Tibet, and one province, Yunnan.

Chinese Turkestan is surrounded by the mountains of Tianshan, the Pamirs, and Kuenlun. There are three difficult passes into Russian Turkestan and two still more difficult ones into India. The boundary between Kashmir and Chinese Turkestan has not been officially defined. There is a British consul-general at Kashgar. Trade with India is chiefly carried over the Karakoram Pass (18,500 feet) via Ladakh, in Kashmir.

Tibet—See China, pp. 888-9.

Yunnan is a Chinese province to the N.E. of Burma.

Canada was originally discovered by Cabot in 1497, but its history dates only from 1534, when the French took possession of the country. The first permanent settlement at Port Royal (now Annapolis), Nova Scotia, was founded in 1605, and Quebec was founded in 1608. In 1759 Quebec succumbed to the British forces under General Wolfe, and in 1763 the whole territory of Canada became a possession of Great Britain by the Treaty of Paris of that year. Nova Scotia was ceded in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, the Provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island being subsequently formed out of it. British Columbia was formed into a Crown colony in 1858, having previously been a part of the Hudson Bay Territory, and was united to Vancouver Island in 1866. By the British North America Act, passed in 1867, the Provinces of Canada (Ontario and Quebec), Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick were united under the title of THE DOMINION OF CANADA, and provision was made in the Act for the admission at any subsequent period of the other provinces and territories of British North America.

The Dominion of Canada occupies the whole of the northern part of the North American Continent (with the exception of Alaska and part of the coast of Labrador), from 49° North latitude to the North Pole, and from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean. In Eastern Canada, the southernmost point is Middle Island in Lake Erie, at 41° 41' (approximately the latitude of Rome, Italy).

Relief.—From a physical point of view Canada may be divided into an eastern division, a western division, the Red River Valley, in long. 97°, forming the separating line, and a northern division. The eastern division comprises two areas, presenting radically distinct aspects:—(1) The south-eastern area, bounded by the line of the Gulf and River St. Lawrence, from Belle Isle to Montreal, thence by a line running directly south to Lake Champlain, which is generally hilly, and sometimes mountainous, with many fine stretches of agricultural and pastoral lands. (2) The southern and western area, presenting, in the main, a broad, level, and slightly undulating expanse of generally fertile country, with occasional step-like ridges or rocky escarpments. The main hydrographical feature is the chain of lakes, with an area of 95,000 square miles, contributing to the great river system of the St. Lawrence. The northern division, embracing nearly two-thirds of the Dominion, with an average elevation of 1,000 feet above the level of the sea, is pre-eminently a region of waterways, and including the great Laurentian plateau. In this area are found the other great river systems, the Nelson and the Mackenzie. The western division referred to may also be said to possess two areas equally distinct in character. The first stretches from the Red River Valley to the Rocky Mountains. Here, between lat. 49° and 54°, is the great Prairie Region, rising to the west in three terrace-like elevations, the lowest of which is 700 feet, and the third about 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. North of the 54th parallel the country passes again into forest. The second area, from the western edge of the Prairie to the Pacific coast, is a divide of 400 miles, and contains the Rocky Mountains (Mount Robson, 12,972 feet) and the Selkirk and Cascade Ranges, whose summits are from 4,000 to 16,000 feet high, the country being on the whole densely wooded. The highest mountain peaks in Canada are Mount Logan, 19,850 feet, and Mount St. Elias, 18,008 feet, both in the Yukon.

Climate.—The climate in the eastern and central portions presents greater extremes than in corresponding latitudes in Europe, but in the south-western portion of the Prairie Region and the southern portions of the Pacific slope the climate is milder. Spring, summer, and autumn are of about seven to eight months' duration, and the winter four to five months. The soil is generally fertile and all the products of the temperate zone are cultivated.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of a Senate and a House of Commons. The Senate consists of 96 members, nominated for life by the Governor-General, distributed between the various provinces thus: 24 for Ontario, 24 for Quebec, 10 for Nova Scotia, 10 for New Brunswick, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 6 for British Columbia, 6 for Manitoba, 6 for Alberta, and 6 for Saskatchewan; each Senator must be thirty years old, a resident in the province for which he is appointed, a natural-born or naturalised subject of the King, and the owner of a property qualification amounting to $4,000. The Speaker of the Senate is chosen by the Government of the day. The House of Commons is elected every five years at longest, and the Parliament consists of 245 members, elected as follows: 82 for Ontario, 65 for Quebec, 12 for Nova Scotia, 10 for New Brunswick, 17 for Manitoba, 16 for British Columbia, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 17 for Alberta, 21 for Saskatchewan, and 1 for Yukon. The House of Commons is also composed of natural-born or naturalised subjects of the King; no property qualification is necessary, its members are elected upon a very wide suffrage, and at the General Election in Dec. 1921 women exercised the franchise on the same terms as men for the first time in a Federal Election. For electoral purposes each province is divided into districts, returning a member on a majority of votes taken by ballot. The members of the House themselves elect their Speaker, and twenty, including the Speaker, form a quorum. Members of the Upper and Lower Houses receive $4,000 per Session, with travelling expenses and deductions for non-attendance.

The Houses of Parliament were destroyed by fire on Feb. 3, 1916, the new buildings being started the same year; the foundation stone was laid by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught (Gov.-Gen.), Sept. 1, 1917, and the corner stone of the main tower by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales (King Edward VIII.), Sept. 1, 1919. The Speaker's Chair in the new House of Commons (a replica of that at Westminster) was presented in 1921 by Viscount Ullswater (ex-Speaker of the House of Commons of the United Kingdom) on behalf of the Empire Parliamentary Association of the Houses of Lords and Commons.

THE JUDICATURE.

The Judicature.—Justice is administered, as in England, by judges, police magistrates, and justices of the peace, of whom the first-named are appointed by the Governor-General, for life, from among the foremost men at the Bar in the several provinces. The highest court is the Supreme Court of Canada, composed of a Chief Justice and six puisne judges, and holding three sessions in the year at Ottawa. The only other Dominion Court, viz., the Exchequer Court of Canada, is presided over by separate judges, and its sittings may be held anywhere in Canada. The Provincial Courts include the Court of Chancery, Court of King's Bench, Court of Error and Appeal, Superior Courts, County Courts, General Sessions, and Division Courts. The duties of coroners are generally analogous to those in force in England, as are also methods of civil and criminal procedure, while trial by jury prevails.

EDUCATION.

Education is under the control of the Provincial Governments, the cost being met by local taxation, aided by grants from the several Provincial Governments. There were (1943) about 23,000 public elementary and secondary school districts (attendance at the former being compulsory in all Provinces), with 1,977,448 pupils. In addition there were 121,199 pupils in private elementary and secondary schools. There are special schools for Indians with about 17,000 pupils (1944). Higher education is conducted in 18 universities and 140 colleges with an enrolment, in 1942, of 102,182.

The percentage of illiterates over 10 years of age is very low.

At March 31, 1944, there were 2,928 radio stations, classified as 86 marine, 78 aeronautical, and 2,764 general, the latter including 743 ship stations, 52 public commercial stations and 15 private broadcasting stations. In addition there were 5 monitoring stations and 1,770,900 private receiving stations for the reception of broadcast programmes. The traffic handled by the coast station service for the twelve months ended March 31, 1944, amounted to 456,503 messages and 15,873,102 words.

Radio beacons are established for the purpose of enabling any ship or aircraft equipped with a direction finder to determine its bearing or direction in relation to the radio beacon station. There are 38 radio beacons in operation—22 on the East Coast, 9 on the Great Lakes and 7 on the Pacific Coast.

On Dec. 31, 1943, there were 1,692,162 telephones and 6,057,880 miles of telephone wire in use.

FEDERAL CAPITAL.

OTTAWA, the Federal Capital, 101 miles west of Montreal and 217 miles north of Toronto, is a city on the right bank of the Ottawa river. The city was chosen as the Federal Capital of Canada in 1858 and the first session of the Canadian Parliament met there in 1865. Ottawa contains the Parliamentary Buildings, the Public Archives, Royal Mint, Department of National Revenue, National Museum, National Art Gallery and the Dominion Observatory. Rideau Hall, the official residence of the Governor-General, lies on the eastern boundary of the City, at the entrance of Rockcliffe Park. Ottawa is connected with Lake Ontario by the Rideau Canal and has a large lumber trade and wooden manufactures. The population of the Federal Capital was 154,951 at the Census of 1941.

Finances.—The receipts of the provincial government in 1944-45 were estimated at $34,600,000, and the expenditure at $34,500,000. The Net
 Debt (Feb. 1, 1944) amounted to $135,000,000

Agriculture and Live Stock.—In 1943 there were 79,200 acres under wheat, 72,400 under oats, and 18,800 under potatoes. Agricultural production was valued at $76,096,000. Live stock in 1943 included 62,170 horses, 376,000 cattle, 132,000 sheep, 89,800 swine, and 3,626,700 poultry.

Production and Industry.—The principal manufacturing centres are Vancouver, Victoria, New Westminster, and Prince Rupert. The net value of the principal industries was in 1942: forests $97,482,665; agriculture $52,582,000; mining
 $64,378,171; fishing $30,602,150; 2,249,000 cases (48 lb.) of salmon were packed in 1941 and 1,806,000 cases in 1942. There are extensive coal measures, and a vast and compact area of merchantable timber; the mines are still in the early stages of development. Only one-tenth of the available agricultural and fruit lands is at present settled, and there are miles of pulpwood as yet unexploited.
 There are undeveloped deposits of magnetite and hematite iron. The climate is healthful and temperate. The principal exports are lumber, pulp, paper, non-ferrous metals, gold, silver, coal, fish and fruit. The Alcan Highway runs from Fort St. John, B.C. to the Yukon boundary and thence via Whitehorse and Dawson to Fairbanks in Alaska.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, VICTORIA. Population (1941) 44,068. Ψ Vancouver (founded in 1886), the largest city in the Province, population (1941) 275,353, is the western terminus of the C.P.R., and possesses one of the finest natural harbours in the world. Other centres are New Westminster (21,967), Ψ Prince Rupert (6,714).

MANITOBA.

Area and Population.—Manitoba, originally the Red River Settlement, is situated in about the centre of the continent, between 49°-60° N. lat.
 and 95°-101° W. long., with a total area of 246,512 square miles and a population (1941 Census) of 729,744, an increase since the 1931 census of 29,605.

Government.—The Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive Council of 9 Ministers, who are members of the Legislative Assembly of 55 members, each in receipt of an annual sessional allowance of $1,800.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

Area and Population.—NEW BRUNSWICK is situated between 45°-48° N. lat. and 63° 47'- 69° W. long. and comprises an area of 27,985 square miles, with a population in 1941 of 457,401, an increase since the last census of 49,182 persons.
 It was first colonised by British subjects in 1761, and in 1783 by the inhabitants of New England, who were dispossessed of their property in consequence of their loyalty to the British Crown.

Government.—The Government is administered
 by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive Council, and a Legislative Assembly of 48 members elected by the people.

Finance.—The ordinary receipts for 1944 were $12,601,236, and the ordinary expenditure $12,609,133.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The total land area is 17,582,720 acres, of which 984,500 were under field crops in 1943. The live stock (1943) included 47,500 horses, 220,800 cattle, 107,000 sheep, 94,400 pigs, and 1,597,600 poultry. Free grants of land are offered, and settlement encouraged. Improved farms are obtainable at reasonable rates. The fisheries include salmon, cod, mackerel, herring, and shad; value of the fisheries (1942) $7,088,302. In 1944, 5 the cheese factories in operation produced 867,808 lb., and the creameries 5,575,745 lb. of butter.

Manufactures.—The gross value of the output of manufactured goods in 1942 was $123,839,475, the principal manufacturing centre being Saint John. Natural gas has been found in immense quantities in Albert County, and the south-eastern section of the Province is remarkably rich in oil shales. Coal is found (output, 1944, 347,032 tons), also silver lead, antimony, copper, iron, manganese, and other valuable minerals in considerable quantities.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL Ψ FREDERICTON; population (1941), 10,062. Ψ Saint John (pop. 51,741) is one of the principal winter ports of Canada and is connected by C.P.R. and Canadian National Railways with Montreal; Moncton (22,763).

NOVA SCOTIA.

Area and Population.—NOVA SCOTIA is a peninsula between 43° 25'–47° N. lat. and 59° 40'–66° 25' W. long., and is connected with New Brunswick by a low fertile isthmus about thirteen miles wide. It comprises an area (with Cape Breton Island) of 21,068 square miles (325 miles of which consists of lakes, rivers and inlets of the sea) with a total population, at the Census of 1941, of 577,962, an increase since the 1931 Census of 65,116 persons.

Government.—The Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, aided by an Executive Council and a Legislative Assembly of 30 members.

Finance.—The revenue in 1943–44 was $18,531,789 and the expenditure $15,604,994; the funded debt (Nov. 30, 1944) was $98,124,633.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Out of a land area of 13,275,520 acres the total area occupied by farms (1941) was 3,859,167 acres, or 29 per cent. Of this area (1941) 812,373 acres are improved land and 732,831 acres rough pasture land, making a total of 1,545,204 acres of cleared land. The balance (2,277,442) was composed mainly of woodland with a small proportion of barren land. Fruit is extensively cultivated, especially in the famed Annapolis Valley. The apple crop for 1944 was 1,750,000 barrels. Improved farms of 100 to 250 acres, with house and buildings, may be obtained at from $1,000 to $5,000. There is an Agricultural College, operated by the Provincial Government, at Truro, and two Experimental Farms operated by the Dominion Government, at Nappan and Kentville, as well as a Technical College at Halifax. In 1944 the live stock included 35,800 horses; 231,600 cattle; 66,200 swine; 161,300 sheep; 1,927,000 poultry, including hens, turkeys, geese and ducks.

Manufactures.—In 1943 the gross value of the manufactures was $188,463,088. The capital invested was $179,363,703, and 37,445 hands were employed, the principal industrial centres being Sydney, Halifax and Yarmouth.

Fisheries.—The total value of the fisheries in 1944 was $14,841,656 (landed value), and the number of persons employed was 17,956.

Minerals.—5,945,592 tons of coal were produced in 1944. Iron ores are plentiful, and extensive manufactures of iron and steel are carried on at Sydney and Sydney Mines, Cape Breton. Total value of mine products (1943) $30,154,332.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, Ψ HALIFAX, population (1941) 70,488, one of the terminals of the Canadian National Railway, with a magnificent harbour, is one of the principal winter ports of Canada, and the entrepôt of a large trade with the West Indies and South America. A shipyard for the building of large ocean-going steamers, with a dry dock, is one of the leading industries; other cities and towns are Sydney and Glace Bay (see below), Dartmouth (10,847), Truro (10,272), New Glasgow (9,210), Amherst, Sydney Mines and Yarmouth.

CAPE BRITON ISLAND.

Cape Breton Island, formerly a distinct Colony, was incorporated with Nova Scotia in 1819. It contains an area of 3,975 sq. miles, population (1941) 150,157. The chief city, Sydney (pop. 28,305), on the eastern coast, has valuable collieries in the neighbourhood and is the site of the largest steel works in Canada. Glace Bay has a population of 25,147. The Canadian National Railway connects the island with the mainland by rail ferry.

ONTARIO.

Area and Population.—The Province of Ontario contains a total area of 412,582 square miles, with a population (1941) of 3,787,655, an increase since the 1931 Census of 355,972.

Government.—The Government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 90 members elected for five years which meets every year at Toronto. Executive Council act as the Ministry of the Province.

Finance.—The Net Ordinary Revenue of the Provincial Government for 1943-44 was $118,051,335 and the Net Ordinary Expenditure was $106,735,367. The Gross Public Debt was $666,527,963 on March 31, 1944.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The total land area of Ontario is about 232,500,480 acres. There are about 17,000,000 acres of cleared land, of which 8,822,500 acres are under field crops (1942). These consisted of wheat 799,000 acres; oats, 1,966,000 acres; barley, 353,000 acres; rye, 78,600 acres; mixed grains, 1,151,000 acres; hay and clover, 2,489,000 acres; and miscellaneous other field crops.

In 1942 there were—horses, 526,976; cattle, 2,639,212; sheep and lambs, 688,904; swine, 1,861,298; and poultry, 24,621,791.

Lumbering.—The value of production (including primary forest production and the value added to manufacture) in pulp and paper mills and sawmills, in 1942, was $115,044,168.

Manufactures.—Ontario is the chief manufacturing province of Canada. The total value of its manufactures, in 1942, was $3,187,306,404. In this year there were 542,958 employees, an invested capital of $2,632,519,471, and an annual wage bill of $840,784,000. The chief manufacturing centres in order of importance are Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, Oshawa, London, Windsor, Kitchener and St. Catharines.

Minerals.—Ontario leads the other Provinces in mineral production—the output in 1943 being $229,760,526. The principal metals produced and their value were: gold, $81,304,570; silver, $1,200,035; nickel, $71,626,014; and copper, $32,349,189.

Hydro-Electric Power.—The chief sources of developed water-power are the Niagara river, 830,000 h.p.; the Atabiti river, 240,000 h.p.; the Nipigon river, 123,500 h.p.; and the Welland Canal, 115,000 h.p. The world's largest publicly-owned electrical undertaking is operated by The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, which serves about 80 per cent. of the population of the Province.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, Ψ TORONTO, population (1943) 674,285 ("Greater" Toronto, 916,268), with great shipping interests on the Lakes, and the chief centre of industrial and commercial activity; Ψ Hamilton, the "Birmingham of Canada" (174,222); Ottawa, the Federal capital (163,920); London (81,158); Brantford (31,948); Ψ Kingston (30,126); Peterborough (25,350); Windsor, connected by tunnel beneath Detroit River with Detroit, Mich., U.S.A. (117,031); Fort William (30,585); Kitchener (35,657); Guelph (23,273); St. Catharines (30,275); Sault Ste. Marie (25,794); Oshawa (28,813); Sudbury (35,372).

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Area and Population.—Prince Edward Island lies in the southern part of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, between 46°-47° N. lat. and 62°-64° 30' W. long. It is about 130 miles in length, and from 4 to 34 miles in breadth; its area is 2,184 square miles (rather larger than that of the English county of Norfolk), and its population (Census, 1941) 95,047, an increase since the 1931 census of 7,009 persons. The island was first settled by the French, who held it for many years as a fishing station. The British took it from them in 1759, but afterwards restored it; they seized it again, however, during the Seven Years' War (1756-1763), and compelled the greater part of the French inhabitants to leave, and from that time it has remained British.

Government.—The Government is vested in a Lieut.-Governor and an Executive Council, and Legislative Assembly of 30 members elected by the people, 15 as Councillors (with a property qualification) and 15 as Assembly-men (on general suffrage).

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The value of the field crops in 1943 was estimated at $14,753,000. The soil consists for the most part of a rich red loam, uniform in character and peculiarly suited to the growth of grasses. Nearly the whole of the land is now cleared, and improved farms can be bought at from $20 to $60 an acre (including buildings), according to condition and locality. The breeding of silver black foxes in captivity is an established and profitable industry. There are (1942) 1,034 farms reporting fox, conducted by incorporated companies and private partnerships or individuals. The live stock (1943) included 27,340 horses, 100,600 cattle, 56,000 sheep, 65,000 swine, and about 1,098,000 poultry. P.E.I. holds the world record for milk production, with a 4 yr. old cow giving 24,939 lb. of milk in 305 days.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, CHARLOTTETOWN (pop. 14,821), on the shore of Hillsborough Bay, which forms a good harbour. Other towns are Summerside (5,034), Souris (1,114), and Georgetown (769).

QUEBEC.

Area and Population.—The Province of Quebec contains an area estimated at 594,860 square miles, with a population (1941) of 3,337,882, an increase since the 1931 Census of 457,222 persons.

Government.—The Government of the Province is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor, the Council of Ministers, a Legislative Council consisting of 24 members appointed for life, and a Legislative Assembly of 91 members elected for five years to represent the 91 electoral districts of the Province.

Finance.—The revenue for the year 1943-44 was $93,036,713 and the expenditure $91,751,553. The bonded debt (March 31, 1944) was $386,781,099 and the net funded debt $328,292,569.

Production and Industry.—The total area under cultivation in 1944 was 6,802,900 acres, the value of the field crops being $150,753,000; 4,192,000 acres are under hay and clover. The gross value of manufactured products in 1943 was $2,852,191,853 from 9,372 industrial establishments, employing 437,247 hands with wages bill $658,323,620.

the principal manufacturing centres being Montreal, Montreal East, Quebec, Trois Rivières, Sherbrooke, Shawinigan Falls, and Lachine. Forest lands cover 364,370 sq. miles, of which 207,300 sq. miles are productive; 75,300 sq. miles are under license to cut timber and 26,600 sq. miles are freehold forests. In 1943 1,900,005 tons of paper were manufactured, valued at $117,928,840. Unimproved lands may be bought from the Government at 30 cents per acre, and the purchase-money paid in five instalments. In 1944 there were 344,500 horses, 2,030,000 cattle, 637,300 sheep, 1,001,000 swine, and 12,557,200 poultry. In 1943 the production of factory cheese was 50,555,610 lb. (valued at $10,269,359), and butter 85,532,153 lb. (valued at $28,830,653).

The mineral production was valued at $90,844,295 in 1944, including gold 740,744 fine oz. ($28,518,644). A valuable deposit of molybdenum was discovered in 1942 at Préssac in N.W. Quebec Province.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, QUÉBEC (population, 150,757), historic city visited annually by thousands of tourists, and one of the great seaport towns of Canada; and MONTRÉAL (population, 903,007), the commercial metropolis, and the principal centre of the Canadian grain export trade, founded by the French at the confluence of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Rivers, May 16, 1642. Ocean-going steamers ascend the St. Lawrence as far as Montreal. Other important cities are Verdun (67,349), Hull (32,947), Sherbrooke (35,965), Trois Rivières (42,007).

SASKATCHEWAN.

Area and Population.—The Province of Saskatchewan lies between Manitoba on the east and Alberta on the west, and has an area of 251,700 square miles, the population at the Census of 1941 being 895,992, a decrease of 25,793 persons since the Census of 1931. It was formerly part of the North-West Territories, of which Assiniboia East, part of Assiniboia West, Saskatchewan and eastern Athabasca were formed into the Province of Saskatchewan on Sept. 1, 1905.

Government.—The Government is vested in the Lieutenant-Governor, with a Legislative Assembly of 55 members. There is an Executive Council of 12 members.

Finance.—The revenue for the year ended April 30, 1945, was $34,116,570, and the expenditure $31,900,544. The net public debt (Jan. 1, 1945) was $188,435,876.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Saskatchewan is normally the largest wheat-producing province of the Dominion, and one of the most productive grain areas in the world. In 1944 the wheat yield totalled 250,000,000 bushels. The total value of all field crops was $444,281,000. Live-stock on farms in 1944 included 819,500 horses, 1,885,700 cattle, 530,900 sheep, 1,599,400 swine and 20,703,100 poultry.

Industries.—The capital invested in manufacturing enterprises in 1942 as reported from 966 establishments was $45,013,677, and the value of the manufactured products $120,256,733, the principal industrial centres being Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw and Prince Albert.

CAPITAL, REGINA. Population (1941) 58,245. Other large centres are Saskatoon (43,027), Moose Jaw (20,753), Prince Albert (12,508), Weyburn (6,179), Swift Current (5,594), Yorkton (5,577) and North Battleford (4,745).

TERRITORIES.

THE YUKON TERRITORY was created a separate Territory in June 1898. It is governed by a Controller and a Territorial Council of three elected members and the Territory also forms an electoral district for the Dominion Parliament. The area of the Territory is 207,076 square miles. The population in 1941 was 4,914, an increase of 684 since the census of 1931. Mining is the chief industry. The gold output for the year 1944 was $916,993; the silver output during the same period was $13,788.

SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, Dawson. Pop. (1941), 1,043.

Controller, George A. Jeckell.

NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES.

(Reconstituted Sept. 1, 1905.)

Area 1,309,682 square miles; population (1941), 12,028, an increase of 2,712 since the 1931 Census; seat of Government, Ottawa.

The North-West Territories (subdivided into the districts of Mackenzie, Keewatin and Franklin) are governed by the Commissioner, the Deputy Commissioner and 5 Councillors appointed by the Governor-General in Council.

The chief industries of the Northwest Territories are mining and the fur trade. Gold, silver, lead, copper, tungsten, radium and petroleum are among the minerals found. Yellowknife, on the north shore of Great Slave Lake, is the centre of an extensive gold-producing region, where some important finds were made in 1944-45. Radium concentrates are produced from pitchblende at a mine on Great Bear Lake. Oil is obtained in quantity at Norman Wells in the lower Mackenzie Basin, where an extensive oilfield was delineated in 1943-44. The value of gold production in the Territories in 1944 was $799,838; silver, $8,882; copper, $1,428; petroleum, $632,587. Fur produced 1942-43 was valued at $3,165,107.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The Island of Newfoundland is situated between 46° 37'–51° 37' N. latitude and 52° 44'–59° 30' W. longitude, on the north-east side of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and is separated from the North American Continent by the Straits of Belle Isle. The island is about 317 miles long and 316 miles broad, and is triangular in shape, with Cape Bauld (N.), Cape Race (S.E.), and Cape Ray (S.W.) at the angles. The coast is extremely rugged, and the coastal regions are mountainous, the north and east being cold during winter and early spring owing to the quantities of ice brought down from the Greenland seas. The interior is undulating and is covered with tolls (round hills) interspersed with lakes, rivers, and swamps, but containing many fertile valleys, where the climate is favourable to agriculture, and a great wealth of forests, mainly of spruce, fir, pine, and birch. The climate is salubrious, and the people are a strong, brave, healthy, hardy, industrious race. The thermometer seldom falls below zero in winter, and ranges in the shade in summer from 70° to 80°.

GOVERNMENT

Newfoundland, the oldest English colony, was discovered by John Cabot on June 24, 1497; the first land seen is believed to have been the present Cape Bonavista. The island was afterwards visited (1500) by the Portuguese navigator Gaspar de Cortreal, and soon became the centre of an extensive fishing industry, with settlements of Portuguese, Biscayans, and French. In August, 1583, the island was formally occupied by Sir Humphrey Gilbert, in the name of Queen Elizabeth, and by the Treaty of Utrecht (1713) the whole island was acknowledged to be British. A Governor was first appointed in 1728, and in 1855 "Responsible Government" was accorded to the island.

In 1933 the financial difficulties into which Newfoundland had fallen compelled recourse to His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom for assistance.

A Royal Commission visited the Island and recommended that, in consideration of certain measures of financial aid, responsible Government should be suspended temporarily and the administration of affairs vested in a form of Commission until such time as the Island again became self-supporting.

These recommendations were approved by the Newfoundland Parliament (Dec. 2, 1933), and the Commission took office on Feb. 16, 1934.

COMMISSION OF GOVERNMENT

His Excellency Vice-Admiral Sir Humphrey Thomas Walwyn, K.C.S.I., K.C.M.G., C.B., D.S.O.

(apptd. Governor of Newfoundland 1936, term extended 1941, 1942, 1943 and 1944 to Jan. 1946), Chairman; Hon. Sir J. C. DEFENCE

Newfoundland contributed 11,922 men to the fighting forces of the Empire during the War of 1914–18, in addition to 3,000 enlisted in Canadian and other forces. In the War of 1939–45 6,999 men joined the fighting forces in addition to 1,000 enlisted in other Dominion Contingents, and 3,602 who served in the Forestry Unit in Gt. Britain.

Facilities for the Establishment, use and protection of naval and air bases on the Avalon Peninsula, and on the Southern Coast of Newfoundland were granted to the Government of the United States of America in September, 1940.

EDUCATION

The schools, while denominational, are public schools. They are mainly supported by the Government, assisted by the religious denominations. Primary and Secondary schools were attended in 1943-44 by 67,641 pupils. The Memorial University College, a Junior College and Teacher Training Institution, had an enrolment of 297 in 1944-45. Adult education is carried on with a staff of 13 itinerant teachers. The Government grants in 1945-46 amount to $3,200,000.

The principal imports are flour, textiles, coal, hardware, and provisions; the principal exports are codfish, cod and seal oil, pulp and paper, herrings, seal-skins, tinned lobsters, lead, zinc, copper concentrates, and other minerals; the total value of the fishery products in 1943-44 was upwards of $18,000,000; of newsprint $11,000,000 and products of the mines $8,000,000.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY

The inhabitants are chiefly located on the coastline of the shore and bays, nearly 10,000 being engaged in fishing—for cod in summer and seal fishing in winter and spring. Agriculture, mining, and lumbering are also engaging attention and affording means of employment, while large pulp and paper mills have been erected. The larger portion of the interior is practically in a state of nature, but the railways have opened up large tracts.

Diamond drilling at Baie Verte has indicated the presence of gold bearing ore of good grade. The estimated value of agricultural products (including livestock) in 1944 was $11,780,000. Iron ore produced in 1943 totalled 542,804 long tons, and in 1944, 464,371 long tons. Shipments of iron ore for year ended March 31st, 1943, totalled 697,418 long tons, valued at $1,777,965, and for year ending March 31st 1944, 791,688 long tons, valued at $2,019,695. Lead, zinc and copper concentrates mined and milled in 1943 totalled 177,307 short tons valued at $4,792,000 and in 1944, 159,157 short tons, valued at $3,976,000. Fluorspar mined in 1943, totalled 99,112 tons valued at $1,900,000 and in 1944, 47,801 tons valued at $1,100,000.

COMMUNICATIONS

Railways.—There were 705 miles of railway open in 1943 and 56 miles of private line. The trans-insular line runs to Port-aux-Basques, via Exploits River and Bay of Islands, with branch connexions to Placentia, Bonavista and all the principal settlements in Conception Bay, and to Lewisporte (in Notre Dame Bay). Communication between various points on the coast and Sydney, C.B., is maintained by a fleet of 20 first-class steamers.

Posts and Telegrams.—There were 517 post offices in 1944 (170 of which were also telegraph offices), dealing with 14,200,000 letters and postcards, 9,100,000 newspapers and books, and 540,200 parcels. Combined postal and telegraph revenue totalled $1,641,317 in 1944-45.

Shipping.—On Dec. 31, 1943, the Merchant Navy of Newfoundland consisted of 1,578 sailing vessels of 65,083 tons, 63 steam vessels of 23,500 tons, and 745 motor vessels of 28,600 tons. In 1943-44 the tonnage of vessels entered and cleared at Newfoundland ports was 2,415,000 tons, of which 1,488,000 tons were British.

TOWNS

The CAPITAL, Ψ ST. JOHN'S (population 1943, with suburbs, 82,543), contains two cathedrals, several banks, and numerous public buildings. Other towns are Corner Brook (8,000), Grand Falls (4,244), Ψ Harbour Grace (2,215), Ψ Bonavista (4,022), Carbonear (3,367), and Twillingate (3,203).

TRADE COMMISSIONER

Trade Commissioner in London, D. James Davies, C.B.E., F.I.C., F.G.S., F.C.S. Office, 58, Victoria Street, S.W.1.

LABRADOR

Labrador, a dependency of Newfoundland, forms the most easterly part of the North American continent, and extends from Blanc Sablon, in the Straits of Belle Isle, on the south, to Cape Chidley, at the entrance to Hudson's Straits on the north. The territory under the jurisdiction of Newfoundland has an area estimated at 120,000 square miles. Labrador possesses valuable cod, herring, trout, and salmon fisheries and a large stand of merchantable timber. Deposits of iron ore have been found. One of the grandest spectacles in the world is provided by the Grand Falls on the Hamilton River. The inhabitants are mainly Eskimos, engaged in fishing and hunting. CAPITAL, Ψ Battle Harbour (pop. 250); Ψ Rigolet is also a small seaport.

Facilities for the establishment of a protective outpost were granted to the United States Government in 1921.

Australia was separated from the other great land surfaces at a remote period, and exhibits therefore some very archaic types of fauna and flora. It may be regarded as the largest island or the smallest continent, being surrounded by the following waters:—North, the Timor and Arafura Seas and Torres Strait; East, Pacific Ocean; South, Bass Strait (which separates Tasmania from the Continent) and Southern Ocean; and West, Indian Ocean. The total area of the Continent is 2,948,366 English square miles, the island of Tasmania having an area of 26,215 square miles, and making a total area for the States and Territories of 2,974,581 square miles. The coast-line of Australia is approximately 12,210 miles, and the geographical position of the Continent is between $10^{\circ} 41' - 39^{\circ} 8'$ South latitude and $113^{\circ} 9' - 153^{\circ} 39'$ East longitude; the greatest length East to West is 2,400 miles, and from North to South 1,971 miles. Its nearest distance from England is about 11,000 miles.

From a physical standpoint the continent of Australia is divisible into an eastern and a western area, the former containing a regular coast-line with a good harbourage, roadsteads, rivers, and inland waterways, and a greater development of fauna and flora; the latter a broken coast-line with estuaries rather than rivers, and but little inland water communication. The whole continent is, roughly speaking, a vast, irregular, and undulating plateau, part of which is below the level of the sea, surrounded by a mountainous coast-line, with frequent intervals of low and sandy shore on the north, west and south. The Great Barrier Reef extends parallel with the East coast of Queensland for 1,200 miles, at a distance of about 60 miles from the mainland. A large part of the interior, particularly in the west, consists of sandy and stony desert, covered with spinifex, and containing numerous salt-marshes, though reaches of grass-land occur here and there. The geological formation of Australia is remarkable for its simplicity and regularity; the strike of the rocks is, with a single exception, coincident with the direction of the mountain-chains, from N. to S.; and the tertiary formation to be found in the N., S., and W. develops in the S.E. into a gigantic tertiary plain, watered by the Darling and the Murray Rivers. Nearly all round the coast, however, and in eastern and south-eastern Australia, stretching far inland from the coastal range, is a fertile area devoted partly to agriculture, partly to dairying, while the inland districts particularly are admirably adapted to the rearing of sheep. The most extensive mountain system takes its rise near the S.E. point, and includes a number of ranges known by different names in different places, none of them being of any great height. The highest peak, Mount Kosciuszko, in New South Wales, reaches an elevation of 7,328 feet. The principal rivers are the Murray, which debouches on the south coast, after receiving the waters of its tributaries the Murrumbidgee, Lachlan, and Darling, in the S.E. part of the continent; on the east coast, the Hawkesbury, Hunter, Clarence, Richmond, Brisbane, Mary, Burnett, Fitzroy, and Burdekin; on the west, the Swan, Murchison, Gascoyne, Ashburton, Fortescue, De Grey, and Fitzroy; on the north, the Drysdale, Ord, Victoria, and Daly; and the Roper, the Flinders, and Mitchell, which debouch into the Gulf of Carpentaria. Lakes are numerous, but nearly all are salt; the scarcity of the natural water supply has been, however, mitigated by successful borings and by the construction of large dams. The work of conserving the vast quantities of water which run to waste in the wet season is being vigorously prosecuted by a system of locks and weirs on some of the rivers. Minerals comprise gold, silver, copper, zinc, iron, and coal in large quantities, antimony, tin, gypsum, magnesite, osmiridium, opal, sapphires, &c., and there are abundant supplies of building stones, clays, &c. The potentialities of the country in regard to its supplies of metals and minerals have not yet been fully tested.

Climate.—The seasons commence about March 21 (Autumn), June 21 (Winter), Sept. 22 (Spring), and Dec. 22 (Summer). The climate is extremely dry, but, except in the tropical coast-land of the north, the continent is everywhere highly beneficial to Europeans, the range of temperature being smaller than

GOVERNMENT.

The Commonwealth of Australia was constituted by an Act of the Imperial Parliament dated July 9, 1900, and was inaugurated Jan. 1, 1901. The Government is that of a Federal Commonwealth within the British Empire, the executive power being vested in the Sovereign (through the Governor-General), assisted by a Federal Ministry of nineteen Ministers of State. Under the Constitution the Federal Government has acquired and may acquire certain defined powers as surrendered by the States, residuary legislative power remaining with the States. Trade and customs passed under Federal control immediately on the establishment of the Commonwealth; posts, telegraphs and telephones, naval and military defence, light-houses and quarantine on proclaimed dates. The Commonwealth also controls such matters as old-age pensions, patents and copyrights, naturalization, navigation, &c. The right of a State to legislate is not abrogated except in connexion with matters exclusively under Commonwealth control, but where a State law is inconsistent with a law of the Commonwealth the latter prevails to the extent of the inconsistency.

THE LEGISLATURE

The Federal Parliament consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate contains 36 members, six from each of the Original States, elected for six years by universal suffrage. The first woman Senator (Miss Dorothy Tangney) was returned in 1943. The House of Representatives, similarly elected for a maximum of three years, contains members proportionate to the population, with a minimum of 5 Representatives for each State. The House of Representatives, 1942, numbered 74. The first woman Member of the House of Representatives (Dame Enid Lyons, G.B.E.) was returned in 1943. Members of both Houses receive £1,000 per annum, with free railway passes.

DEFENCE.

Up to Sept. 30, 1944, more than 904,000 men had been sworn in to the three Fighting Services, two in every three of the male population between 18 and 40. Of this total nearly 75 per cent. had volunteered to fight anywhere in the world with A.I.F., R.A.A.F., and R.A.N. In addition, 62,000 women were enlisted in the Women's Services. Out of the total population of 5,000,000 men and women between 14 and 65 nearly 70 per cent. were in the Fighting Forces or engaged in war industries. 16 awards of the Victoria Cross (out of a total of 167) have been made to Australians.

Navy

The Australian Fleet consists of the cruisers Australia, Shropshire and Hobart, together with 3 Landing Ships (Infantry), 11 destroyers, 6 frigates, 2 sloops, 53 corvettes, 63 Fairmiles and 167 auxiliary vessels. The personnel of the fleet is mainly Australian in character. Its total numerical strength on July 31, 1945, was 36,176 men and 2,682 women including Nurses.

Army

The rapid expansion since Sept., 1939, of the land forces enabled Australia to send to the Middle East and to Great Britain several contingents of trained troops, and the A.I.F. (Australian Imperial Force) has figured largely in the fighting in Africa and the Middle East and in the Pacific Islands.

Air

At the conclusion of hostilities in 1945 the R.A.A.F. in the South-West Pacific area consisted of 50 squadrons and ancillary units. In addition, two permanent squadrons and 15 Empire Air Training Scheme squadrons were serving overseas, as well as E.A.T.S. aircrew in R.A.F. units. The total strength of the R.A.A.F. was 170,000 (including W.A.A.A.F.).

Commonwealth War Expenditure in the year ended June 30, 1945, was £A.459,996,000 as compared with £A.544,416,000 for the financial year 1943/44. Revenue provided £A.193,956,000, the balance coming from loans raised in Australia and Treasury balances.

For the six years ended June 30, 1945, the cost of the war to Australia amounted to £A.2,111,000,000, of which 34 per cent. was provided from taxation.

Australian casualties in the War, to May 31, 1945:—

The above particulars do not include the Interest payable on loans to the States, which amount is recoverable from the States concerned. Expenditure from loan fund is included under "Expenditure."

DEBT.

The total of the Public Debt for Commonwealth Purposes on June 30, 1944, was £A1,476,098,000. Adding the indebtedness of the States, viz. £A890,760,000, the "face" or "book" value of the public debts of Australia amounted (June 30, 1944), to £2,366,858,000.

The Debt per head of population at June 30, 1944, was £324, the annual interest payable amounting to £9 12s. per head.

Mines and Minerals.—In 1944 656,866 fine oz. of gold were produced valued at £A6,901,370. Other minerals (1943) were silver and lead, £A335,382; copper, £A104,574; tin, £A38,795; coal, £A2,679,792; value of all minerals produced in 1943, £A3,740,866. The production of lead and zinc is the largest, after that of U.S.A. and the output of copper and tin has been greatly increased since the outbreak of present war.

Manufactures.—In 1943-44 there were in Australia 27,674 industrial establishments, employing 766,498 hands; wages paid amounted to £A216,873,819; value of plant and machinery, £A181,064,000; land and buildings £A177,146,605; of materials used, £A498,924,854; value added by manufacture, £A366,235,487; and total value of final output, £A891,739,216.

The Trans-Australian (Government) Railway, 4 ft. 8½ ins. gauge, connects Kalgoorlie, W.A. with Port Augusta, S.A. (1,051 miles) and so forms a link (including Kalgoorlie-Fremantle 387 miles) between Fremantle and Brisbane, Q., a total length of 3,372 miles.

The gross earnings of all Government lines in 1943-44 were £82,309,393, working expenses £66,577,779, and net earnings £15,731,614, the cost of construction and equipment being £325,038,638. In 1943-44 passenger journeys numbered 532,639,716, and 41,965,716 tons of goods and live stock were carried. Sydney and Melbourne suburban systems are electrified.

Tramways.—There are 565 miles of tramways in Australia, all of which are of electric traction. Extensive conversions to electrical traction have been made and more are in progress. The several Governments control 392 miles; municipal authorities, 164 miles; and the remaining 9 miles are operated by private companies and individuals.

Shipping.—The entrances and clearances of vessels engaged in overseas trade at the various Australian ports in 1943-44 were: entered 1,094; (4,483,528 tons); cleared, 1,286 (5,203,251 tons). Of the vessels entered, 541 of 1,945,647 tons were under the British flag and 553 of 2,537,881 tons under foreign flags.

The total including local shipping entering the ports of the capital cities during 1943-44 was: Sydney 3,695 vessels of 5,953,187 tons, Melbourne 1,649 (3,279,105), Brisbane 1,495 (3,936,306), Adelaide 2,475 (1,634,543), Fremantle 762 (3,153,332), and Hobart 454 (1,121,384). At December 31, 1943, there were 1,994 vessels of a total net tonnage of 334,570 on the shipping registers of the several States.

The corvette Punjab (the first naval vessel built in Australia for the Royal Indian Navy) was launched in October, 1941, at Sydney dockyard.

Posts and Telegraphs.—In year ended June 30, 1944, there were 8,177 post offices dealing with 907,767,900 postal packets, 170,043,900 newspapers, and 18,945,000 parcels. 33,357,117 telegrams were despatched and 2,462,194 cablegrams received and despatched, while 38,442,486 words were transmitted and received overseas via beam wireless. At June 30, 1944, there were 6,350 telephone exchanges, with 557,072 lines and 799,729 instruments.

Motor Vehicles.—At June 30, 1944, there were 820,220 motor vehicles registered in the several States. These comprised 493,391 cars, 52,560 motor cycles, and 274,269 commercial vehicles; revenue derived from motor registration fees and motor tax, &c., in 1943-44 was £5,957,628. Motor omnibus services are extensively operating in urban areas.

Civil Aviation.—At June 30, 1944, there were 206 licensed public aerodromes and 353 recognized landing grounds in the various States and Territories. The regular mileage flown weekly in 1943-44 in contract and other regular air services was 186,615 miles.

CAPITAL.—CANNBERRA, the Capital of the Commonwealth, is 202 miles by rail from Sydney, N.S.W., and was acquired in 1911 from the State of N.S.W. for the Australian Capital. The original area was 911 sq. miles, increased in 1917 by the acquisition of 28 sq. miles at Jervis Bay for a Naval College. The total net expenditure on the Australian Capital Territory is over £13,000,000. Canberra contains the Australian (1914-18 and Present) War Memorial, Parliament House, Commonwealth Offices and the nucleus of a University, and is connected with the N.S.W. railway system by a line (4½ miles) to Queanbeyan and by good roads to Melbourne and Sydney. At June 30, 1944, the population of the Australian Capital Territory was estimated at 14,445.

THE NORTHERN TERRITORY

The Northern Territory has a total area of 523,620 square miles, and lies between 12°-138° East longitude as far as 26° South latitude. The administration was taken over by the Commonwealth on January 1, 1911, from the government of the State of South Australia. The headquarters of the Administrator are at Darwin.

At the census of 1933 the population of the Northern Territory was—males 3,376, females 1,434, total 4,860 (Rural 3,219, Urban 1,566, Migratory 75); the population as at Dec. 31, 1943, was 10,837 (exclusive of full blooded aboriginals). Most tropical products can be grown, and the potentialities for pig raising and bacon curing are excellent. The staple industry is pastoral; cattle raising north of 20° S. lat. and cattle, horse, and sheep raising south of 20° S. lat. Until railways are constructed, however, little, if any, improvement is expected in the pastoral industry in that part north of 20° S. lat., owing to the distance between the eastern and southern Australian markets. The position south of 20° S. lat. is more hopeful, as a result of the extension of the railway from the Adelaide (South Australia) market to Alice Springs. The whole of the Territory is capable, under proper conditions, of carrying successfully and profitably a great expansion of the beef cattle industry.

The chief rivers of the Territory are Victoria, Adelaide, Daly, Roper, South Alligator, McArthur, Liverpool, and the Goyder. The first six are navigable, from 40 to 100 miles from their entrance, for boats drawing 4 feet. Pearl fishing is carried on round the coast, the shell being of good quality. There are considerable mineral resources; mineral production is increasing, particularly in regard to gold, tin concentrates and mica, the latter of the finest quality. The increased price of gold has stimulated the search for that metal and has resulted in the discovery of two previously unknown goldfields in Central Australia. Other minerals being produced are wolfram and tantalite. The railway extends from Darwin to Birdum (315 miles), and Alice Springs is now connected by rail with Adelaide.

ψ Darwin occupies an elevated site 97 feet above sea level, overlooking Port Darwin. Alice Springs is situated in the MacDonnell Ranges, and possesses a splendid climate.

PAPUA

(Part of Papua was in hostile Japanese occupation from July 22, 1942—Jan. 24, 1943.)

The Territory of Papua, which was placed under the authority of the Commonwealth of Australia in 1906, comprises a part of the New Guinea mainland situated between the meridians of 141° and 150° 50' E. longitude, and between the 5th and 12th parallels of South latitude; also the Trobriand Group of islands, Woodlark, the d'Entrecasteaux Group, the Louisiades, the Conflict Group and the Laughlin Group. The total area of Papua is 90,540 sq. miles, of which 87,786 are on the mainland. There is an Executive Council of nine members, 8 of whom, with five non-official members, form the Legislative Council. The white population (June 30, 1941) was 3,070. The official estimate of the native population is 337,000. On Dec. 31, 1940, 63,609 acres were under crops (44,583 coco-nuts, 28,262 rubber, 85 kapok, 595 various cultures and 84 coffee). Owing to heavy rainfall Papua is well watered in most parts and possesses a large number of streams. The best-known rivers are the Fly (650 miles long and navigable by steam launch for over 500 miles), the Strickland and the Purari. Lake Kutubu, 12 miles long and 2 miles wide, was explored in 1937. The climate is favourable to the cultivation of tropical products.

A telephone line connecting Port Moresby with the north coast of Papua was laid over the Owen Stanley range in 22 days (June, 1943) by Australian and U.S. signallers. Later in the same year it was relaid with cable designed to withstand falling trees and other accidents. The line will take three conversations and twelve teleprinter messages simultaneously.

The original line was built with the aid of 250 native porters who carried the cable, weighing 110 lb. to the mile, over a precipitous mountain trail close to the route taken by Australian forces when they drove the Japanese before them over the Range.

CAPITAL, ψ Port Moresby. Pop. (1937) 3,000. Other centres are ψ Samarai, ψ Kukumadai and ψ Daru.

Port Moresby is distant from Sydney, N.S.W., 1,800 miles; transit, by sea, from Sydney 5 to 6 days; by air, 29-30 hours.

TERRITORY OF NEW GUINEA

The German possessions on the mainland of New Guinea and certain adjacent islands were occupied by Australian forces on Sept. 12, 1914, and on Dec. 17, 1920, a mandate of the Supreme Council of the Allies entrusted the administration to the Australian Government which established its administration in the mandated area on May 9, 1921.

The mandated territory includes (1) North-Eastern New Guinea, the northern section of east New Guinea between 2° 35'–8° S. lat., and 141°–148° E. long., with a total area of 69,700 sq. miles. This includes adjacent islands (Manam, Karkar, Long, Bagabag, Schouten, and D'Urville or Kairiru Island). The chief centres are Lae, Salamaua, Wau, Madang, and Wewak. (2) Bismarck Archipelago (19,200 sq. miles), including New Britain, New Ireland, and islands adjacent to both (Duke of York, Viav, Umboi, Siasi, Watom, Lolobatu, Sakar, dependencies of New Britain; and Lavongai, Tabar, Lihir, Djaul, Tanga, Feni, Nuguria, Mussau and Emirau, dependencies of New Ireland), and (3) Admiralty Islands (chief town, Lorengau, in Manus Island); and (4) the two northernmost Solomon Islands (4,100 sq. miles) (Bougainville and Buka with adjacent islands, including Nissan, Kilinailau, Taku or Morilock, and Nukumanu or Tasman islands). The total estimated area is thus 93,000 square miles. The estimated non-indigenous population, as at June 30, 1941, was 6,329 (Asiatic population 2,228). The native population was enumerated (June 30, 1941) at 684,284 including 34,087 working under indenture. The territory thus has a population exceeding 690,000.

Natives living in areas not under complete Government influence are not included in the total of 684,284, as no reliable estimate can be made.

The principal river in N.E. New Guinea is the Sepik, which is navigable for 250 miles.

The climate is hot and moist along the coast, with a steady drop as the higher altitudes are reached. It is suitable to the growth of all tropical products. In 1939-40 there were 110,546 hectares under crops (coco-nuts, 108,889); coffee, cocoa and kapok are also grown and tropical fruits are abundant, yams, sago and bananas being the staple articles of food for the natives. There are indications of mineral wealth, but difficulties of transport have prevented developments. Gold mining is carried on extensively in the Morobe District and to a lesser degree in other parts of the Territory.

ΨRabaul, the former seat of Administration, in the island of New Britain, was damaged by volcanic eruptions ("Mother and Daughter") May 29, 1937; ΨSimpson Harbour is one of the many seaports in the island. Lac, on the mainland, was the seat of administration until evacuated after Japanese attacks in Jan. 1942. On September 18, 1943, Lac was re-occupied by Australian forces. The chief town of the Bismarck Archipelago is Kavieng in New Ireland, ΨNusa being the principal harbour; of the Solomon Islands included in the Mandate ΨKietia, on the E. coast of Bougainville, which island has also ports of entry at ΨRawa and ΨTinputz. Buka has a harbour at ΨCarola Hafen. Kietia was occupied by Japanese troops Jan. 23, 1942. U.S. troops have since established themselves in the Solomon Islands.

Civil Administration in the Territory of New Guinea was suspended on Feb. 11, 1942, and military control commenced pursuant to the National Security (Emergency Control) Regulations. The Papua-New Guinea Provisional Administration Act, 1945, provides for the restoration of civil administration in such portions of the Territory of New Guinea as from time to time cease to be areas to which the aforesaid Regulations apply. In the first instance Civil Administration was restored in that portion of the Territory that lies south of the Markham River.

NORFOLK ISLAND

This island is about 930 miles from Sydney and 400 miles from New Zealand. It is about five miles in length by three in breadth, and was discovered by Capt. Cook in 1774. Its area is 8,528 acres and circumference 20 miles. The climate is mild, with a mean temperature of 68° and an annual rainfall of 53 inches. The descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty were brought here from Pitcairn Island in 1856. The population on June 30, 1944, was 733. Chief town, Kingston.

Administrator, Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Rosenthal,

K.C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D.

Official Sec., J. McWhinney.

President Advisory Council, G. H. N. Buffett.

NAURU ISLAND

(Occupied by Japanese Aug., 1942, to Sept., 1945.)

This island, situated in 166 degrees East Longitude and 26 miles south of the Equator, was discovered by Capt. Fearn, R.N., in 1798, and was annexed by Germany in 1888. It surrendered to H.M.A.S. Melbourne in November, 1914, and is now administered by Britain, Australia and New Zealand. The island has an area of approximately 8 square miles, with a population (Dec. 31, 1941) of 2,672, of whom 68 were Europeans. The Administrator has all the powers of government, administrative, legislative and judicial. The expenses of the administration are met from local revenue. There are valuable deposits of phosphates on the island, these having been purchased from the Pacific Phosphate Company in 1919 by the Governments of Gt. Britain, Australia and New Zealand for £3,500,000 (exports 1940, 808,400 tons). The revenue in 1941 was £12,023, expenditure £23,951. Imports (1941) £106,978, Exports £69,375.

Administrator, Lt.-Col. F. R. Chalmers, C.M.G., D.S.O. (Appointed by Australia, Oct. 1, 1938).

ANTARCTICA

The area of the Antarctic Continent is estimated at approximately 5 million square miles. The greater part of the coastline has been charted with varying degrees of accuracy, but considerable portions of the interior have not been visited, or at best have been seen only from the air.

The question of territorial rights is complicated and there is no general international agreement thereon.

The Australian Antarctic Territory was established by an Order in Council, dated February 7, 1933, which placed under the government of the Commonwealth of Australia that part of the territory in the Antarctic Seas which comprises all the islands and territories, other than Adélie Land, situated south of the 60th parallel of south latitude and lying between the 160th and 45th meridians of east longitude.

The exception of Adélie Land from the Order in Council is due to French claims based on rights of discovery.

The area administered by the Commonwealth of Australia is estimated at 2,472,000 square miles. It adjoins that belonging to New Zealand.

Other British dependencies in the Antarctic are:—

(1) The Ross Dependency, placed under the jurisdiction of New Zealand by Order in Council dated July 30, 1923, and defined as all the islands and territories between the 160th meridian of east longitude and the 150th meridian of west longitude which are situated south of the 60th parallel of south latitude. The Ross Dependency includes Edward VII Land and portions of Victoria Land. There are no permanent inhabitants of the territory, but whaling is carried on extensively.

(2) The Falkland Islands Dependencies (see also p. 815) include all islands and territories between 20° W. longitude and 50° W. longitude situated south of 50° S. latitude; and all islands and territories between 50° W. longitude and 80° W. longitude situated south of 58° S. latitude.

The Dependencies fall naturally into three groups:

- (a) South Georgia, with South Orkney and South Sandwich Islands.
- (b) South Shetland Island and Graham Land.
- (c) Coats Land and territory adjacent to the South Pole.

South Georgia is permanently inhabited and is an important seat of the whaling industry. So far as is known the total areas of these Dependencies have not been officially estimated.

States of the Commonwealth of Australia.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

The State of New South Wales is situated almost entirely between the 29th and 36th parallels of S. lat. and 141st and 154th meridians of E. long., and comprises an area of 309,433 square miles (exclusive of 939 square miles of Federal Territory which lies within its borders)—i.e., more than five times that of England and Wales, and over three times the size of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

POPULATION.—The population at December 31, 1944 was: Males, 1,443,652; Females, 1,447,942. Total, 2,895,594.

Births, Deaths, and Marriages.

Year.	Births.	Deaths.	Marriages.
1939	48,003	26,815	25,471
1942	52,647	20,219	34,533
1943	57,265	28,870	26,302
1944	59,613	26,652	26,426

Vital Statistics.—Annual rate per 1,000 of population in 1944:—Births, 20.76; Deaths, 9.28; Marriages, 9.20. Deaths under 1-year per 1,000 births, 30.7.

Religions.

The members of the Church of England in New South Wales, according to the Census of 1933, number 1,143,493; Roman Catholic 556,106, Presbyterian 257,522, Methodist 203,042, Congregational (Independent) 20,274, Baptist 29,981, Salvation Army 9,610, and Hebrew 10,305. The religion of 297,034 persons was not stated in the census schedules.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The Eastern or coastal district is traversed by the Great Dividing Range, which runs from north to south and divides it from the inland plains. The highest points are Mount Kosciusko, 7,328 feet, and Townsend, 7,266 feet. The coastal district is well watered by numerous rivers flowing from the ranges into fertile flats which form their lower basins. The western portion of the country is watered by the rivers of the Murray Darling system and immense reservoirs have been constructed for irrigation purposes, and there are many artesian bores. The Darling, 1,702 miles, and the Murrumbidgee, 981 miles, are both tributaries of the Murray, which has a total length of 1,609 miles, 1,203 miles forming part of the boundary between the States of New South Wales and Victoria. Other inland rivers are: Lachlan, Bogan, Macquarie, Castlereagh, Namoi and Gwydir.

Climate.—New South Wales is situated entirely in the Temperate Zone. The climate is equable and very healthy. At the capital (Sydney) the average mean shade temperature is 63°. The mean temperature in the shade for the north coast is 66° to 69°, south coast 60° to 63°, northern tableland 56° to 60°, southern tableland 44° to 58°; north-western slopes, the mean annual temperature ranges from 62° to 63°; in the Central-western slopes 57° to 64°, south-western slopes 60° to 62°, and in the Western Plains and Riverina Division from 61° to 69°.

GOVERNMENT.

New South Wales was first colonised as a British possession in 1788, and after progressive settlement a partly elective legislature was established in 1843. In 1855 "Responsible Government" was granted the present Constitution being founded on the Constitution Act of 1902. New South Wales federated with the other States of Australia in 1901. The executive authority of the State is vested in a Governor (appointed by the King), assisted by a Council of Ministers.

GOVERNOR.

Governor of New South Wales, Captain the Lord Wakehurst, K.C.M.G., assumed office April 8, 1937; term extended to Jan. 8, 1946 . . . £5,000 Official Secretary, L. A. Robb, C.M.G.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of two Houses, the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Council consists of 60 members, elected jointly by both houses of Parliament. Member—ship is for 12 years, 15 members retiring in rotation triennially. Members are not entitled to remuneration, but travel free on the State railways and tramways. The Legislative Assembly consists of 90 members. Each member of the Legislative Assembly receives £875 per annum; members travel free over the Government railways and tramways in the State, and are provided with an official postage stamp allowance of £30 p.a. The Women's Legal Status Act, 1918, removed disqualification regarding the election of women to be members of the Legislative Assembly. Natural-born or naturalised persons 21 years of age, who have resided 6 months in the Commonwealth, 3 months in the State and 1 month in the electoral district, are entitled to the franchise. Voting is compulsory. At the State General Elections in May, 1944, there were 833,300 men and 899,406 women electors, making a total of 1,732,706 enrolled; in contested electorates 1,310,272 voted.

EDUCATION.

Education.—Education is compulsory between the ages of 6 and 15 years. It is non-sectarian and free at all State schools. The total enrolment in December Term, 1943, in 2,781 State schools was 355,754, and the average daily attendance during the year was 285,873. In addition to the State schools there were in 1944, 722 private colleges and schools, with 122,755 scholars, 562 being Roman Catholic schools with 3,805 teachers and 93,473 scholars; there were also many business and shorthand schools, and schools at private Charitable Institutions. The University of Sydney, with which 6 colleges are affiliated, including two Women's Colleges, was incorporated in 1850, and had 3,248 students (2,032 male and 1,216 female) in 1943. The State expenditure on Education (excluding Technical) was £5,374,576 in the year 1943. The individual students at State Technical classes numbered 34,940, in 1943. Students attending the State Agricultural College and Farm Schools numbered 881.

The Public Debt of New South Wales at June 30, 1944, was £351,971,024, of which an amount of £153,413,776 was repayable in London (interest £5,749,196), £11,669,064 was repayable in New York (interest £563,990) and £186,888,244 was held in Australia, with an annual interest bill of £6,095,633.

Banking, &c.—There were (June 30, 1944) 14 trading banks. The savings bank deposits on June 30, 1944, amounted to £162,867,300, representing £56 5s. per head of the population. The amount assured in New South Wales in Life Assurance Societies in 1939 was £169,522,000 Ordinary, and £42,105,000 Industrial. The membership of Friendly Societies was 212,136, and the funds at June 30, 1938, were £4,876,924. Members of Trade Unions at Dec. 31, 1938, numbered 341,981, the funds of 206 Unions being £540,439.

Co-operative Societies.—There were 704 registered societies in existence at June 30, 1944. During the year ending June 30, 1940, the sales of 129 rural societies amounted to £128,371,770, and the turnover of 43 trading societies amounted to £2,832,160. Starr Bowkett and Permanent Building Societies advanced £645,378 to members. There has been a rapid growth of building societies of another type which secure loans for members as they require them to build or purchase a home. The member takes up a certain number of shares and pays subscription at a certain rate until he obtains an advance. Then the rate of his contributions is increased. When all shares have been advanced and external obligations met the society is wound up. The number of these societies on the register was 10 in June, 1936; at September 30, 1940, there were 170 in active operation with funds available for members. The membership of these was 20,672, and loans amounting to £10,688,125 had been advanced.

Shipping.—Excluding coastal trade, 1,783 vessels entered ports of N.S.W. during the year ended June 30, 1944, the net tonnage being 4,662,457. The shipping entries at Sydney, including coastal, were 3,695 vessels of 5,953,187 net tonnage. The dock accommodation at Sydney includes five large graving docks, five floating docks, and seven patent slips. At Newcastle there are a floating dock and four patent slips.

Motor Vehicles.—At June 30, 1945, there were 298,312 registered motor vehicles, including 18,068 motor cycles and 82,957 vans and lorries, and 10,811 trailers and tractors.

Railways.—The railways and tramways of New South Wales, with the exception of a few short lines, representing about 121 miles, are controlled by the State. At June 30, 1944, the mileage of the State railways open for traffic was 6,128, net earnings in the year 1943-44 being £3,945,848.

Aviation.—Flying in Australia is subject to control of Commonwealth Government, which has surveyed routes and established landing places and afforded assistance to private organisations for the encouragement of civil aviation. In New South Wales at June 30, 1944, there were 68 registered aircraft and 166 licensed pilots. Air-mail services are maintained between the Australian capital cities, and New Zealand and other overseas countries.

Roads and Bridges.—The Main Roads Administration is controlled by a Commissioner in a department of the Ministry of Transport. The department co-operates with local governing bodies in the construction and maintenance of the main avenues of traffic throughout the State. There are 126,069 miles of roads and streets in New South Wales. The total expenditure by the State Government and the Main Roads Department on roads, bridges, &c., other than on Sydney Harbour Bridge, in 1938-39 was £6,276,676 (including loan money). The construction of an arch bridge over Sydney Harbour was completed and the bridge opened for traffic in March, 1932. This bridge carries a roadway 57 ft. wide, two footways each 10 ft. wide, and four lines of railway, of which two are being used as tramways. At mean high water there is a headway of 172½ ft. The total cost of the bridge (at June 30, 1944) was £9,761,878. Tolls are charged in respect of traffic (except pedestrian) across the bridge.

Posts, Telegraphs and Telephones.—The postal, telegraphic, telephonic and radio services are administered by the Commonwealth Government. At June 30, 1943, there were 2,503 post offices in New South Wales. The postal matter carried during 1942-43 included 338,867,000 letters and registered articles and 72,013,000 newspapers and parcels posted for delivery in Australia. The overseas mails consisted of 8,235,000 letters and 3,063,000 newspapers and parcels despatched, 7,178,000 letters and 8,235,000 newspapers and parcels received. During the year 9,968,000 telegrams were despatched to places within Australia, and 553,000 cablegrams were despatched, and 614,000 received. The telephone line connections numbered 205,668. In June, 1944, there were 8 National Broadcasting Stations in New South Wales and 34 stations operating under licence. The number of broadcast listeners' licences was 560,000.

The chief exports are wool, butter, wheat, flour, fruits, timber, meat, hides and skins, tallow, leather and minerals.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Agriculture is one of the principal industries of New South Wales; 5,045,000 acres were under cultivation during the year ended March 31, 1945.

The total area under wheat was 3,174,258 acres, of which 2,844,804 acres were harvested for grain, and 279,120 acres for hay. The production of wheat was 17,133,870 bushels of grain and 182,760 tons of hay. Other important crops in 1944-45 were 2,437,317 bushels of maize, 1,755,674 bushels of oats, 1,177,333 bushels of rice, besides other kinds of grain, 80,587 tons of potatoes, and 3,107 cwt. of dried leaf tobacco. Sugar-cane to the extent of 200,050 tons was crushed; while 950,795 cases of bananas were obtained; almost every kind of fruit and vegetable is grown. There were nearly 16,000 acres of vineyards, of which 15,130 acres were bearing.

Land Alienation.—The total extent of land alienated and in process of alienation from the Crown on June 30, 1944, was 68,316,964 acres, while the area of land held under lease, &c., from the Crown was 113,728,537 acres, and the balance, 15,991,619 acres, consisted of reserve and other lands neither alienated nor leased; the total area of the State, exclusive of the Australian Capital Territory, is 198,037,120 acres.

Live Stock.—The country is admirably adapted for sheep-farming, the principal breed of sheep being the celebrated merino, which was introduced in 1797. On Mar. 31, 1942, there were 436,443 horses, 3,144,701 cattle, 46,662,000 sheep and lambs, 523,917 pigs. In 1940-41, 537,410,000 lb. (stated as in the grease) of wool were produced, 92,356,898 lb. butter, 5,525,431 lb. cheese, and 31,164,255 lb. bacon and ham.

Values of Industries.—The estimated value of agricultural production in 1943-44 was £29,315,000 dairying and farm-yard produce, £23,346,000 pastoral production £44,136,000, forests, fishing and trapping £7,039,000, mines and quarries £15,776,000—total primary £119,612,000; manufacturing £162,726,010—total £282,338,010.

Forests.—The estimated forest area is 11,000,000 acres, of which State forests cover 5,260,000 acres and 1,350,000 have been set aside as timber reserves.

Mining Industry.—The goldfields were opened in 1851. The principal minerals are coal, copper, silver, lead, zinc, tin and iron. The total value of minerals won in each of the years 1939 to 1943 was £13,049,956, £13,673,524, £16,718,429, £18,147,818 and £18,406,385 respectively. These values are exclusive of Portland cement, £1,061,895 in 1943, lime £36,521, and coke, £2,400,993. The principal items in 1943 were coal £20,290,095, silver lead, zinc (metal concentrates and ore) £4,534,409, and gold £666,491, Australian currency. The value of the mining plant and machinery was £7,954,122. The mining industry gave employment to 21,764 miners during the year.

Factories.—In 1943-44 there were 10,755 factories. The average number of persons employed during the year was 323,032, the amount of £93,518,000 being paid in salaries and wages. The value of output of the factories was £399,138,000; materials used, £236,411,680; the production, i.e., value added to raw materials, was £162,726,000. Large iron and steel works with subsidiary factories are in operation at Newcastle and Port Kembla in proximity to the coalfields. The products include iron and steel of various grades, pipes, boilers, steel wire and wire netting, copper wire, copper and brass cables, and spun cast-iron pipes. The production (1943-44) of pig-iron was 1,192,803 tons, and of ingot steel 1,523,489 tons.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of Local Government, with the exception of an area of 125,400 sq. miles in the sparsely-populated western division the State is divided into 152 municipalities and 137 shires, governed by councils which are elected triennially. Municipalities and shires may combine to form county councils, of which there are 13, for the provision of special services of joint benefit, such as electricity and water. The councils are empowered to levy rates on the value of land, to float loans, to acquire land and works, to construct and maintain streets, jetties, wharfs, &c., to make regulations regarding cattle slaughtering, maintenance of public places, traffic, street and road lighting, public health and safety, management of parks, &c.

The basis of rating is mainly on the unimproved capital value of land, which in 1943 was £195,210,000 in municipalities, including the cities of Sydney and Newcastle, and £148,024,000 in shires.

The total revenue of the local governing bodies in 1939 was £17,637,427, including grants from the State Government £3,745,948. Expenditure chargeable to revenue was £16,881,967 and loan expenditure £3,271,663.

TOWNS.

SYDNEY, the chief city and capital, stands on the shores of Port Jackson, with a water frontage of 188 miles; the depth of water at the Heads is not less than 80 feet, and at the wharves up to 40 ft. There are extensive facilities for handling cargo, and for storing and loading grain in bulk or bags; also for replenishing coal and oil bunkers. For 20 miles Sydney Harbour extends inland, the finest harbour in the world, and is surrounded by scenery of surpassing beauty. The principal wharves are situated in close proximity to the business centre of the city. The total area of water in the port is 14,284 acres, or about 22 square miles, of which approximately one half has a depth of not less than 30 ft.; the rise and fall of the tide is from 3 to 6 ft. A fifth graving dock at Sydney, and one of the largest in the world, was opened March 23, 1945, by H.R.H. the Duke of Gloucester and was named "Cook" after the circumnavigator of the world. It is 1,777 ft. overall in length, 145 ft. wide and has a depth over the sill of 48 ft. at high water, the approximate cost was £A7,000,000. The city and suburbs contain approximately 246 square miles, with a population of 1,398,170 (Dec. 31, 1943). In addition to the Government buildings, there are the University and Colleges, National Art Gallery, museums, botanic gardens, zoological gardens, free public libraries, observatory, conservatorium of music, two cathedrals, numerous churches and some large public hospitals. The parks in or adjacent to the metropolitan area include the National Park which measures 34,392 acres, Kuring-gai Chase 35,373 acres, Kurnell 248 acres, Centennial Park 474 acres, and Parramatta Park 252 acres. Other towns are the Ψ City of Greater Newcastle, population 127,660; Broken Hill, 26,470; Lithgow, 21,390; Wollongong, 18,670; Goulburn, 15,600; Cessnock, 13,860; Lismore, 13,300; Wagga Wagga, 14,160; Maitland, E. & W., 12,350; Albury, 13,080; Bathurst, 12,040; Tamworth, 11,670; Grafton and South Grafton, 10,540; Orange, 12,190; Dubbo, 9,100; Katoomba, 9,190; Liverpool, 7,960; Armidale, 7,270; Parkes, 6,800; Casino, 5,800; and Inverell, 6,140.

The normal time in transmission of mails from London to Sydney by sea is approximately 32 days.

An air service for transportation of passengers and mails thrice weekly between England and Australia provides for a journey of 10 days.

DEPENDENCY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

LORD HOWE ISLAND (436 miles north-east of Sydney). Lat. 31° 33' 4" S., Long. 150° 4' 26" E. Area, 3,220 acres. Pop., Dec., 1943, 143. The island is of volcanic origin and Mount Gower reaches an altitude of 2,840 ft. The affairs of the Island and the control of the Kentia palm seed industry are vested in a Board of Control. Office, Chief Secretary's Department, Sydney.

QUEENSLAND.

This State, situated in lat. 10° 40'-29° S. and long. 138°-153° 30' E., comprises the whole north-eastern portion of the Australian continent.

Queensland possesses an area of 670,500 square miles (i.e., equal to more than 5½ times the area of the United Kingdom).

POPULATION.—At the Census of June 30, 1933, the population numbered 947,534 persons (497,217 males and 450,317 females). On Dec. 31, 1944, the estimated population was 1,071,767 (552,702 males, 519,065 females).

The total number of aborigines (June 30, 1941) was 8,977 full blood and 6,451 half-caste, exclusive of 3,675 Torres Strait Islanders.

Religion.

Since 1861 no State aid has been afforded to religion. At the Census of 1933 there were 331,972 Church of England, 185,889 Roman Catholics, 106,813 Presbyterians, 87,909 Methodists, 18,890 Lutherans, 14,991 Baptists, 8,669 Congregationalists, 56,539 other Christians, and 1,041 Hebrew.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The Great Dividing Range on the eastern coast of the continent produces a similar formation to that of New South Wales, the eastern side having a narrow slope to the coast and the western a long and gradual slope to the central plains, where the Kirby's Range divides the land into a northern and southern watershed. The Brisbane, Burnett, Fitzroy, and Burdekin rise in the eastern ranges and flow into the Pacific, the Flinders, Mitchell, and Leichhardt into the Gulf of Carpentaria, and the Barcoo and Warrego rise in the central range and flow southwards.

Climate.—At Brisbane the mean temperature for 1944 was 68° 7', the maximum and minimum shade temperatures being 101° 8' and 39° 1'; mean barometer, 30.04. The coastal regions are warm and moist, the plateaus dry, whilst in the very far west the rainfall is scanty. The rainfall in Brisbane during 1944 was 27.85 inches, and there were 100 wet days.

GOVERNMENT.

Queensland was constituted a separate colony with Responsible Government in 1859, having previously formed part of New South Wales. The executive authority is vested in a Governor (appointed by the Crown), aided by an Executive Council of 10 members.

GOVERNOR.

Governor of Queensland, His Excellency Col. The Rt. Hon. Sir Leslie Orme Wilson, G.C.S.I., G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E., D.S.O., first appointed June 13, 1932, for 5 years; term extended 1937, 1942, in Jan. 1944 (to June 13, 1945), and in Dec. 1944 to June 13, 1946. £3,000
